Long's Demand For Farley Quiz Meets Support

Two Democrats Join in Movement for Senate Investigation.

Vote on Inquiry Expected Today

Collusion on Federal Contracts Charged By Woman.

By the Associated Press.

Two Democrats joined Senator Long in the Senate yesterday in demanding an investigation of Postmaster General Farley, while Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, contended such an inquiry would be "futile" if it had no legislative purpose.

Late in the day the Senate deferred until today a vote on the resolution for an investigation.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, urged that the Postoffice Committee call Miss Helen Humphreys, former employe of James A. Stewart & Co., building contractors, who, in an affidavit read by Long, Louisiana Democrat, charged Farley with throwing Government business to the Stewart firm.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, also favored an investigation in view of Miss Humphreys' affidavit, saying "Democracy is in the balance here in a larger way than some of us think."

Borah's Argument.

Borah, arguing from a purely constitutional standpoint, said if the Senate found the Long charges true it could not remove the Cabinet officer and it would render the Senate incompetent to try a subsequent impeachment if that were voted by the House.

Long then modified his resolution to provide that the investigation be for the purpose of gathering information "as may be necessary for the consideration and enactment of legislation."

A new charge that Farley was a party to a "diabolical fraud" was thrown into the crowded, but largely unresponsive Senate by Long.

The Louisianan's one-hour speech before packed galleries drew a warm rejoinder from Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, that Long had not produced 'one iota of evidence that would be competent in any court other deliberative body." His charges, Bailey asserted, were based entirely on hearsay and rumor.

Woman's Affidavit.

A member of a postoffice committee majority that rendered an adverse report on the investigation resolution, Bailey spoke after Long had read an affidavit dated April 23 from Helen Humphreys, of St. Albans, Long Island. It asserted one Harry D. Watts had been given a three-year contract, at increased salary, with the James A. Stewart Co., building contractors, on the strength of Watts' claim to be able to obtain Government contracts through Farley.

During the afternoon, M. E. Kalette, vice president of the Stewart firm, expressed hope in a statement issued in New York that the Senate would "provide an opportunity to establish the malicious falsity" of Miss Humphreys' charges.

"Miss Humphreys was employed as a telephone operator by this company and was discharged for disloyalty about a month ago," said

Dies at Quantico

Harris & Ewing.

MAJ. GEN. HARRY LEE, U. S. M. C., commandant of the Marine post at Quantico, who died there yesterday.

Gen. Lee, 63, Dies; Quantico Marines Chief

Maj. Gen. Harry Lee, commandant of the Marine Base at Quantico, Va., died in the post hospital there last night after an illness of about ten days. He was 63 years old.

The general contracted a cold about ten days ago and had been confined to his quarters. Yesterday he was taken to the sick officers' quarters, where he died at 8:45 p. m. Death was apparently due to pneumonia.

In command of the Quantico post since March 1, 1933, Gen. Lee last December was considered for the post of commandant of the Marine Corps, the office later going to Gen. John H. Russell.

Born in Georgetown.

Gen. Lee was born in Georgetown in 1872. He entered the Marine Corps during the War with Spain, being appointed a second lieutenant for the duration of the war. He served at the naval station at Havana, Cuba, until 1899, when he was honorably discharged. A month later he entered the regular service with the rank of first lieutenant.

He served on various ships and shore stations until 1912, when, with the rank of major, he was ordered to Nicaragua. He participated in the bombardment, assault and capture of the fortifications of Coyotepe and Barranca. He also served in Haiti, Santo Domingo, and Cuba for short periods.

In August, 1917, Gen. Lee, then with the rank of lieutenant colonel, was ordered to the Marine Barracks at Quantico for duty with the Sixth Marines. He arrived in France in February, 1918, and was in the fighting around Chateau Thierry. The commanding officer of the regiment was wounded and Gen. Lee took the command.

Maj. Cohen, 65, Publisher, Dies

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Ga., May 13.—Maj. John S. Cohen, 65, president and editor of the Atlanta Journal, vice chairman of the Democratic national committee and former United States Senator, died here tonight after an extended illness.

Maj. Cohen had been in declining health several months and only last week returned from Rochester, Minn., where he went for treatment of an ulcerated stomach.

Hope was abandoned for his recovery and members of the family were summoned to his bedside following his return home.

A leader in the councils of the Democratic Party, Maj. Cohen cut short a prospective career in the Navy to distinguish himself as a journalist and in the political field.

During the Spanish-American War he served as an officer in the United States Army.

He was appointed to the United States Senate by Gov. Richard B. Russell, jr., in 1932 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator William J. Harris and remained in the Senate until Russell offered for the office and was elected nine months later.

That same year Maj. Cohen was made vice chairman of the Democratic committee.

Senate Sends Bonus Today To Roosevelt

Some of President's Aids Favor Veto Upset to Help '36 Election.

Patman Backers Meet, Devise Strategy in Drive to Override.

By Robert C. Albright.

Freed of parliamentary strings, the Patman bonus bill may be released by the Senate today. It will go to the White House, where the President awaits it with a certain veto.

Anticipating this, Senate leaders of the inflationary measure made a last-minute drive for a two-thirds Senate vote to override White House action. They held a downtown council of war last night to rehearse their strategy.

Although leaders confidently predicted the veto would be sustained, one possibility of an overriding vote appeared yesterday. It was learned some of the President's political advisers believe it would be good politics to permit passage of the measure over a veto.

Some who hold this view point out that immediate disposition of the bonus issue, through an overriding vote on a Patman veto, would remove a threatening issue from the 1936 campaign. Such action, they believe, could not hurt the President politically, but on the other hand might aid both himself and his party, winning business votes through his veto, and veterans' support by final passage.

Determined on Veto.

Despite the powerful strength of the veterans' lobby, and an influx of Patman mail from every section of the country, the President remained fixed in his determination to veto the measure, and Senate leaders said they were holding their lines.

"I am confident the Senate will sustain the President's veto," Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee said last night. "And I repeat that the Senate's passage of this bill means there will be no bonus legislation this session."

Leading the bonus-inflationist forces, Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, refused to concede defeat.

"If the Senate sustains a veto, we will have another Patman bill on the President's doorstep the next day," Thomas said. "We may offer the Patman bill as an amendment on every Administration measure, and that goes for NRA extension. It would be hard for the President to veto that."

Meanwhile, it was learned in authoritative Senate quarters that the President already has prepared the essence of his veto message. This, it was said, will be aimed particularly at the inflationist potentialites of the bill.

Political Move Denied.

Rumors that some Democratic politicians were advising the President to encourage passage of the bill over his veto spread through the Capitol yesterday, but drew quick denials from leaders.

One report was that both Vice President Garner and Postmaster General Farley believe the smart thing for the Democrats to do politically is to permit approval of the bill.

Questioned about the rumor, Senator Harrison disclaimed knowledge of it.

"Here is one man who is not so advising the President," he said. "And I can not believe that Jim Farley would suggest any such course.

Senator Harrison made no mention of Vice President Garner's reputed stand for passage of the bill. Garner has been widely reported as sharing views expressed by Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, that the sooner the bonus is disposed of as a political issue, the better for all concerned.

Frank expression of this opinion by Jones last week, together with testimony before a Senate committee by Gov. Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, minimizing inflation effects of the Patman bill, started a continuing chain of speculation. Statements of both

Woman Vice President Seen for Near Future

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 13.—American women, Miss Lillian D. Rock, lawyer, declared tonight, "are well on their way to the vice presidency and the presidency" of the Nation.

"It wouldn't surprise me," she said, "if President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who has elevated women to such high places in the affairs of our country, demanded a woman as a running mate in 1936.

"Certainly the Republicans, so badly in need of a new argument for a return to power, might see fit to name a woman for the vice presidency."

Fall at Bridge On Calvert St. Kills 1, Hurts 5

Crew Plummeted 50 Feet Into Tangle of Planks as Scaffold Slides.

Part of a hanging scaffold gave way at the new Calvert street bridge yesterday, plunging six men 50 feet into a tangle of splintering planks and concrete beams. One is dead and the other five are injured. A seventh worker saved himself by grabbing a support.

The dead man is James Beattie, 57, of 1000 Twenty-fourth street northwest, foreman of the crew. The injured are Neil Shumate and Charles Child, of 210 C street northwest; Harry Eastridge, of 1105 Ninth street northwest; Charles Laventure, of 941 H street northwest, and Reuben Workman, of 2028 Georgia avenue northwest. They all were laborers.

Shumate was taken to Garfield Hospital in a critical condition. He suffered a fracture of the back and several skull injuries. Workman, at Casualty Hospital, was said to be suffering back injuries. Condition of the others, at Garfield, was not announced. Beattie was dead when he was examined at Emergency Hospital.

First Bad Accident.

It was the first serious accident on the bridge job since it was begun almost a year ago by the John W. Cowper Co., which moved the old bridge 80 feet south, where it is now carrying traffic, before starting the new structure.

Cars from the Tenth and Third Police Precincts, the fire rescue squad and a headquarters car responded to the accident call. Police and firemen aided the bridge workers in carrying the injured from where they landed, under the east end of the structure.

According to officials of the Cowper company, the crew was working from a hanging scaffold, removing wooden forms from the concrete floor of the bridge above them. One of the planks of the support cracked, and officials said, tipping other boards of the scaffold off their support.

Hit Support.

The six men fell with the heavy scaffolding to about 50 feet below, where they crashed on the ground and against one of the larger lower concrete supports of the bridge. Extricating them from the wreckage was difficult, for the place was accessible only by ladder.

Beattie had been a worker for the company for 20 years, officials said. He leaves his wife and 25-year-old son. The construction company's liability is protected by workman's compensation insurance, it was said.

Woman Held In AutoDeath Ends Her Life

Public Librarian's Wife Was Victim of Her Machine.

Two hours after she was ordered held for the grand jury in a traffic casualty, Mrs. Mattie Estelle Rogers, 41, of 1707 Columbia road northwest, was found submerged in the bathtub of her apartment yesterday afternoon.

She died an hour later in Garfield Hospital after regaining consciousness for a brief period.

Maj. Wilbur Rogers, U. S. A., retired, the husband, said that she had committed suicide because of grief over the death of Mrs. Sarah Bowerman, wife of the public librarian, whom she had struck with her automobile April 30. It was for this that a coroner's jury, following an inquest yesterday, ordered Mrs. Rogers held for action of the grand jury.

Maj. Rogers turned over to police the following note left by his wife:

"Rog, darling:

"Mrs. Bowerman's death was enough to kill me, but the coroner's verdict makes it impossible for me to live.

"Good-bye, old dear. The key to the safety deposit box is in the brown folder in my desk. Love.

"MATTIE ESTELLE."

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, who presided at the inquest into Mrs. Bowerman's death, had hardly finished making out the usual papers when he was notified of the tragic epilogue. He withheld a verdict pending an autopsy.

Maj. Rogers' version of the tragedy as given to the police was as follows:

He and Mrs. Rogers returned from the Bowerman inquest to their apartment in Chatham Courts shortly before 5 o'clock. Pleading that she didn't feel like going out to eat, Mrs. Rogers suggested that he go out and buy groceries and she would prepare a meal. Meantime she would take a nap.

Finds Wife in Tub.

Upon Maj. Rogers' return to the apartment, he was unable to find his wife. Then, hearing the sound of running water, he went into the bathroom and found her in the tub, her head submerged. She had on her underclothes.

He lifted her from the tub and called Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Mayfield, who live in the apartment house. They worked over the unconscious woman and finally she regained consciousness.

Meantime Dr. Frank Leech arrived and ordered her taken to Garfield Hospital. On the way to the hospital she collapsed and at the hospital was pronounced dead.

Driver Hurt in Accident On Berryville Highway

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 13.—Francis C. Beavers, 30, of Bluemont, who is employed here as a pharmacist, is recovering from injuries received when his automobile went out of control on the Berryville pike early today and overturned three times.

Beavers, who was returning from a visit to his mother at Bluemont, was found dazed near the scene by Carroll Crisman, of Winchester, who took him to a hospital. Officers said they believed the crash was caused by a blow out. Beavers was unable to recall the details. His car was badly damaged.

Stabilization of Money Up to Europe, Nation Told by Morgenthau

Any Agreement Must Be at Terms of U. S., Address Indicates.

Hoover Is Assailed In Delaying Action

Secretary Praises Gold Policy, Cites Evidence of Trade Gains.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Declaring this country enjoys the soundest currency in the world, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., in a significant speech last night expressed the willingness of the United States to enter into an international currency stabilization agreement, provided none of the advantages this Nation gained by dollar devaluation is lost.

Mr. Morgenthau, however, made it clear that the initiative must be taken by the other trading nations of the world. Why should this country, he asked, "be singled out and admonished that the moral duty to restore order is primarily ours?" It did not start the currency fight, but acted only to protect itself, being the thirty-first to abandon gold and the next to last to devalue its currency, he said.

In effect, he told the world it could do as it pleased about the problem of unstabilized foreign exchange. If other nations wish stabilization—on our terms—Washington would not be an obstacle; if they wish to go on as at present, the United States can play that game with advantage, he said in substance.

"Our Hands Untied."

"We revalued our currency no more than was necessary and we can go either way," he said. "Our hands are untied."

Furthermore, Mr. Morgenthau made it plain this Government has no intention, in the absence of an international agreement, of pegging the value of the dollar in gold at its present level. To do so, he explained, "would put us back where we were in 1932 and offer a tempting invitation for the others not to follow, but again to take advantage of our disadvantage."

Contending that this country's monetary policy was not designed to capture international business for it, "but merely to protect our normal share," Morgenthau portrayed the present course of the United States as conducive to eventual stabilization of exchange.

"So far from engaging in a competitive devaluation race with other nations," he asserted, "we hold out to them a currency of such steadiness that the normal tendency may very well be for the rest of the world to move gradually toward practical exchange stabilization.

"If that can be achieved, the final step should come easily and almost of its own accord. Unless somebody rocks the boat, that would be the natural course."

Hits Hoover Policy.

He asserted that the Administration fully realizes the importance of world prosperity and promised that it "will evade no opportunity to assist in that direction—except the ever-present opportunity to donate prosperity at our own expense."

In addition to clarifying this Government's attitude toward exchange stabilization, Mr. Morgenthau's speech constituted one of the stoutest defenses of the Roosevelt monetary policies yet to come from the Administration.

Portraying the Nation as headed for disaster in 1932 and 1933, as a result of the heavy drains made on the country's gold stock and flaying the Hoover Administration for a stubborn refusal to take action, Mr. Morgenthau declared the Roosevelt monetary policy "rescued us from chaos."

That policy, he went on, "held the fort through the most trying period

Barbara Free From Prince, To Wed Count

Wedding Bells Expected Today at Reno for Woolworth Heiress.

By the Associated Press.

Reno, Nev., May 13.—Wedding bells are expected to ring again tomorrow for the newly-divorced Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani, Woolworth heiress, and the handsome Danish nobleman, Count Kurt Haugwitz-Reventlow.

From a reliable source it was learned tonight that the count—who has denied he intends to marry the princess—has already arrived in Reno and is making plans to take the $40,000,000 heiress back to Europe with him.

The count was understood to have arrived in Verni, Nev., 12 miles west of here, on the Southern Pacific's Pacific Limited this afternoon, only a few hours after the pretty princess discarded her polo-playing husband, Prince Alex's Mdivani.

The count was met at Verdi by George B. Thatcher, Barbara's Reno attorney, and came back to Reno by automobile.

It was learned he had already gone to the private residence of the princess, where the grounds were

Filipinos Cast Plebiscite Vote AtArmedPolls

By the Associated Press.

Manila, (Tuesday) May 14.—Still jittery over Sakdalista disturbances, Filipinos voted at heavily guarded polls today as government leaders unanimously predicted overwhelming ratification of the ten-year commonwealth government before complete independence from the United States.

Reinforced constabulary was unusually alert because of recurrent rumors of further violence planned by the Sakdalistas or advocates of immediate independence, whose uprising May 2 resulted in 60 deaths.

The voting began at 7 a. m. (6 p. m. Monday, Eastern standard time) and advices from several provinces indicated the balloting was lighter than in the elections of last June, despite the addition of women's suffrage.

More than 200,000 women had the ballot privilege for the first time, but some were expected to remain away from the polls because of fear of violence, although Interior Sec-

Italy Recalls 200,000 to Arms, Citing 'Hostility' of Ethiopia

Mobilization Notices Sent Class of 1912 as Spokesmen Say Nation Is Ready to Name Conciliators; French, English Action Futile, Paper Warns.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 13.—Italy dispatched mobilization notices today to soldiers of the class of 1912, numbering 200,000, a government spokesman citing Ethiopia's "evident attitude of hostility."

The spokesman announced Italy is ready to declare the names of her conciliators, chosen under the Italo-Ethiopian arbitration pact, as soon as Ethiopia announces her readiness to do likewise.

Asserting Italo-Ethiopian border difficulties of East Africa have been brought into "greater limelight" by Emperor Haile Selassie's declarations and notes to the League of Nations, the spokesman said Italy intends to continue her precautionary program to guard her colonies.

That Italy is determined to deal with the Ethiopian situation once and for all was indicated by an officially-inspired first-page article in the Giornale D'Italia asserting diplomatic pressure by England and France would have no effect on Italy and would merely result in giving moral aid to Ethiopia.

The mobilization notices called upon the men of the class of 1912 to present themselves at concentration points May 17.

Further notices also have gone out to members of the class of 1911, but only to men who have served in the military forces only a few months or not at all because of failure to pass physical examinations.

Whether the notices to the class of 1912, the only class between 1911 and 1914 not under arms, apply to the entire class and whether the men have been summoned for real mobilization or merely in readiness for mobilization will not be known until an official communique is published.

Heralding, in the face of this military activity, Italy's readiness for arbitration, the government spokesman said Italy will not publish the names of her chosen conciliators until Ethiopia replies that the Emperor is ready to announce the names of his own representatives.

The spokesman denied reports that any diplomatic step toward Rome was being planned by England or France with regard to the Ethiopian dispute.

The authoritative Giornale d'Italia criticized sharply efforts to bring

'Shame!' Cry Chicago Lawyers As Schall Scores Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 13.—The normally sedate Chicago Bar Association luncheon was a scene of shouting and bickering today as cries of "Shame! Shame!" greeted denunciations of President Roosevelt by Thomas Schall, Republican Senator from Minnesota, outspoken foe of the New Deal.

In the address, Schall professed the belief that Roosevelt was planning a dictatorship, and he told of a Democratic judge in Chicago who recently proposed a toast to the President.

"You may drink to him, and you may drink with him," Schall said, "but you will have to be —— drunk before you will vote for him at the next election."

Cries of "Shame! Shame!" arose.

"Shame to you!" shouted the Senator.

"It's un-American!" a voice cried.

"It's un-American to deny free speech in this country," Schall retorted. "Is it un-American to blame the Administration that has denied this? * * *

"I am not ashamed to stand up for my country. * * * The next election will definitely settle whether we will continue a republic or be on our way to Moscow. * * *

Schall declared that if Roosevelt were re-elected "there will be no future elections and the republic may be only a matter of history."

Thumbnail Digest of New Bills Proposed Daily for Congress

By the Associated Press.

Congressmen will be able to tell readily what bills have been introduced and which ones are coming from committee if a $10,000 item tucked away in yesterday's $20,355,965 legislative appropriation bill goes through.

The figure represents an increase of $1,884,934 over this year's bill, restoration of salary cuts to members accounting for much of the net increase.

It seems the average member has been having trouble wading through the some 3,000 public bills dropped in the box each session and finding out what they are all about. Therefore, Representative Arnold (Democrat), Illinois, told the House Appropriations Committee a service should be started that would lay on the member's desk each morning a thumbnail brief of each bill introduced and of measures coming from committee. The abstracts will be free for Congressmen and available to the public at a small cost.

Another new wrinkle in yesterday's measure worried some members—a stipulation that the constituents they name for the Capitol police force measure up to definite and improved standards of weight, height and such. The captain of Capitol police, William Orthman, complained bitterly about being given mere youngsters and men past their three-score and ten as policemen.

Some of the troubles of Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, as the congressional watchdog against excessive telegraph bills were outlined to the House Appropriations Committee.

A lot of the men who write the laws don't know what's in them when it comes to taking off Government typewriters, South Trimble, House clerk, complained in testifying before the House Appropriations Committee.

By Felix Bruner.

The question of just who is to benefit directly from the $4,000,000,000 works relief program was bothering officials yesterday as they struggled with rules and regulations for its administration.

Works officials must determine whether only persons on relief rolls will be employed on all projects, whether these projects are constructed by the Government, by municipalities or by private contractors. The question also has arisen as to whether the Government should require concerns supplying materials for works construction to employ persons on relief rolls.

One group in the works administration, it is reported, holds to the theory that all workers, regardless of how they are employed, should be taken directly from relief rolls. Another group holds that this rule should apply only to work done directly by the Government, with as many other relief employes as possible hired by contractors and municipalities.

This division of opinion has existed for a long time between the PWA and the Relief Administration. The PWA never has made any attempt to differentiate between workers on relief and those who are not. It has held to the opinion that furnishing of jobs, regardless of who is employed, relieves pressure of unemployment.

On the other hand, the Relief Administration, in all of its work projects and in the CWA projects, has interested itself only in the destitute.

It is being pointed out that many contractors insist on picking their own labor and that many are bound by union labor rules. Union labor agreements are effective also in some cities and States on public works.

See "Premium on Destitution."

Those who object to the requirement that only persons on relief rolls be employed in construction and in furnishing materials contend that "a premium is being put on destitution," and that persons out of work and not now on relief will be unable to find jobs and be forced on relief rolls.

President Roosevelt has estimated that 3,500,000 employables are on relief and that there is an equal number of unemployed who have not yet found it necessary to ask for relief. His proposal was that the 3,500,000 on relief be put directly to work and that thus indirect jobs would be created to take care of most of the other unemployed.

The difficulty encountered in this plan is in finding in each community projects that exactly fit requirements of persons on relief in that community. The President has insisted that projects be useful. The problem of the "white collar" worker still is acute in this connection.

This question, together with problems of wages to be paid and dividing the country into work relief districts, is expected to come before the allotment board when it meets at the White House Thursday. The board also will have before it a great many Federal projects, recommended by various departments.

Some of these questions are believed to have been considered when Frank C. Walker, head of the division of applications and information, and Harry L. Hopkins, head of the progress division, conferred with President Roosevelt yesterday.

Meanwhile, Morris L. Cooke, newly appointed head of the rural electrification division, said yesterday that the Government would invite private power companies to cooperate in its program, but that it also was preparing to produce, transmit and sell power.

Threat to Utilities.

The statement was seen as a threat over the heads of power companies which might not co-operate. Cooke emphasized that rates charged by private companies must be satisfactory to the Government. The Government under the works law, has a right to "acquire by purchase, or the power of eminent domain, any real property or interest therein."

Cooke said that private utilities have surveyed rural electrification possibilities in 75 per cent of the country and that many projects are ready to start. He said projects involving 1,000,000 rural homes are ready for submission to the division of applications and information.

Four possible means of financing rural electrification were given as:

1. The Government may aid private utilities in extending lines.
2. The projects may be financed through States, power districts or municipal agencies.
3. They may be financed through farm co-operatives.
4. The Government may set up production plants and transmission and distribution lines.

Cooke said part of the rural lines would connect with such Government projects as TVA, Boulder Dam, Grand Coulee and Bonneville.

Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, introduced a bill in the Senate yesterday plugging up the loophole created when the Supreme Court held that Parker Dam was not authorized by law. The bill is designed also to remove possibility that the decision affects other Government projects.

While discussion of works rules continued, the division of applications and information was distributing its first applications blanks to Government departments and expanding its personnel and office space. One wing of the Munitions Building will be occupied by the division's employes, although headquarters will be maintained as at present in the Commercial National Bank Building. The press section of the division will occupy a building on F street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. A part of the organization already occupies another building in the same block.

It was also announced that a number of "project consultants" would be added to the staff. These people, some of whom probably will be $1-a-year men, will directly assist Walker in receiving applications for works funds.

Meanwhile, Hopkins heard about the Illinois relief situation from a committee of the Illinois Unemployed Council from Chicago. The committee later called at the White House. Members told Hopkins there would be rioting in Illinois unless Federal relief there is resumed. Hopkins replied that he was ready to send money to Illinois as soon as the State puts up $3,000,000 a month, but that there would be no money until it does.

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

IN its original conception the works relief plan seemed simple enough, but as time goes on it becomes more complicated.

In the beginning, it was assumed that the works program would directly absorb 3,500,000 breadwinners, practically wiping out the relief rolls except for the unemployables, who would be turned back to be cared for by State and local governments.

Then it was estimated that for each relief worker, one additional worker would be re-employed by private industry to meet the demand for materials needed in the works program. That would put 7,000,000 persons to work and practically eliminate unemployment except for those unable to work.

However, as the prospects were explored more thoroughly, doubts began to arise among some Government experts as to whether the works program could absorb the 3,500,000 breadwinners now on relief. Accordingly, some are urging that industries receiving contracts to supply materials needed in the works program be required to hire new employes from the relief rolls. The effect of that would be to cut into the re-employment by private industry of those idle workers who had been able to avoid going on relief. Mostly those are persons who have not exhausted their savings, or who have been fortunate enough to receive help from relatives.

While farmer delegations are gathering to cheer for AAA, in the hope of impressing Congress with the desirability of approving the AAA amendments, the astute master minds at the Department of Agriculture are working on industrialists who provide the strongest position. They have made an elaborate study of railroad waybills in order to report that farm housewives are able to buy more kitchen utensils and household furniture as a result of restored purchasing power under AAA.

In the first year after AAA took effect, they report that shipments from industrial States into the agricultural States of the southeast rose as follows: Stoves and heaters, 83 per cent; refrigerators, 148 per cent; tables, 1,010 per cent; sewing machines, 182 per cent; radios, 69 per cent; bathtubs and plumbing fixtures, 29 per cent. There was a ten-fold increase in shipments of shoe polish. And, whatever it means, a gain of 94 per cent in shipments or arms and ammunition.

Problem in political etiquette: If you were in the White House and had to send a message vetoing the soldier bonus, would you do it before, on, or after Thursday, which is the day the Roosevelts are entertaining the disabled war veterans?

* * * *

Six or seven former White House secretaries now living in Washington undoubtedly felt a flicker of genuine sympathy yesterday for one of their successors, Stephen T. Early.

It was his painful duty to meet the White House correspondents and deny that the bonus had been discussed during President Roosevelt's week-end fishing trip with the following:

Vice President Garner, who probably will be Mr. Roosevelt's running mate again next year.

Democratic Senate Leader Robinson.

Senator Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, which, theoretically at least, is in charge of bonus legislation.

Nobody can imagine a group like that spending last week-end together and not mentioning the thing that was uppermost in all of their minds. With a veto message impending, political fortunes at stake, thousands of telegrams pouring into the White House, for the subject not to have come up would have been the greatest of all miracles during the New Deal. The most futile thing about such a denial is that it may be true, but nobody will believe it.

All of Steve Early's predecessors have been in the same spot at some time or other.

"I know how he must feel," one of them said. "You know nobody is going to believe you but you have to go through with it. All Presidents are the same way and you can't do a thing with them."

James Roosevelt is taking time off from his new job as general manager of his father's Hyde Park estate to help along the impending drive of the Young Democratic Clubs of America of which he is secretary. He and Hampton Robb, chairman of the organization's finance committee, are here today to give the cause a fresh boost.

What's the use of trying to settle these problems of money, the utilities, railroads, relief and a dozen other things?

Mayor Smith of Seattle has his problems, too, but see how he meets them. He is declaring a civic holiday when his worry-laden citizens will adjourn to Woodland Park and watch 50 gentlemen wearing nightshirts, hold a "put out the cat derby." The gentlemen in nightshirts will leap out of bed, run 50 yards, each carrying a cat, which is to be thrown out of the park.

"The taxpayers," the mayor explains, "will gather in the park and laugh at no expense to themselves—for once."

If that isn't statesmanship, it's genius. The trouble with the New Deal show is that while it is good entertainment, it costs so darned much money.

U. S. Solves First Air Bomb Threat

By the Associated Press.

Solution of its first "air bomb threat" case was announced yesterday by the Justice Department with the arrest of George Grounds at Glencoe, Okla.

James F. Bunn, identified by the department as a Stillwater, Okla., merchant, received an extortion note January 17 demanding $3,400 and threatening death by being "bombed from the air."

February 13 he received a second letter which raised the demand to $5,000. Special agents of the Justice Department then started checking the air-minded residents of Stillwater.

They obtained samples of Ground's handwriting and these were identified by experts in the crime laboratory here as identical with the extortion letter.

Government Costs Worry Gen. Johnson

Magazine Article Advocates Congress of Governors.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 13.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, will declare tomorrow that a government can cost so much that it can not be paid for except by printing money which "means ruin, and we are on the verge of something like that now."

"I think it is fair to charge," Johnson will say in a magazine (American) article, "that we simply have done nothing to relieve the three most obvious, threatening and effective causes of our continued distress—cost of government, taxes and debt. On the contrary, we have moved in almost every instance to aggravate and increase them.

"The alternative is the money magic of Father Coughlin and others, the effect of which will doubtless erase all debt. But it will erase it after the manner of an earthquake and a conflagration."

He advocated establishment, by interstate compact if necessary, of a congress of Governors and asserted that consideration must be given to the reforming of the whole old debt structure of the Nation.

3,000 Farmers Due Here Today To Uphold AAA

By Leon Dure, Jr.

In direct response to the widely expressed fears of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who has contended the time has come for farmers "to get up on their hind legs" and save the New Deal farm program, more than 3,000 dirt farmers of the South and West will meet here today to show Congress they mean business.

By automobile, by bus and by train they were pouring into the Capital last night. The main body, however, will not arrive until this morning, when special trains from North Carolina, Texas and other agricultural States are due.

In a demonstration unrivaled in recent history, they will assemble at 10 a. m. in Constitution Hall to testify as to the benefits of the AAA and to serve notice they want it continued. Capital veterans could recall no similar instance in recent years of a mass demonstration in favor of existing Government policies.

Deny "Inspiring" Move.

As Washington puzzled over this phenomenon, leaders stoutly insisted the farmer gathering was innocent of any inspiration from either the Department of Agriculture or the AAA. Secretary Wallace, AAA Administrator Chester C. Davis and other officials have been appealing for weeks, however, for an expression from the country.

That it should take the form of a movement on Washington — the responsibility for which all officials disclaim—was regarded as a significant precedent which may be followed in the future. Another possibility of the situation was that the farm delegations, warming to one another, may organize a national association.

Privately, some members of Congress were inclined to question the spontaneity of the movement, asserting county agricultural agents have been influential in promoting rallies in the past. This intimation was warmly denied by the farm leaders. They said a few county agents will be here today, but that the number will not be great.

United States Paying Bills?

In Atlanta, Gov. Eugene Talmadge issued a statement implying the Government was paying the expenses of the trip, the Associated Press reported. A denial came from E. B. Weatherly, of Cochran, Ga., who headed a group of 30 Georgia and Alabama farmers in boarding a special train at Atlanta.

Other delegations were en route from 20 or more States. An advance guard of several hundred yesterday streamed through a suite of rooms on the tenth floor of the Raleigh Hotel, where headquarters were set up. They came from South Dakota, Arkansas, Minnesota, Texas, Tennessee, Florida and South Carolina. Most of them stopped at hotels, but a number were directed to rooming houses by the Board of Trade.

The largest State contingent will come this morning from North Carolina, which is sending more than 1,000 farmers, it was said. Texas will have the second largest delegation, with at least 600 present, it was declared.

As the purported originator of the movement, "Clif" H. Day, of Plainview, Tex., is looked to as the leader of the rally. He was busy on Capitol Hill yesterday completing arrangements and inviting members of Congress to attend today's session.

Wallace to Speak.

The program will consist of a "keynote" speech in general support of the AAA by L. M. Lawson, of South Carolina, and four shorter testimonials in favor of the tobacco, cotton, wheat and corn-hog programs. Secretary Wallace is expected to make a reply on behalf of the Government.

The four other speakers were listed by Day as R. Hunter Pope, Enfield, N. C., tobacco; Earl Dean, Mason City, Iowa, corn-hog; A. M. Bourland, Vernon, Tex., cotton, and some member of the Kansas delegation, for wheat.

At 2 p. m., a second meeting will be at the Labor Department auditorium, where Administrator Davis is scheduled to talk. The AAA last week issued instructions of neutrality in regard to the farm movement, but since the visitors began arriving officials have been assisting the farmers in their local arrangements, it was learned.

The only purpose of the movement, according to Day, is "to let Washington know how the farmers feel about the AAA." He contends that the farm pilgrimage is not interested in the pending amendments strengthening the AAA, that the farmers care nothing for details, but want assurance the present program will not be stopped.

Began in South Dakota.

Sam Lassen, corn-hog farmer who led the South Dakota contingent, asserted the movement was begun in that State even before Day, in Texas, began spreading the idea by circularizing the West.

"Nobody asked us if we would come to Washington," he told the Associated Press. "We didn't ask anybody if we could come. We didn't like this criticism of the AAA. Business and industry have been receiving benefits for years. Under the AAA the farmers have been getting a break. We are going to see that we keep on getting this break.

"So we organized out in South Dakota to send delegates to Washington. Some of the corn-hog committeemen contributed one day's pay to the fund. We passed the hat and took contributions of from 25 cents up. We selected 20 delegates before we heard of the movement from any other State."

Eccles Ends Bank Bill Testimony

Dangers Seen In Banking Bill By Kemmerer

Princeton Professor Raps Extension of Reserve Board Powers.

By the Associated Press.

Provisions of the Administration banking bill strengthening Federal Reserve Board control over money and credit were termed "fraught with great danger" yesterday by Edwin W. Kemmerer, professor of international finance at Princeton University.

Kemmerer, who described himself as an adviser to governments on central banks, said he did not like the bill because it increased "governmental and political control of our banking and credit system" and contained provisions "likely to result in a leveling down of the quality of our bank assets and therefore in a weakening of the security of our bank deposits."

He testified after Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the Reserve Board, who drafted the sections Kemmerer opposed, completed his statement on behalf of the bill with recommendations of several changes in the text approved by the House.

One of these would give the Reserve Board power to "initiate, adopt and enforce open market policies for the reserve system," but only after consulting an advisory committee of five representatives of the reserve banks selected annually by the governors of those 12 institutions.

Under the House text, the open market committee of the board would adopt policies without consulting the governors of the reserve banks, while under present law each reserve bank has the right to refuse to participate in the policies adopted.

Eccles said the modified plan would "eliminate conflicts of jurisdiction and policy and at the same time would preserve the participation of Federal Reserve Bank governors in the deliberations leading to the adoption of open-market policies."

The Treasury's policy of withdrawing the currency circulating privileges from national banks was declared by Eccles to hold possibilities of "danger" that these institutions might convert into State banks, but he added he did not regard the circulating privilege as "very important."

Under the circulating privilege, which the Treasury has canceled in an effort to arrive at a more uniform currency, national banks have been permitted to issue bank notes in return for bonds deposited with the Government.

Asked by Chairman Glass of the sub-committee if withdrawal of the privilege would not remove all advantages a national bank had over State institutions, Eccles agreed it would.

"Would it not induce them to convert into State banks?" Glass asked.

"That's the danger," Eccles replied, but he added he never considered the privilege of great importance, especially when the banks have excess reserves.

The Reserve Board governor said the record of national banks was better than State banks over the years, but with the insurance of deposits of all classes of banks the element of confidence and advantage was disappearing.

Air Pact Is Signed By France and Italy

NRA, Farm Law Decisions Wait In High Court

Negro's Right to Jury Service Reaffirmed in Oklahoma Case.

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court pounded home anew yesterday its fiat that Negroes may not be excluded from juries, but failed to rule on two controverted laws—NRA and the farm mortgage moratorium.

In a 20-minute session, the high tribunal set aside a death sentence imposed on Jess Hollins, Oklahoma Negro convicted of criminal assault on a white woman, ruled on four other minor cases and granted two of 19 petitions for review.

The court announced it would deliver decisions on the next two Mondays of May and the first Monday of June. On any of these days it may determine the constitutionality of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage law and rule on basic features of NRA as challenged in the Schechter live poultry case from Brooklyn, N. Y. Rulings on these and 17 other cases were considered certain before the summer recess.

New Trial Likely.

Chief Justice Hughes delivered the blunt, 170-word unanimous decision in the Hollins appeal from Okmulgee County, Okla. It sent the case back for further proceedings. This will mean a new trial. Word from Oklahoma County officials was that the trial will be sought "as soon as possible."

Chief Justice Hughes cited directly the court's recent Scottsboro, Ala., opinion setting aside a death sentence imposed on Clarence Norris for alleged attack on a white woman on the grounds that Norris had been deprived of constitutional rights because Negroes had been excluded from jury service.

Challenge Cited.

The chief justice said Hollins had "challenged the jury panel upon the ground that Negroes for a long period had been excluded from jury service in that county solely on account of their race or color and that this discrimination had deprived petitioner of equal protection of the laws in violation of the Constitution of the United States."

On the basis of this plea and an examination of evidence, the court returned the case for proceedings consistent with the Scottsboro ruling.

Lifer's Slaying Increases Jail Break Toll to Three

Crockett, Tex., May 13 (AP).—Sam Grant, 40, a life-term killer, was slain by pursuing officers today, the third man to die as a result of the break for liberty of four convicts last Friday at the Eastham State Prison Farm.

Jack Peddy, another life-term killer who led the break, and Virgil Welch, a guard, were the other victims.

The slaying of Grant, in the Trinity River bottoms within seven miles of the prison, left only one convict, R. C. Tipton, also a life-term killer, at large. The fourth man, Harry Lutlow, serving 35 years for robbery, was captured Saturday.

Marines to Enroll College Students

Commandant Takes Step to Carry Out Plan

Plans to bring 250 college students into the Marine Corps as second lieutenants were forwarded yesterday, when Maj. Gen. John Russell, commandant of the corps, announced he has directed Lieut. Col. Joseph Feagan to visit five Eastern colleges and explain the opportunity to instructors and students.

Feagan will visit Bucknell, the University of Rochester, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Colgate and Washington and Jefferson. Outstanding students, after passing a physical examination, will be enrolled first as privates in the Marine Corps Reserve. During their sophomore and junior years they will be given six weeks training. It is the intention of officials to commission the members of the present junior class as they graduate from the universities.

Applicants will receive further training at Quantico, Va., and at San Diego, Calif. Other officers will be assigned by Gen. Russell later to visit more than two score other colleges and universities.

Actor Fatally Stricken While Riding Horseback

Hollywood, May 13 (AP).—Clarence Geldert, 67, veteran screen actor, died today of a heart attack while on horseback in the filming of a Western production on a ranch near Calabasas.

Geldert appeared in some of Hollywood's earliest silent pictures.

Born at St. John, N. B., Geldert was with the Royal Northwest Mounted Police before coming to the United States.

An autopsy will be held, the coroner said.

DEAFENED NOW GAIN COMFORTABLE HEARING

without use of earphone receiver . . . headbones replace defective middle ear and eardrum

A remarkable new improvement in Bone Conducting aids for deafened persons will be explained and demonstrated on May 13, 14 and 15, at Mager & Gougelman, 207 Albee Bldg., 1426 G street N. W. This aid has a number of exclusive features such as drastic reduction in size and weight (total weight, battery not included, is only 5 ounces) permitting it to be worn with unusual comfort and inconspicuousness.

The Amplifying Unit, one of its major components, is not only the smallest yet produced, but also provides unique hearing comfort as it functions admirably in either horizontal or vertical positions.

In normal hearing, sound waves are transmitted through the eardrum and the middle ear. When, however, these do not function, the Bone Conductor can enable the headbone to act as substitute and carry mechanical vibrations direct to the auditory nerve. About eight out of every ten deafened persons can hear this way.

A short test will determine whether you can hear through the bones. Free and private demonstrations will be given on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 13, 14 and 15 by a factory expert.

Report Spread Pilsudski Left Political Will

Testament to Guide Nation Rumored; Widow of Polish Dictator Is Ill.

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, May 13.—Huge groups of devoted Poles stood weeping in rain and hail today reading bulletins of the death of Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, while reports spread that the dictator had left a political will to guide the destiny of his nation.

Mme. Alexandra Pilsudska, the wife and close collaborator of the dictator since his early struggles against Russia, suffered a heart attack today and her condition was "unsatisfactory," physicians said. She had tired herself out during Pilsudski's long illness.

Whether the marshal actually left a testament for the direction of Poland's affairs probably will keep the world guessing for at least two days and perhaps until after the funeral at Cracow.

There has been a persistent rumor such a paper has been found, but the government is concentrating its energies on the funeral plans.

Rydz-Smigly Successor?

The fact that Gen. Edward Rydz-Smigly, army leader, was summoned to the deathbed and remained there throughout Pilsudski's last hours with the family, was taken to mean that he was selected not only as the military but also as the political successor of the marshal.

Others observed that Premier Walery Slawek, one of Pilsudski's most intimate friends, looked like a broken man today. While the loss of his friend would account for it, it was believed he also was overcome by a feeling of great responsibility, because of knowledge he might become Pilsudski's successor.

Others pointed to Foreign Minister Joseph Beck as the new leader. It was generally believed that while the successor would throw a significant light upon Poland's political future, he would fail to inherit the moral power Pilsudski had.

The latest advices indicated the marshal's body would be transported to Cracow Friday. It is to lie in state at Wawel Cathedral Saturday, with funeral services either Saturday afternoon or Sunday morning.

Nation Stunned.

The nation remained stunned at the death. No one except a few statesmen in high places knew that he was hopelessly ill.

He had been suffering from kidney trouble for some time, but with it there was a certain weakness that baffled the physicians. Good Friday, he suffered his first liver attack and thereafter his strength dropped rapidly.

Prof. Karl Frederick Wenckerbach, of Vienna, was summoned to consult with Polish surgeons. All agreed the marshal was suffering from cancer of the liver and stomach. The marshal remained unconscious until Friday, when he asked about the progress of preparations for the diplomatic visit of French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval.

The Viennese physician was called again and arrived by airplane, too late to bring any relief.

Hull Sends Message Of U. S. Condolences

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull today sent the following message of condolence to Joseph Beck, the Polish foreign minister:

"I have learned with distress of the death of Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, and I offer your excellency the sincere condolences of the Government and people of the United States.

"We in America have always had a particular admiration for the high qualities which enabled Marshal Pilsudski to labor so persistently and so successfully for the independence of his country. We share your grief that his career is ended."

Tilt Over Corridor Feared by Diplomats

London, May 13 (AP).—The death of Marshal Josef Pilsudski, strong man of Poland, evoked fears in diplomatic quarters today that new frontier difficulties between Poland and Germany may develop.

Some quarters saw the possibility of a new political alignment in Europe and that Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler may be less hesitant to put forth demands on the question of Pomorze (the Polish Corridor) than while the marshal lived.

Diplomats long had pondered the results of the marshal's death, now regarded as having come at a most unpropitious time in European affairs.

There were few diplomats who believed the Warsaw government will be able to balance friendships with Germany and with France. There also has been a conviction that internal political rivalries may cause complications.

Expressions of doubt were heard whether the newly acquired authority of President Ignace Moscicki, authority conferred by the new constitution, will be upheld. (At the time the constitution was voted upon the opposition complained that it was effective only so long as Pilsudsik ruled.)

Court Denies Kent A Special Session

Convicted Kidnaper Asked Aid on Appeal Costs.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 13.—A request by Robert Kent, jr., for a special session of the State Court of Appeals to consider refusal of Judge A. C. Buchanan to authorize printing of the record in his case at Commonwealth expense was refused today by the court.

Kent, serving a 13-year sentence in the penitentiary following conviction on charges of kidnaping Mrs. Mary J. Hastings, was granted a writ of error from the lower court's judgment, and asked a special session of the court because time for posting money for printing the record expires June 2, two days before the court, now in recess, is to reconvene.

Mrs. Hastings operated the Blue Springs Hotel, where Kent frequently stayed. Her body was found near Stroudsburg, Pa.

Security Pact With Economic Basis Planned

By the United Press.

Moscow, May 13.—A new Eastern European peace pact, in which the signatories would pledge economic rather than armed pressure against an aggressor, was seen tonight as a probable result of the good-will visit of French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval.

Such a revised form of the Eastern European security treaty was discussed by Laval on his arrival today from Paris, via Warsaw, with Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov.

It was understood tonight that Polish Foreign Minister Joseph Beck, in Warsaw, had informed Laval Poland would support such a proposal, with these reservations:

1. That Lithuania should sign the pact, following settlement of outstanding issues between those two countries.

2. That Czechoslovakia be excluded, because from Poland's viewpoint it does not belong to the Eastern European circle of nations.

Such a revised pact would be weaker than the original Litvinov conception of armed aid against an aggressor, which both Poland and Germany rejected.

However, Russia probably will be more willing to accept such a treaty in as much as French military assistance is assured under the new Franco-Russian military alliance, signed recently in Paris.

In the broader field of European diplomacy, the statesmen briefly surveyed the entire political situation in the light of Franco-Soviet collaboration for the maintenance of peace.

Jamestown Marks 328th Anniversary

Services Recall Landing of English Settlers.

By the Associated Press.

Jamestown, Va., May 13.—Scenes recalling the beginning of the Nation shifted from Williamsburg to Jamestown, and back to Williamsburg today, as the court-season festival at Williamsburg was suspended for the annual services at Jamestown, commemorating the 328th anniversary of the landing of the first permanent English settlers in the New World.

The Jamestown services were under the direction of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, which preserved part of the island. A part of the services was dedicated to the memory of the late Mrs. J. Taylor Ellyson, under whose presidency of the A. P. V. A. the portion of the island was preserved, and to the memory of the late Col. Samuel H. Yonge, who built the sea wall.

A pageant depicting the growth of the colony was given following religious services in the Old Church.

Back in Williamsburg, the court season, a custom of early Virginia, revived under the Williamsburg restoration, was resumed after the Jamestown services. The season, started Saturday, was concluded tonight with colonial dancing.

Horse Seeing Movie Tears Up 20 Seats

By the Associated Press.

London, May 13.—A freak experiment to determine whether a movie race-track scene would have any effect on a horse nearly wrecked a theater today.

The horse, a hunter mare, was taken to a private showing of the film and watched calmly enough while earlier parts of the picture were screened.

Nursing School Gives Diplomas To 19 Students

The commencement exercises of the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital School of Nursing were held Sunday evening in Columbia Hall auditorium of Washington Missionary College.

The address was given by Dr. Owen S. Parrett, medical director of the sanitarium, his subject being "The Equipment of a Nurse." Dr. D. H. Kress, dean of the medical staff, presented the diplomas and Mrs. Edythe James, superintendent of nurses, presented the class pins to the graduates.

Miss Dorothy Ann Goodrich, violinist, played Bach's "Air for the G String," accompanied by Miss Lois Hall. Miss Eunice Graham played "Andante From Concerto in G Minor," by Mendelssohn, with the college orchestra accompanying under the direction of Prof. Willard Shadel. Miss Ruth Schifer sang "My Task," by Ashford, accompanied by P. deF. Henderson, who also played the processional and the recessional.

The consecration service was held Friday evening, the address being given by Rev. William A. Spicer, former president of the world conference. Saturday morning the baccalaureate service was held, the sermon being given by Chaplain Warren E. Barr. Music was furnished by George Wargo, who played a viola solo, "Alone." The Euphonic Quartet, composed of Robert Eldridge, Cecil Higgins, Charles Eldridge and Merrill Dawson, sang "Lead Kindly Light" with viola and piano accompaniment.

A dispatch from Ankara, reporting rumors that Ethiopia might seek Turkey's assistance in the event of hostilities with Italy, brought the statement from informed quarters that Italy would be quick to resent any such alliance.

The government spokesman asserted, however, that Italy would take no notice of the reports until they were confirmed officially, asserting that there would be time enough then to outline the Italian attitude.

It was recalled that relations between Italy and Turkey were strained in December, 1934, when the Turkish government ordered maneuvers by its national defense forces in southeast Asia Minor as a result of concentration of an Italian fleet of airplanes at the Dodacanese Islands.

Emperor Selassie May Call War Parley

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, May 13.—Grave concern was expressed in government circles tonight over a report from Rome that Italy has ordered mobilization of 200,000 more troops.

A government spokesman said it is likely that Emperor Haile Selassie will return to the capital immediately from his inspection trip through the provinces and probably will summon a war council of tribal chiefs.

Mussolini's action in calling out the huge new contingent of soldiers, coming as it does in the midst of negotiations to appoint conciliation delegates, is regarded as an indication of impending hostilities as soon as the rainy season is ended.

Reports that Ethiopia was seeking military support from Turkey were branded as "Italian propaganda" by the ministry of foreign affairs.

Ras Mulugeta, minister of war, who is a grizzled veteran of King Menelik's time, said that "Italy is massing troops in Africa and has all but shattered the hopes of a peaceful settlement and the avoiding of bloodshed by Christian nations."

"I can only say," said the war minister, "that in the event of Italian aggression the Ethiopian army will defend the fatherland to the last inch and with her last soldiers. Our warriors are ready for unbelievable sacrifices to maintain their independence of a thousand years standing."

Ethiopia Demands League Take Action

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, May 13.—Ethiopia, charging anew that Italy's "warlike preparations" in Africa "endanger international peace," today demanded immediate League of Nations action on the Italo-Ethiopian border dispute.

Emperor Haile Selassie's latest note declared Italian concentration of troops and war materials in Eritrea and Italian Somaliland, which border on Ethiopia, "leaves no doubt as to the hostile intentions of Italy."

It urged that the league deal with the issue at the assembly session opening May 20, asked immediate arbitration of the controversy and proposed pledges that the arbitral decision would be accepted without reservation.

Terming "absolutely false" what it said was an Italian report that general mobilization had been ordered in Ethiopia, the communication accused Italy of trying to induce certain foreign governments to restrain their citizens from serving as arbitrators.

being carefully guarded to keep questioners away.

The famous young woman, whose divorce trial today required just 10 minutes, was secluded in the private home. Her father, Franklyn L. Hutton, of New York, and her stepmother also were reported to be in the big, rambling house.

Meantime, a crew of workmen was engaged polishing up the brass trimmings on the $100,000 private railway car, the Curleyhut, in which Mr. and Mrs. Hutton came to Reno from New York.

Princess Under Escort.

In a sensational move to avoid curious eyes, the princess came to court early this morning with an escort which included Sheriff Ray Root and Reno's chief of police, John M. Kirkley. She arrived in an automobile driven by her attorney.

Her mouth set in a grim line, the trim heiress rushed the 20 or 30 feet from the jail building to the rear entrance of the courthouse without pausing.

She climbed the narrow back stairs of the court building and went directly to the courtroom of District Judge Thomas F. Moran. A bailiff locked the doors and kept a crowd of curious persons standing at corridor walls.

Her Exit Hurried.

As the bailiff ordered the upstairs hall cleared, the princess hurried out the way she came—through the jail buildings and into Thatcher's car.

She smiled as she brushed by photographers and reporters.

Thatcher then drove her hurriedly through the maze of traffic congesting streets near the court building to the residence. With them was Millard Tomkins, jr., attorney, of New York, one of Barbara's counsel.

Prince Alexis was represented at the hearing by George Sam Brown, of the Reno law firm of Brown & Belford. There was no testimony offered in his behalf.

Princes Barbara's formal complaint, which charged "extreme cruelty," was filed at 11:18, Eastern standard time, this morning by Miss M. Rice, a secretary in Thatcher's office.

Montgomery Projects in Need of Funds.

Approximately 318 men were laid off yesterday from Emergency Works Relief projects in Montgomery County, Md., because of lack of funds. All direct relief in the county, in addition, was ordered curtailed until June 1.

The county's allotment of Federal and State relief funds for May had been reduced one-third, according to Miss Dorothy Everson, executive secretary of the public welfare board of the county. The county asked for $27,000 to carry on its relief program for May but received only $18,000, Miss Everson said.

Work on the relief projects will be resumed June 1 when the new allotment of funds is received and direct relief is expected to return to its former basis.

Hyattsville Officials Sworn in By Clerk

Oaths of office were administered last night to the incoming new officials of Hyattsville by Brice Bowie, clerk of the Circuit Court of Prince Georges County, at the Municipal Building.

Officials inducted were Mayor H. T. Willis and Councilman Arnon T. Mehring, First Ward; Councilman Thomas E. Arnold, First Ward; Councilman T. D. Jarrell, Second Ward; Councilman E. Murray Gover, president of the council, Third Ward, and Councilman Robert C. Meredith, Fourth Ward. All except Arnold, who is starting his first term, were reelected recently without opposition.

Filipinos Cast Plebiscite Vote At Armed Polls

Acting Gov. Gen. Joseph R. Hayden joined Filipino leaders in urging the 1,700,000 registered voters to cast their ballots.

"We do not expect any violence, but if it comes we shall be prepared to deal with it promptly and effectively," Hayden declared.

Moving to prevent further disorders, the constabulary arrested two Sakdalista party leaders and 80 others. Previously 500 persons were jailed as a precautionary measure.

Constabulary forces seized Celerino Tiongco, a Sakdal leader, who, they said, was wanted "dead or alive", and also apprehended Simeon Decena, secretary of the group.

Editor Captured.

Tiongco, editor of the newspaper Sakdal, was captured in Rizal province near here, where he had been hiding with his followers.

There was no trouble early today and even a report to the constabulary that ballot boxes at Naga in Camrines Sur province had been destroyed by Sakdalistas was found to be baseless.

Political leaders were confident the Sakdalistas, who have been opposing ratification ostensibly because the commonwealth would delay complete independence, would be unable to dent the Filipinos' solid front in favor of a home rule regime. The leaders pointed out the extremists were numerous only in southern Luzon Island and constituted only a small minority of the people.

Predict Victory.

Quintin Paredes, speaker of the house, received telegrams from legislators who have been campaigning for ratification which he said indicated a huge margin in favor of the commonwealth in every province, even among the Moros.

In an election eve address, Manuel Roxas, member of the Philippine House and prominent independence advocate, warned that a "light vote will be misunderstood in the United States and elsewhere."

The Philippines, in case of an adverse vote, would revert to their former status as a possession of the United States under the Jones law of 1916.

Should the people approve the constitution, the election of officers would be all remaining before actual inauguration of the commonwealth.

Oil Accidents Decrease.

New York, May 13.—Declines of 17 per cent in the frequency of fatal injuries and of 11 per cent in the severity of injuries gave the petroleum industry in 1934 one of the best accident prevention records to date, according to the final report for the year made by H. N. Blakeslee, director of the American Petroleum Institute's department of accident prevention.

Utilities Bill Reported Out; 2 Senators Bolt

Hastings and Dieterich Complain of Swift Action on Measure.

By the Associated Press.

Although torn by internal dissension, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee wrote an emphatic approval yesterday on the Administration bill to abolish all but "necessary" public utility holding companies by 1942.

The action pushed the hotly-contested measure to the Senate floor, where a stiff fight was in prospect over many provisions. It closed also weeks of public hearings and secret sessions. The executive meetings climaxed brusquely yesterday when two committee members—Senators Hastings (Republican), Delaware, and Dieterich (Democrat), Illinois—refused to vote upon a new draft of the control plan and marched out of the committee room complaining they had been given less than an hour to digest a 151-page bill.

But Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, co-author of the measure, insisted members had been given ample time to consider the bill since the new print merely incorporated the old draft with committee amendments.

The new draft was presented to the committee for the first time yesterday morning. After a brief session behind closed doors a clerk officially reported the vote for reporting the bill to the Senate was 14 to 2, although Hastings and Dieterich had walked out without balloting.

The bill was described by Wheeler as "considerably modified" from its first form. While it still directed abolition of all holding companies which could not show themselves necessary to the efficient operation of geographically-integrated operating companies, it gives them an opportunity to reorganize as investment trusts provided they shear themselves of any influence over the operating companies.

Exemptions from dissolution are granted in the bill to holding companies whose business is confined within one State, and to those which direct companies in a closely associated group extending into several States.

A further concession to those who protested that the legislation would cause dumping of a vast number of securities on the market was contained in a section permitting holding companies to retain possession of securities of nonrelated industries already on hand. But henceforth, the bill provides, utility companies can not acquire nonrelated companies such as bus and street car lines, or barge systems.

Holding company representatives appearing at the hearings contended they supplied service organizations for engineering and financing work much needed by the smaller operating companies. To meet this argument the bill was redrafted to permit several of the smaller holding companies to band together to create nonprofit mutual service companies.

"Nonessential" holding companies which do not voluntarily dissolve or reorganize into investment trusts by 1940 would be abolished under court direction within two years thereafter.

To prevent the reorganized investment trust companies from influencing operating companies, the bill would direct a study by the Securities Commission of all present investment trusts with instructions to report back before the next session of Congres with findings of how much influence may be blocked.

Generally the bill contains two sections, the one administered by the Securities Commission regulating the financial set-up of the holding companies, either gas or electric; and the second authorizing the Federal Power Commission to regulate the interstate business of operating power companies.

Robles Kidnap Threat Case Set for June 18

Tucson, Ariz., May 13 (AP).—Judge Albert M. Sames today set June 18 for trial of Oscar H. Robson on charges of mailing threatening letters with intent to extort in connection with the kidnaping of little June Robles.

At the same time, Fred W. Fickett, attorney for Robson, announced he would subpoena J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Department of Justice Investigation Bureau, for the trial.

While the grand jury was investigating the case ten days ago, Hoover announced from Washington "the Robles case has been solved to the satisfaction of the Department of Justice."

Removal of U. S. Judge Sought in Bank Cases

Cincinnati, May 13 (AP). — The Sixth District U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals here today ordered District Judge Ernest A. O'Brien, of Detroit, to show cause why he should not be removed as trial judge in nine bank cases pending in Detroit.

His removal was asked by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings on the ground the judge has displayed "personal bias and prejudice" in connection with the cases.

Appeals Court Raps Lobbying, Upsets Verdict

Denounces Practice Even When No Improper Acts Are Committed.

The employment of lobbyists to assist in the passage of legislation, even though no improper acts are committed, was denounced by the United States Court of Appeals yesterday in setting aside a $250,000 verdict in favor of John Wilson Brown 3d, a New York attorney.

Brown and a group of associates, it was shown, held a contract with the firm of Gesellschaft Fur Drahtlose Telegrafie, of Berlin, Germany, in which the lawyers were to press claims for damages for property seized during the World War. They eventually obtained a $5,000,000 award under the war claims act.

Brown then brought suit in the local courts, alleging he had not been paid a proper fee, and a $250,000 verdict was returned in his favor.

In setting aside the verdict, the Court of Appeals held such contracts were invalid if they permitted the exercise of improper influence on legislators. The court said public policy necessitated a "general condemnation of contracts for procuring legislation," especially "where the legislation is remedial and provides for the assertion of claims against the Government, and the contract is for a contingent portion of a claim that may be given legal status through success in securing the legislation.

"Such contracts are illegal as tending to corrupt by improper influence the integrity of our political institutions."

The court "reluctantly" acted, because "common honesty would seem to dictate a compliance" with the contract by the German corporation. There was no charge that Brown had acted improperly.

Independent Exhibit Boasts Trick Painting by Bittinger

When is a picture of Col. Lindbergh's flight a picture of the Mona Lisa, and vice versa? Answer: Sometimes. It's all in how you look at it.

The picture (pictures?) in question is a large canvas by Charles Bittinger, Washington artist, now on view in the Jelleff unit of the Greater Washington Independent Art Exhibition. At first glance the work is an impressionistic painting of the national hero's epoch-making air voyage and to the naked eye it remains so.

But just when you have that settled (or think you have) a hostess approaches, thrusts into your hand a gadget resembling an old-fashioned stereopticon with a red glass lens, and says, "Peek!" You peek and presto! Lindbergh. New York's skyscrapers, the Atlantic Ocean and flag-bedecked Paris have disappeared and where they were (are?) is the Mona Lisa. This time there's an excuse for her enigmatic smile. Now you see her, now you don't! Remove the stereopticon and you remove the Mona Lisa.

Science Buttresses His Art.

It all started years ago when Artist Bittinger began to dabble in science and art simultaneously. He discovered, after extensive experiments in the effect of light upon pigments and dyes, that certain lights would change the object of his experiment from white to rosy red, blue, green, black—any color desired. It's all pretty confusing at first, but carry on.

According to Bittinger, scientific knowledge among modern painters is far below that of the old masters, whose familiarity with the chemical reactions of pigments was based on the sure foundations of personal experiment in the grinding and mixing of the colors they used. Today, artists simply accept the greatly-increased number of pigments which chemists, with their continually growing list of new dyes, have evolved. With this large variety of tempting colors put into their hands ready for use, the artists of today have small knowledge of their paintings' chemical composition.

Technique Is Difficult.

It takes Bittinger months to paint his "double-action" pictures. Part of the time he is obliged to work in the dark. He brushes on paint by ordinary light, then switches off the lamps and turns on a red-flood to see whether he is achieving the desired effect. The "Mona Lisa-Lindbergh" is considered his best.

Bittinger's extraordinary work will be on view with the 1,500 other pictures and sculptures in the Greater Washington Independent Art Show through May 20. The different units of the show are located in the auditorium of The Washington Post and in the galleries of the following downtown stores: Julius Garfinckel & Co., the Hecht Co., Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., S. Kann Sons Co., Lansburgh & Bro., W. B. Moses & Sons, Palais Royal, W. & J. Sloane and Woodward & Lothrop.

Divorce Suit Cites Lipstick on Pillow

Lipstick on a pillowslip tells a story all its own, Mrs. Pauline Helvenstine, 1104 Holbrook terrace northwest, asserted in a suit for a limited divorce she filed against her husband yesterday.

The tell-tale lipstick was found on the pillow, she said, when she returned from a two-week vacation. There were other indications, she claimed, that made her suspicious of her husband's conduct while she was away. Attorney Raymond Neudecker, representing the wife, also asked the District Supreme Court to find out what happened to a joint savings account which the husband recently changed to his own account.

Doomed Mother, Son Are Refused Clemency

Dover, Del., May 13 (AP).—The State Board of Pardons today denied clemency to Mrs. May H. Carey, 52, and her son, Howard, 27, sentenced to hang on June 7 for a 7-year-old slaying.

Unless the Governor intervenes Mrs. Carey will go to the gallows in the courtyard at Georgetown, the first of her sex to meet such a death in Delaware.

With a younger son, James, they are alleged to have beaten Robert R. Hitchens, Mrs. Carey's brother, to death. James was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Dr. Steinman Sees Huge Surge for Durables in 1938-1940.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

America's heavy goods industry was pictured yesterday as on the verge of "an unprecedented upward swing" by Dr. David B. Steinman, New York engineer, at the Mellon income tax hearing.

Called as an expert witness by Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, Dr. Steinman told reporters business peaks surpassing pre-depression levels would be attained in the lethargic durable goods trade between 1938 and 1940.

"The railroads and other industries," he prophesied, "will buy heavily in the new movement. The upward swing is being anticipated now by Government enterprise. The apex of the next period of prosperity for heavy goods probably will be reached in 1940."

Dr. Steinman upheld the contention of attorneys for the former Cabinet officer that the vast growth of the fabricated steel business since 1913 could be forseen in that year.

Mellon Figures Defended.

His testimony supported Mellon's valuation of $500 a share in 1913 placed on his holdings in McClintic-Marshall Co. steel stock, which the Internal Revenue Bureau has protested was only worth $158. The average value of the securities between 1913, effective date of the income tax law, and 1930 is at issue.

"From 1900 to 1913," Dr. Steinman testified, "was a period of tremendous activity in the fabricated steel business. In 1913 the outlook was good for use of steel in bridges, skyscrapers, subway building and automobile manufacturing."

In 1913, the heavyset, aggressive witness added, "no one anticipated" the outbreak of the World War in 1914, which caused orders for fabricated steel to fall off sharply in 1915.

"The future seemed bright for fabricated steel investors in 1913," he said.

Mellon Taste Applauded.

"Mr. Mellon's collection," he said, "unlike practically all other private collections, isn't a dud."

Messmore and Charles R. Henschel, president of the Knoedler firm, agreed Mellon paid $3,247,695, or "only a fair value" for five outstanding paintings bought from the Soviet Russian government. The works came from the Hermitage collection.

Henschel reported the negotiations, conducted over a two-year period, were cloaked in secrecy because Soviet officials "didn't want the general public" to learn of the deal. Ship-to-shore telephone conversations and conferences in Berlin and New York were involved.

The firm, Henschel explained, was advanced $6,654,000 in 1930 and 1931 by Mellon and made the purchase with the understanding that any paintings he did not desire would be sold to other collectors. The dealers received a 12 per cent commission. The witness said he declined to buy several pictures because the prices asked were "too high."

Suicide Is Hinted In 5 Poison Deaths

Theory Mother Killed Self and Children Probed.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 13.—The possibility that Mrs. Katherine Gross, an expectant mother, in a fit of despair had poisoned herself and four of her children was investigated today as arraignment of the father, Frederick Gross, $20-a-week bookkeeper, in connection with the mysterious deaths was deferred.

Mrs. Gross had frequently complained of the small salary earned by her husband and that in consequence her life was a hard struggle, authorities learned from neighbors of the couple.

"The evidence in this case is by no means complete," said Assistant District Attorney Vincent A. Ferrari in homicide court as he was granted a week's postponement of Gross' arraignment.

Gross was arrested after a toxicologist discovered traces of an obscure poison in the vital organs of two of the children who died April 26. Similar poison is imported by the chemical company that employed Gross.

Gastronomic Missionary, Bearing Burgundy To President, Tarries to Preach to the Press

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

M. Andre Simon, a man with a mission and a press agent, arrived in Washington yesterday with both. While M. Simon was plying the press with champagne in a palatial suite at the Mayflower, the press agent was desperately trying to arrange an interview with President Roosevelt and the mission sort of got lost. However—

It developed that for altruistic reasons M. Simon, a red-faced, grey-haired, stoutish sort of fellow with an accent that is a mixture between cockney and left bank, and who is president of the Wine and Food Society of Great Britain, is spreading an eat-more-and-drink-more gospel in this country.

He believes that Americans gobble their food, don't appreciate good wines and are generally in need of gastronomic education. So he has come down from New York, with a few cob-webbed bottles of 1811 burgundy which he would present to the President.

Surrounded by photographers, whose clicking lenses vied with popping corks, he talked at random yesterday while the press agent alternated between sips of the bubbling wine of the champagne country and vehement denials that the Wine and Food Society which M. Simon is establishing in this country has any commercial motive.

M. Simon, who certainly looks the part of a gourmet, has written all sorts of books about food and drink, some of which are listed as being as rare as the 1811 burgundy. Out of his knowledge acquired in the leisurely pursuit of eating, drinking and writing about it, he denied yesterday that there is any such thing as Napoleon brandy.

"Napoleon never drank brandy," he said emphatically, spreading his fingers in gesture of disgust. "He died from bolting his food. He drank burgundy and he never took life sensibly. He had a very good chef, but the chef never could get him interested in food. What's the sense of winning battles if you're going to die of indigestion."

M. Simon said persons should think more about eating. He has no rules about what to eat or what to drink. Anything you like, if you really like it, is good for you. It's all right to drink champagne with any course, if you like champagne, or a sweet wine, if you like sweet wine. Beer? The gourmet scowled.

The wine to drink is the wine that appeals to you on the day you want to drink it. The weather and your own mood should be the deciding factors, he said.

"What did you have for lunch today?" he was asked.

ANDRE L. SIMON.

Head of Wine, Food Society Would Teach Folk in U. S. Art of Eating.

"Fruit juice, sea trout, lettuce and asparagus, and strawberries, and a bottle of California riesling wine," he answered, smacking his lips.

Harmony Is Object.

M. Simon, who sat on a couch surrounded by young newspaper ladies, gazing at the 1811 burgundy, the 1857 claret, and some champagne prepared for Queen Victoria, said that Henry W. Taft, brother of the late president, is head of the Wine and Food Society of the United States. Its purpose is to spread his maxim, expressed yesterday as:

"Harmony, with moderation, is the primary law of the art of good living—harmony between scents and flavors, liquids and solids, food and wine."

Anne Lindbergh Writes Book on Orient Flight

New York, May 13 (AP).—Anne Morrow Lindbergh has written a book describing the flight to the Orient which she and her husband, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, made in 1931, it was announced today.

The book, entitled "North of the Orient," will be published in the fall by Harcourt, Brace & Co. She wrote it herself, without the aid of any literary "ghost," it was said, and it will be illustrated with maps drawn by Col. Lindbergh.

Though poems by Mrs. Lindbergh have been published in various magazines, this will be her first book.

Man Can Talk With God, Says Noted Psychologist

DR. FRANK B. ROBINSON

A new and revolutionary religious teaching based entirely on the misunderstood sayings of the Galilean Carpenter, and designed to show how we may find, understand and use the same identical power which Jesus used in performing His so-called Miracles, is attracting world wide attention to its founder, Dr. Frank B. Robinson, noted psychologist, author and lecturer.

"Psychiana," this new psychological religion, believes and teaches that it is today possible for every normal human being, understanding spiritual law as Christ understood it, to duplicate every work that the Carpenter of Galilee ever did—it believes and teaches that when He said, "the things that I do shall ye do also." He meant what He said and meant it literally to all mankind, through all the ages.

Dr. Robinson has prepared a 6000 word treatise on "Psychiana," in which he tells about his long search for the Truth, how he finally came to the full realization of an Unseen Power or force so dynamic in itself that all other powers and forces fade into insignificance beside it—how he learned to commune directly with the Living God, using this mighty, never-failing power to demonstrate health, happiness and financial success, and how any normal being may find and use it as Jesus did. He is now offering this treatise free to every reader of this paper who writes him.

If you want to read this highly interesting, revolutionary and fascinating story of the discovery of a great Truth, just send your name and address to Dr. Frank B. Robinson, 51 5th St., Moscow, Idaho. It will be sent free and postpaid without cost or obligation. Write the Doctor today.—Copyright 1935, Dr. Frank B. Robinson.—Advertisement.

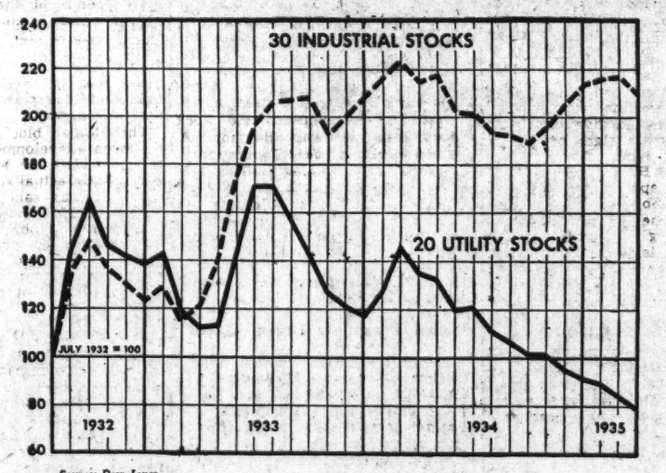
THE TRUTH
About Prices of Utility Stocks



Source: Dow-Jones.

BY July 1932 the depression had touched bottom, and had dragged with it the prices of both utility and industrial securities. But since that time there has been substantial recovery. Prices of 30 industrial stocks have risen more than 100%.

Utility stocks, however, have failed utterly to enjoy any recovery, and instead were 20% lower last March than they were at the depth of the depression in 1932. These figures are based upon the Dow-Jones averages, which have long been regarded as authoritative by financial and other business men.

Utility stocks began their present steep decline shortly after the Tennessee Valley Authority Act was passed in 1933. Since then electric and gas utility companies have been refused a share in the recovery that is being enjoyed by other industries, even though they helped to make that recovery possible by paying $300,000,000 in taxes in 1934.

They have been loaded with an excessive burden of taxation. Their rates have been forced down, depriving them of revenue. The government has encouraged municipalities to build power plants and has itself fostered huge power projects, to drive existing companies out of business. The fall in prices of utility securities, while the prices of other securities were rising, is the result.

OPPOSE WHEELER-RAYBURN BILL

Now comes the Wheeler-Rayburn Bill, whose purpose is to complete the ruin of utility investors to which government attacks have so contributed. The bill will wipe out practically all utility holding companies, and put about 91% of all local electric companies under stifling bureaucratic control from Washington. All utility investors, utility customers, and taxpayers generally should protest to their Senators and Representatives against this unnecessary destruction of property. Insist that your Congressmen assure you they will vote against this bill.

An Elderly Couple Write a Letter to Their Senator

DEAR SIR:

I am writing you to vigorously protest against the proposed legislation of the Public Utility Act of 1935, which will wreck private investments, in addition to allowing the domination of the electrical industry by political agencies.

We are an elderly couple, well-advanced in years, my husband at this very moment is too critically ill to sign this letter. We have struggled all our lives, denied ourselves many things, so we would not become a burden to the public in our last years.

What few small investments we have left are public utility stocks, and if these are swept away by this vicious legislation, we have only two choices left us, one is a dole from the Government and the other is suicide.

The small investor as usual will be the one to suffer if the proposed bill is passed and put into effect.

As American citizens, we ask you to please tell us what possible reason can there be for supporting this bill, and ask you to please do everything in your power to prevent its passage.

Very truly yours,

East Lansdowne, Pa.

Police Warned To Share Blame For Violations

Hazen Sees 'Humiliation' In Federal Agents' Disclosures Here.

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday told the District police captains and higher police officials it was "humiliating" to have Federal law enforcement agents disclose presence of stills and other continued law violations in Washington and that hereafter they would be held responsible for conditions in their districts.

The declaration of the commissioner was made in the course of a conference between the commissioner, Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner; E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel; William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic; George W. Offutt, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and the assistant superintendents of police and the commanders of the various precincts and bureaus. The conference was held in the office of Commissioner Hazen.

Commissioner Hazen said he had the support of the other commissioners in deciding a policy which would rate the precinct commanders and their lieutenants on the basis not only of what they did but also of what they failed to do.

Col. Sultan brought the Army idea into the discussion. He said that Army officers, from generals down, and privates, too, were responsible for performance of certain duties. When they failed in those duties they were given an opportunity to explain. Failure of a satisfactory explanation meant disciplinary action, Col. Sultan said.

"I can see no reason why Federal agents have to come into the District to discover law violations which should be apparent to every law enforcement officer in the neighborhood," Col. Sultan said.

Commissioner Hazen said the conference with the police commanders had nothing at all to do with the recently concluded crime investigation made by the special House District sub-committee headed by Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia.

"This meeting," he said afterward, "was just a get-together to talk things over and to impress on the precinct commanders that they would be held responsible for conditions in their precincts.

"Just because there are special squads in the department doesn't absolve any precinct commander from knowing what is going on in his precinct and acting against law violations."

Mr. Van Duzer made a brief address in which he outlined to the police officials the principal causes of serious traffic accidents. Among those he mentioned were speeding, turning from the wrong lane of traffic, failure to give signals, failure to observe right of way and heed traffic signs.

Inspector B. A. Lamb had submitted a report in the course of which he objected to the present waste of time and lack of efficiency in handling of traffic accidents which are taken to court. Under the present system a policeman, arriving on the scene of an accident, summons all persons who admit having witnessed or participated in the accident. These are heard in a preliminary hearing before an assistant corporation counsel. Mr. Prettyman said the present situation is unsatisfactory and he is trying to work out a better procedure.

Police Seize 2, Note 11 Names In Gaming Raid

O'Brien and Dove Held After Vice Squad Batters Door With Ax.

Hacking their way through a heavy wooden door, the Vice Squad yesterday raided an alleged gambling establishment at 1520 K street northwest, took the names of 11 well-dressed men in the place, and arrested Charles P. O'Brien and Louis W. Dove.

The barricaded door faced the raiders as they tried to enter apartment No. 1 in the building. Using axes, the police hewed a hole in the door large enough to enable it to be opened. Inside the 11 clients and O'Brien and Dove were found. Police said all the clients were apparently prosperous and appeared to be of the business man class.

The apartment was a regular bachelor's establishment except for the racing blackboards on the wall, police said. There was a pool table under a shaded light. A number of dice and racing slips were seized, police reports stated. There was no alternate entrance to the apartment and none tried to escape, according to the raiding party.

Dove gave his age as 28 and his home as the 1100 block of Thirteenth street northwest. O'Brien said he was 40, and lived at 1520 K street. Both were charged with setting up a gaming table.

District Police Court To Use 3 Jury Panels

Three jury panels will be used in Police Court daily, beginning this morning, in an attempt to bring all jury cases up to date, judges and prosecutors at the court decided yesterday.

The three panels will be used until the cases are up to date. All Police Court judges, when finished with their routine duties, will help out. Emphasis was laid by members of the assistant corporation counsel's office on the necessity of dispensing with the large number of traffic cases for which jury trials have been demanded.

Patman's Bill Today Will Go To White House

men, it was quickly explained in Administration quarters, represented merely their personal views. Some observers, however, have been inclined to read more than a casual candor in their utterances.

Sees Narrow Victory.

As friends of the Patman plan gathered last night at the Mayflower Hotel for a survey of strength, Senator Thomas, who called the meeting, held out strong hopes that the expansionist bonus bill would override the veto by a narrow margin of votes.

The Patman bloc is not counting on recent developments (not least of which were the Jones and Eccles statements) actually to change any votes, it was said. One Patman leader insisted, however, that he had reason to believe some Senators who voted against the Patman bill on passage "would now find it convenient not to be present when the vote to override is tallied."

Reynolds May Fly Back.

Against predictions of Senate leaders that they had 36 votes lined up against final bonus passage, more than necessary to sustain a veto, Thomas replied that the 55 Senators who originally voted for Patman passage are holding firm, and some gains are promised. He said Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, has agreed to fly back from the Virgin Islands to vote for the Patman bill if needed. Early swearing in of former Representative Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, Senate successor to the late Bronson Cutting, will bring another vote, he contends.

The tall Oklahoman plans to withdraw today his motion for reconsideration of the last Patman bill vote. This technically would release the Patman bill from the Senate shelf it has adorned since passage, sending it automatically to the White House. The delay had been engineered in hopes of crystallizing Patman sentiment throughout the country and in Washington. Veterans' lobbies have brought terrific pressure to bear on Senators, and some have encountered difficulty at home because of their bonus vote.

There is still some sentiment in the Senate for going through with the Thomas reconsideration motion, withdrawing the Patman bill before the President has a chance to veto it, and substituting the Vinson cash payment bill. Thomas said, however, he is unwilling to co-operate in this plan.

It was learned yesterday that the bonus, the President's prospective message, and the pending NRA extension resolution, were chief among legislative items discussed with congressional leaders on their week-end fishing jaunt into Maryland. Senate leaders advised Mr. Roosevelt that passage of the NRA resolution, in its abbreviated form, providing only a ten-month extension instead of the two years asked by the President, would do much to facilitate slow-moving legislation. A July adjournment was held out as a likely possibility, if temporary NRA legislation is enacted in both Houses. The Senate will pass such a resolution with little debate, the President was told.

'Count' Seizure Bares Spurious Money Cache

Arrest of Victor Lustig Leads to $52,000 Hiding Place in New York.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 13.—Arrest of suave "Count" Victor Lustig—habitue of fashionable hotels, and accomplished linguist—today led Secret Service agents and police to $52,000 of counterfeit money cached in a Times Square subway locker.

The arrest ended more than six months of investigation by a squad of Treasury agents under Robert L. Godby, aided by the city's undercover detectives.

"Count" Lustig, with a record of 38 arrests in this country and abroad, was described by agents as one of the cleverest counterfeiters in the Nation. His ability to impregnate silk thread into suprious bills, police said, made detection of counterfeits difficult.

Held in $50,000 Bail.

He was held in $50,000 bail under a complaint naming him as "Robert V. Miller," pending arraignment before a United States commissioner tomorrow, when a date for hearing will be fixed. Unable to post a bond, he was locked up.

The "count," who dressed expensively but not ostentatiously and maintained an automobile and liveried chauffeur, was arrested at Seventy-fourth street and Broadway last night after he had been under constant surveillance for months.

His arrest was deferred frequently because agents never felt certain they would find counterfeit money on his person. Last night they pounced on him after he had been handed two traveling bags by a messenger.

The bags contained no spurious currency. He had none in his clothes. But a key was found in his wallet. It was to the B. M. T. locker, which was opened today.

$52,000 in Bad Money Found.

In the locker—allegedly that of Lustig, said to have been an intimate of Al Capone, Legs Diamond and Nicky Arnstein—the agents found the $52,000 in spurious $5, $10 and $20 bills, and a plate for pressing silk threads into bills and 20 steel plates of various denominations for printing the bills.

Detectives questioned Lustig about two unsolved murders committed near Bayside, Long Island, in 1932. Previously he had been questioned about the slayings but an order asking that he be picked up again was issued recently.

Police said Lustig is wanted in five States, including Illinois, where he was indicted last year in connection with a Chicago counterfeiting charge.

Sky Train Set for Hop From Miami to Havana

Two gliders, with Jack O'Meara, of New York, and E. Paul du Pont, of Wilmington, Del., at the controls, and Elwood Kein, of New York, piloting the tow plane, circled Miami, chiefly to test the intercommunicating telephone.

Swinging into the air at 9 a. m., weather permitting, the skytrain will follow the island chain southward to Key West, about 150 miles. Clearing customs there, the plane and its tow then will head out over the straits of Florida to the Cuban capital, 90 miles away.

Navy Air Fleet Takes Position With the 'Foe'

Secrecy About Armada Finally Lifted by Hawaii Officers.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard U. S. S. Pennsylvania, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, May 13.—Arrival of 43 naval planes at a point some 1,200 miles west of here after a great massed flight and a change in the high command of "White" naval forces were announced today as new orders were waited in the Navy's great war game on the Pacific Ocean.

The planes took off from Pearl Harbor Thursday and their progress was covered with deep official secrecy in simulation of actual war conditions.

Admiral Harris Laning took over control of the "White" fleet, while Admiral J. M. Reeves, who brought the main battle force here from San Pedro, Calif., will assume the role of chief umpire in the maneuvers involving a mighty armada of 153 vessels.

The airplane fleet, which arrived at an undisclosed point, joined outposts of the "Black" fleet, commanded by Vice Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn. Forces of this fleet, which oppose the "White" fleet in the war games, are concentrated somewhere near the Aleutian Islands of Alaska.

The "White" fleet successfully brought a train of 20 base supply ships under Rear Admiral W. T. Cluverius to Pearl Harbor. A large Marine expeditionary force with one aircraft carrier already has come more than half way across the Pacific from San Diego.

For the fleet's southern sector, the maneuvers have brought pleasant cruising, marred only by collision of the destroyers Lea and Sicard early Sunday morning with one death, and the fall of a Nevy airplane which killed another man.

Storm conditions in its area of the South Bering Sea, the world's greatest storm factory, indicate that cruisers, destroyers and other units of Admiral Hepburn's "Black" fleet have been buffeted by gales and swept by snowstorms.

Somewhere between Midway Island and Honolulu or to the north a "zero hour" contact of opposing forces is due, but when or how it will occur is something the commanders of the "White" and "Black" fleets do not know.

Cooper Trial Off Again As Witness Is Absent

Absence from the city of a Government witness yesterday brought about another postponement of the trial of Col. Wade H. Cooper, former president of the closed Commercial National Bank who is under indictment on a charge of misapplying funds of the institution.

Col. Cooper, who has been pressing for a chance to vindicate himself, was in court when Assistant United States Attorney Irvin Goldstein asked Justice James M. Proctor to grant a continuance to Wednesday, so an important witness, now in Philadelphia, can be on hand.

He announced that William E. Leahy, attorney for the militant banker, had consented to the postponement.

Actress Tearfully Testifies Of Her Jilting by English Peer

By the Associated Press.

London, May 13.—Comely little Angela Joyce, "Miss England of 1930," dabbed a handkerchief to tear-filled eyes today as she told a court hearing her heart-balm suit that she had "suffered mental torture that led to my breakdown" because she was jilted by young Lord Revelstoke.

The 24-year-old peer, in black coat and striped trousers, took the witness stand a short time later to deny he ever had proposed to the young actress, either in her bedroom, as she said, or anywhere else.

Crowds lined up outside the courtroom, hoping to gain admission.

Landlady Testifies.

Miss Joyce's only witness was Mary Whittal, owner of the apartment building where the actress lived. She testified that in the presence of the couple she had commented that they "apparently are to be married," and that Revelstoke appeared "to acquiesce."

On another visit to the girl's flat, the witness said, Miss Joyce told her she wanted to borrow a frying pan "to show Robin I'll make him a useful wife as well as an ornamental one."

Revelstoke, who said he could not remember ever having met Mrs. Whittall, denied everything except that he borrowed money from the plaintiff while he was a student at Cambridge.

He denied having written to her since his Cambridge days came to a close in June, 1931.

Revelstoke still was on the witness stand when the hearing adjourned for the day.

He testified that when Miss Joyce brought up the subject of marriage, he told her he was not interested.

The plaintiff, who was on the stand for 90 minutes, testified Revelstoke proposed to her once while he was in her bedroom. She said she accepted the proposal then.

Angela said the nobleman called her "Teedles" and she called him "Boodles." Not once, but several times, she said, he asked her to marry him and she was always willing.

"Let's get married Angela. I can do what I like now," she quoted him as saying in her recounting of the alleged scene in the bedroom. She broke into tears at one point.

A telegram from Revelstoke to the actress, asking her to send him a kiss by wire, was read at the opening of the day's session.

"Send me a kiss by wire, honey," the witness read, "my heart's on fire. Every ounce of love. Signed Robin."

Postoffice Strikes At Georgian Critic

By the Associated Press.

The market bulletin of the Georgia Agriculture Department, in which State Agriculture Commissioner Tom Linder recently suggested "secession," appeared in danger last night of losing its postoffice privileges.

The office of the third assistant postmaster general said it had written the Atlanta postmaster the publication did not conform with the law under which such State bulletins must "promote the interest of the State Agriculture Department" in order to enjoy second class or poundage rates.

Should the bulletin be reclassified as a political organ, the postage would be 1 cent a copy, while under the present rate about 30 copies are sent for 1½ cents.

Evicted Tenant Wins Suit for Rain Damage

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed a judgment given an evicted tenant whose furniture was ruined when deputy United States marshals carried it from a house and left it on the sidewalk during a driving rainstorm.

The tenant brought suit in the Municipal Court for $950. He was given a judgment for $250, from which an appeal was noted.

In sustaining the verdict, Justice William Hitz wrote that the marshals should have given the tenant more time to get out of the house.

Capt. Hoddinott Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Retired Ship Master Held New York-Bahamas Sailing Record.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Md., May 13.—Funeral services for Capt. William Simon Hoddinott, retired sailing ship master, were arranged for Wednesday afternoon. He died at his home today after a prolonged illness.

Capt. Hoddinott, aged 83, was one of the best known citizens of Cambridge and Dorchester County. He sailed principally between New York, Baltimore and the West Indies. One of his passages between New York and the Bahamas set a speed record for sailing craft which has never been beaten by any type of ship.

He was born in Harpers Ferry, W. Va., and is survived by his wife and six children. Funeral services will be held in Zion Church Wednesday, with interment in Old Trinity Church Cemetery, Cambridge.

Court Assures Yale Campbell's Riches

Disposition of Fur Estate Upheld at St. Louis.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 13.—Pelts stripped during pioneer days to build the Midwestern fur empire of Robert Campbell, noted explorer and Indian trader, ultimately will enrich Yale University by $1,200,000 under a decision handed down in circuit court here today.

Upholding the will of the late Hugh Campbell, son of the founder of the family millions, Judge O'Neill Ryan ruled the fortune of the millionaire bachelor recluse will go to the university upon the death of his mentally incompetent brother, Hazlett.

Dying in 1931, Hugh Campbell, who remained unmarried to care for his invalid brother, left his fortune in trust for Hazlett during his lifetime and provided that upon his death it was to go to Yale to erect a building in memory of a third brother, James, a Yale graduate.

Suit to break the will and have its principal bequeathed solely to Hazlett was filed by the invalid brother's legal guardian, Anton Schuler.

In dismissing the suit today, Judge Ryan said it had not been filed in the interest of Hazlett Campbell but "in the interests of several cousins who wished to have Hugh Campbell's estate added to Hazlett's $1,800,000 so that they can claim $3,000,000 after Hazlett's death."

tor, the St. Mihiel offensive, the Meuse-Argonne offensive (Champagne and Argonne forest) and in the march of the allied army to the Rhine. He returned to the United States in August, 1919. Meanwhile, his acting rank of colonel had been made permanent.

Was Military Governor.

In 1921 Gen. Lee was ordered to Santo Domingo in command of the Second Marine Brigade, on a mission to pacify the country, assist in the establishment of a constitutional government, and to withdraw the Marines. He completed this mission and withdrew his brigade in 1924. From October, 1922, until the Marines left, Gen. Lee served as military governor of the country, the only Marine officer ever to hold the post.

For his service during the war, Gen. Lee holds four Second Division citations. He was awarded the Croix de Guerre by the French government for gallantry in the battles near Cresnes and Noroy and three palms for his leadership in other engagements. He was also awarded the Army Distinguished Service Medal and the Navy Distinguished Service Medal by the President; the Silver Star Medal by the War Department, and a citation by Gen. John J. Pershing. He was also made a member of the French Legion of Honor.

During his 35 years of service, Gen. Lee spent more than seven years at sea and more than nine years on foreign stations. He had seen service in Haiti, Cuba, Santo Domingo, Panama, Nicaragua, the Philippines, Mexico, China, France and Germany.

In 1912 Gen. Lee married Henrietta Mercedes Saltmarsh, of Pensacola, Fla. He is survived by her and by five children, Harry, jr., Ernest, Mercedes, Evelina and Laura. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Charity Gets Bulk Of Du Pont Riches

R. S. Huidekoper, of Capital, Is Executor.

By the Associated Press.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 13.—Most of the millions of Alfred I. du Pont will go to charity, his will filed in probate court here today showed.

Cration of a charitable foundation to be known as the Nemours Foundation is provided. The objectives of the foundation will be the relief of human suffering, care and treatment of crippled children, old men and women, particularly old couples.

No estimate of the value of the estate was contained in the will, which also made specific provisions for members of the family and employes who have been in the service of du Pont or his Florida financial organization, Almours Securities, for one year. Most of the requests are annuities from the income of the estate.

The widow, a son-in-law, Reginald S. Huidehoper, Washington, and Edward Ball, Jacksonville, a brother-in-law, were named executors.

Du Pont died at Epping Forest, his home here, April 29.

Policies of U. S. On Gold Praised By Morgenthau

Nation Willing to Assist in World Stabilization, Secretary Says.

of our recovery program and is now the spearhead as we advance steadily toward our goal." Since the dollar in January, 1934, was devalued to 59.06 per cent of its former gold content, this country has enjoyed the soundest currency in the world, he asserted.

"It is, in fact, so sound," Mr. Morgenthau added, "that we find gold flowing back into this country to take refuge in our dollars; not to pay balances, but to find safety."

He cited the improvement in the country's foreign trade as evidence of the efficacy of the Roosevelt monetary policy and pointed out that in the case of 29 of the country's largest industrial corporations, export sales in 1934 were 59 per cent greater than in 1932; employment had increased by 204,000 persons or by 34 per cent between the two years, while a combined loss of $121,000,000 in 1932 was turned into combined profits of $128,000,000 in 1934.

Followed Fraser Report.

Mr. Morgenthau made his speech a few hours after Leon Fraser, retiring president of the Bank for International Settlements, in his last annual report declared that stabilization of currencies on a gold basis was necessary to the recovery of world trade.

But that had no reference to Mr. Morgenthau's speech, which was planned several weeks ago. There was no special occasion for the address, it was explained at the Treasury. For some time, it was explained, the Secretary of the Treasury has been planning to make an address that would clarify the Administration's monetary program and its attitude toward stabilization.

In the Treasury the speech was described as the last of a trilogy which Mr. Morgenthau has made to inform the country of vital matters under his jurisdiction. The first speech in this trilogy was made last August when he discussed the Treasury's balance sheet and undertook to show that despite the heavy deficits the Government's ultimate indebtedness had not been greatly increased. The second was delivered several weeks ago when Mr. Morgenthau hailed the success of the Treasury's $8,000,000,000 refunding operation and the decrease in interest rates.

Message to Other Lands.

There was no doubt that the Administration regarded last night's address as of the utmost importance, not only as a reply to those who have criticized the Roosevelt monetary policy but as a message to the financial ministries of other nations.

Mr. Morgenthau spoke over Nation-wide networks of both the National and Columbia broadcasting chains, affording him unusual facilities of getting his views before the country—facilities available to few persons besides the President.

The Treasury chief at the outset of his address announced he would eschew any effort at a complicated discussion of the theory of money but would undertake to tell what was done—why—and the effect. He briefly cited the country's position in international trade and finance before the World War and in the years that followed.

Morgenthau's speech, however, was devoted almost wholly to the necessity for and the result of the gold policies. At a time when many persons in the financial world are gravely perplexed over the Administration's silver policy, he glossed over this subject with barely a passing reference.

He said "we are also endeavoring to restore silver to greater usefulness as a monetary metal," adding "it is the money of a large part of the world's population" that it is much better to swell our monetary reserve with the white metal by taking it in exchange for commodities than to sell our goods for worthless promises to pay. He gave no further enlightenment on the Administration's silver plans or the direction in which it is headed.

Denounces '32 Speculators.

Morgenthau slapped several times indirectly at the Hoover Administration and at one point contended that the previous Administration facing the financial crisis of 1932 "stubbornly refused to take action, evidently under the impression that that was a proud achievement, when it was obviously economic suicide."

He also contemptuously denounced those who engaged in speculation during the 1932 crisis, especially those who sold the dollar short, asserting that "they were not all foreigners either." But the citizenship of "such snipers is not important since their dominant trait is an utter lack of patriotism or loyalty to any nation," he added. Such persons would "sell civilization itself short if they could, and for all they knew at the time, they might have been doing so," he asserted.

After reciting the monetary steps taken by President Roosevelt and pointing out the improvement of the last year in the domestic and foreign trade fields, Morgenthau predicted a continued upturn in world trade.

Reminds U. S. of Twenties.

Morgenthau took cognizance of several criticisms of the present monetary policy in relation to foreign trade and undertook to answer them. He warned against selling abroad vast quantities of goods which the buyers can not pay for unless we lend them money, citing the experience of the "roaring twenties."

He denied that this country was stripping the world of gold, contending that not has this country more gold than ever before but that the world supply of the yellow metal is increasing rapidly. Production now proceeds at the rate of 31,000,000,000 a year and "will continue to increase," he asserted. France has more gold now than in 1928 and Great Britain more gold than in 1931, he asserted.

In reply to the criticism that this Government is piling up huge gold and silver stocks that will become sterile, Morgenthau contended that such monetary reserves make a better backing for currency than defaulted loans, which might also be described as sterile.

The Text of Secretary Morgenthau's Address

The complete text of Secretary Morgenthau's address last night on "The American Dollar" follows:

It is my purpose, tonight, to state a few simple facts which, I hope, will contribute to a clearer understanding of the monetary policy of the United States. I shall not enter into complicated discussion of the theory of money. I shall merely tell you what was done, why, and the effect.

In order to examine the record in logical sequence, it is necessary to review, briefly, the background of our present problems. Foreign trade has, from the beginning, been an important factor in the business of the American people. During the 18 years immediately preceding the outbreak of the World War, we exported $31,000,000,000 worth of merchandise, almost all of which was paid for with goods and services that we received. The net gold movement to us was relatively small, amounting to $174,000,000. Foreigners invested in the United States, during those 18 years, $2,000,000,000; Americans invested abroad $1,000,000,000. At the outbreak of the World War, the American people owed the world $3,000,000,000 more than foreigners owed us. That was what the ledger showed on July 1, 1914.

With the beginning of the World War, a tremendous change took place. From July of 1914 to the end of 1922, we exported $47,000,000,000 worth of merchandise. Much of this was paid for with goods, services and gold, but there remained due us a balance of $19,000,000,000, for which we took mostly promises to pay.

Points to Contrast.

Now note the contrast. In the previous 18-year period, with our country one of the world's attractive fields for capital investment, we drew in about $1,000,000,000 net from abroad, but when we became a creditor nation, the net inflow of capital reached $19,000,000,000 in the eight years between the beginning of the World War and the end of 1922.

Nor did we stop there. We continued to export more than we imported, thus accumulating an additional $2,500,000,000 of net foreign investment by the end of 1929.

If we deduct from the grand total of our loans and investments abroad all of the loans and credits that foreigners have here and then examine the status of our net foreign investment, we find that an amount equal to two-thirds of it is today in partial or complete default.

There you have the background, from an American point of view, when in 1931 things headed toward a crisis all over the world. Credit and currency difficulties which had been spreading throughout Europe came to a head in the spring of that year. On September 21, 1931, Great Britain suspended gold payments. Norway, Sweden and Denmark followed within a week. Japan acted in December. Other nations either went off gold or took equivalent action to control their foreign exchange.

Exports Drop One-Half.

As the nations went off gold, the value of their currencies in international exchange dropped sharply, and our customers found it difficult to get dollars with which to pay for American products. They could trade with each other to some extent, but they bought from us only what they could not do without. The physical volume of world export trade dropped about one-fourth from 1929 to 1932, but our exports dropped almost one-half in the same period.

During 1932, England increased her share of the world trade by 16 per cent over the previous year; and Japan by 29 per cent. To say that we merely shared in world-wide misfortune is not entirely accurate, because our share included an additional penalty for remaining on the old gold standard.

While total world export trade declined, those countries which promptly went off the gold increased their share of what remained.

Some of the countries became alarmed because they could see the bottoms of their gold bins. They and others exerted pressure to have foreign credits called home. Sometimes these credits responded by going in the other direction just as fast as they could travel. Gold was stampeding from country to country, always leaving the place where it was needed, and rarely doing its new hosts any good.

Hits Former Administration.

In January of 1932, gold began to leave the United States in alarming amounts. This was fair notice to all concerned that our turn was next. The panic was knocking at our door, but nothing effective was done to avert it. Europeans knew that we could not maintain our currency at the old gold level without a further ruinious deflation of our prices, trade, and industrial activity. Facing that crisis, the previous Administration stubbornly refused to take action, evidently under the impression that that was a proud achievement, when it was obviously economic suicide.

Foreigners had left here more than a billion dollars to enjoy our high interest rates and prospects of quick profits. Seeing what was happening, they judged that it was high time to take this money home. They did so, and the panic was on. We could not offer them their defaulted paper when they called for their money. We could not even offer them their paper that was not in default. We had to let them have the money on long-term loans, and they had short-term loans here. Our long-term paper was not due, while their short-term loans could be collected and their stocks sold. They could demand gold for every dollar due, and that is what they did. Thus it happened that, in the first six months of 1932, we witnessed the incredible spectacle of gold going out of the world's greatest creditor nation on every ship . . . nearly all of it to nations that were in our debt. Still nothing effective was done to avert the disaster.

Stupendous as the gold movement was, we could not ship fast enough to meet the demand, and speculators took advantage of the situation to sell the dollar. They were not all foreigners, either. However, the citizenship of these snipers is not important since their dominant trait is an utter lack of patriotism or loyalty to any nation. They would sell civilization itself short if they could, and for all they knew at that time, they might have been doing so.

Our loss of gold, added to the calamity of declining trade, falling commodity prices and widespread unemployment, caused bewilderment and then panic. The disaster swept over our country with the fury of a hurricane. Within a few months our financial structure was in a state of collapse. In the month of February, 1933, and up to the time President Roosevelt took office, about half a billion dollars in gold and nearly two billion dollars in currency were withdrawn from our banks. They were closing, not individually, but by whole States at a time. That was the situation when this Administration came into office. On taking his oath, Mr. Roosevelt assumed both the duties of President and receiver for a concern . . . the richest on earth . . . but on that tragic day face to face with insolvency.

We were headed for disaster unless the run on banks could be stopped, and our gold reserves reassembled. Both objectives were promptly achieved. The President's proclamation closed the banks, ending the run, and the gold was ordered into the custody of Uncle Sam under penalties. Those two acts met the domestic emergency. An embargo on gold exports was declared and that ended the outward flow. This effectively took us off the old gold standard and the dollar began to adjust itself to the realities of the world situation.

Thirty-first to Act.

In going off gold, we were not the first, we were the thirty-first. The operation was completed in January of 1934 when the dollar was revalued and set at 59.06 per cent of its former gold content. Since that time we have enjoyed the soundest currency in the world. It is, in fact, so sound that we find gold flowing back into this country to take refuge in our dollar; not to pay balances but to find safety. Some of the same sharpshooters who personally conducted the flight of gold from this country during 1932 and the first two months of 1933 are now bringing it back.

But let us return to the record and see what our new dollar did for our foreign trade. I shall take all three of the commonly used yardsticks and apply them.

First—Measured in physical volume, the United States increased its export trade during 1934 as compared with both 1932 and 1933.

Second—Measured in dollar value the United States increased its foreign trade in 1934 as compared with 1932 and 1933.

And, finally, measured by percentage share in the physical volume of total world trade, we again show an increase over both 1932 and 1933.

Less Cotton, More Cash.

In 1934 we shipped one-third less cotton than in 1932; but . . . we got 7 per cent more money for it.

We also got a higher price for our wheat, but the drought can account for most of the increase.

Our wheat exports have also been affected by quotas and embargoes. Some of our former customers prefer, for reasons of national policy, to grow their own wheat, regardless of price.

Because of these unusual factors, I can trace with accuracy and fairness the full effect of our monetary policy upon agricultural exports.

The physical volume of all our finished manufactures exported in 1934 increased 37 per cent compared with 1932; semimanufacturers increased 47 per cent in the same period.

Auto Market Restored.

To be concrete, let us take a specific article, such as the automobile. In 1930 we exported 238,000 cars. In 1932, with our country one of the very few remaining on the old gold standard, we exported 65,000 cars. In 1933 under the Roosevelt monetary program our exports shot up to 107,000 cars. Last year they more than doubled; they came right back to where they had been in 1930.

During the disastrous period of declining sales, the world still wanted American automobiles but it could not get the dollars to pay for them. Nothing startling developed in the way of foreign competition; our dollar prices had not gone up; and quality remained just as good, or improved.

We simply had an interim during which we could not sell because the dollar was too high in relation to other world currencies; this Administration lowered the gold content of the dollar and the foreign market is being restored to our automobile manufacturers with such rapidity that the benefits are already Nation-wide.

Conducted Survey.

Some people have been telling you that there simply could not be any benefit in restoring trade by bringing our money into reasonable relation with the other moneys of the world. I decided to get the answer to that question from the manufacturers themselves. They ought to know best. I asked the executive heads of 29 large representative firms whose products are a cross-section of our industry to tell me.

First—Whether they are getting any more foreign trade.

Second—Whether employment in their plants has increased.

Then I examined their published reports to find out whether they were making any profits. Here are the combined answers:

To the first question—whether they are getting any more foreign trade—they answer "yes." In 1934, which was the first full year under the Roosevelt monetary program, their export sales were 59 per cent greater than in 1932.

To the second question—whether the number of their employes has increased—they also answer "yes." Two hundred and four thousand more men and women were working in their plants during 1934 than in 1932, an increase of 34 per cent.

Answer: "Yes."

To the third question . . . whether they are making any money . . . the answer is again "yes." Their combined loss in 1932 was $121,000,000; their combined profits for 1934 were in excess of $128,000,000. These figures include their losses and earnings on domestic sales also. Domestic sales followed substantially the same course as their foreign sales. When foreign sales hit rock bottom so did domestic sales, and when foreign sales recovered under the Roosevelt monetary program domestic sales recovered with them. So there you have the testimony of the best qualified witnesses.

Under the monetary policy of this Administration, they lifted themselves out of a deficit in excess of $100,000,000 to earnings in excess of $100,000,000, and employment increased by more than 200,000.

There are many indications that world trade will continue to increase. Our monetary policy in relation to foreign trade is not intended to capture business, but merely to protect our normal share. So far from engaging in a competitive devaluation race with the other nations, we held out to them a currency of such steadiness that the normal tendency may very well be for the rest of the world to move gradually toward practical exchange stabilization. If that can be achieved, the final step should come easily and almost of its own accord. Unless somebody rocks the boat that would be the natural course.

Cites 1920 Experience.

In estimating the future of our foreign trade in relation to our monetary policy, we may as well face the question whether we wish to sell abroad vast quantities of goods that the buyers can not pay for, unless we lend them the money. Of course, if we want more paper there are plenty of international bankers to arrange the details. We felt rich on that paper during the roaring 20s. Now we know better.

In place of paper, under the operation of our new monetary policy, we have been receiving large shipments of gold and silver. Some of it came to settle trade balances, and some represents capital seeking refuge in our sound currency. Various economists will tell you that this policy is likely to end our foreign trade; that first we strip the world of gold and then our foreign trade dies. But we are not stripping the world of gold. We have more gold than ever before, but the world supply of monetary gold is also increasing rapidly. Production now proceeds at the rate of about one billion dollars annually, and will continue to increase. The great nations are restoring their reserves. Meanwhile, percentages of the total held by the various nations show no alarming changes. We had 41.7 per cent of all the monetary gold in 1922 and now we have 38.8 per cent. France had 8.4 per cent in 1922 and now she has 24.8. Great Britain lost gold heavily before she suspended gold payments in 1931, but since then has increased her share from 5.2 per cent to 7.2 per cent.

With increasing gold production and hundreds of millions of dollars worth of the yellow metal being brought out of hiding, surely some of it can be used to pay balances. We are also endeavoring to restore silver to greater usefulness as a monetary metal. It is the money of a large part of the world's population.

Objection to our course is sometimes based upon the assertion that we would bring vast quantities of the world's gold and silver here, only to be locked up in the United States Treasury . . . the phrase commonly used is that the gold and silver thus become sterile. At least, however, it goes to swell our monetary reserves. Loans in default are not very good backing for currency; indeed they might, without undue asperity, be described as also sterile. If we must choose between the two, this Administration elects payment of international balances in monetary metals.

You have heard the argument that we should stabilize by declaring that we will not change the present gold content of the dollar. Some even go so far as to say that the other nations would certainly follow, if we took the lead. If we launched out alone on such a course, it would put us right back where we were in 1932, and offer a tempting invitation for the others not to follow, but again to take advantage of our disadvantage.

"Won't Be an Obstacle."

We realize the importance of world prosperity and will evade no opportunity to assist in that direction . . . except the ever-present opportunity to donate prosperity at our own expense.

In conclusion, I should like to summarize this statement by saying:

First—You have an absolutely sound dollar.

Second—The monetary policy of this Administration rescued us from chaos; held the fort through the most trying period of our recovery program, and is now the spearhead as we advance steadily toward our goal.

Third—Of the great trading nations that revalued their currencies, we were the last, until quite recently, when Belgium joined us.

The world should know that when it is ready to seek foreign exchange stabilization, Washington will not be an obstacle. Our position was that of an innocent bystander who suffered untold loss in a fight that he did not start, and from which he could not escape. Why should we be singled out and admonished that the moral duty to restore order is primarily ours? Before we make any commitments, we must be sure that we will not lose what we have regained. We are not unwilling to stabilize. However, if the great trading nations elect to continue under the present absence of rules we are no longer at a disadvantage. We revalued our currency no more than was necessary and we can go either way. Our hands are untied.

Table of Business Gains Cited By Morgenthau in Currency Talk

The following comparative summary of domestic sales, export sales, profits and employment between 1931 and 1934, based on reports from 29 companies listed below, to which Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau referred in his radio speech last night, was prepared by the Treasury and made public as an appendix to his speech.

Silver Exportation Prohibited by Italy

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 13.—Exportation of silver from Italy in any form whatever was prohibited by a decree published tonight in the official gazette.

Travelers going abroad will be permitted to take out not more than 50 lire (about $4) in silver. Sending out of the metal in ingots, lumps, powder or pieces, such as jewelry and money, is strictly forbidden.

Financial and political circles professed to know no reason for the sudden prohibition. They pointed out, however, that the high price for silver in the United States might lead to heavy selling of Italy's supply there.

Silver is the medium of exchange in Italy's East African colonies, and the sending of more than 100,000 soldiers there and other preparations for a possible expedition against Ethiopia have made necessary a greatly increased amount of the metal.

Dr. Glueck Backs Aggressive Youth

Cooperative, Not Competitive, Society Seen.

The child who enacts his aggressive impulses, often to the despair of his elders, found a champion yesterday in Dr. Bernard Glueck, New York psychiatrist.

Allowing the young to overcome their own difficulties, he said, would enable them to grow up into a cooperative, rather than competitive, society. If this end were accomplished, it would be "the swiftest way to eliminate the evils that beset society today."

Dr. Glueck's views on children's mental hygiene were expressed before the child welfare committee of the Council of Social Agencies, meeting at the Y. W. C. A. He stressed the point that poverty, suffering and other social scourges are the works not of nature but of mankind and that proper guidance of the young would go a long way toward eliminating those evils.

The two public agencies which are doing the most in promoting his theory that independence of action in the child will develop a cooperative society are the Society of Mental Hygiene and the Institute of Child Guidance, Dr. Glueck said.

Worker Badly Injured As Steam Pipe Explodes

Wilson L. Jones, 35, of 1516 Wilson boulevard, Clarendon, Va., suffered severe burns on his face, hands and legs when a steam pipe he was repairing with an acetylene torch at the Munitions Building exploded yesterday afternoon.

His condition was reported serious at Emergency Hospital, where he was taken in an ambulance.

Long's Demand For Farley Quiz Gains Support

Two Democrats Join in Movement for Senate Inquiry.

Kalette. "At that time she demanded $10,000 under threats that she would make trouble."

Bailey objected to investigating, saying, the next time there would be "another lady and another affidavit."

Demanded $25,000.

Miss Humphreys said in her affidavit that Watts, who began with a salary of $12,000 with the firm, had exhibited a telegram to the company offering him a position in the Treasury. Watts, she added, said he could turn Government contracts through this job to Stewart competitors and would do so unless he were given a three-year contract at $25,000 a year.

She said all of his demands were met, but that the company distrusted hi mand ordered her to listen to his telephone conversations. She said Watts was often called by Farley or his secretaries and all conversations "covered a wide range of matters having to do with the manipulating of Government business and grants and contracts."

She said Farley had "managed to grab all the papers and correspondence" between Secretary Ickes, a man named Green, and Louis Glavis, Ickes' investigator, a charge on which Long had this to say:

"And here I was waiting three weeks to get all those papers. A fine chance I had with the papers in Farley's New York office."

He referred to his request upon Ickes, in a Senate-approved resolution, for a report on any connections between Farley and the Stewart Co. Ickes reported he had found nothing of that kind in his investigations of PWA matters.

Files Destroyed.

After listing other charges as a result of her listening to telephone conversations, Miss Humphrey said after Farley got the Ickes papers "the entire files of the said Stewart Co. were taken out and mostly destroyed and a new filing system installed on advance notice that investigation would likely soon occur."

Bailey said Long had failed to produce witnesses before the Post-office Committee when asked to do so and contended the minority report offered no basis for voting an investigation because the Senate had no right to investigate merely "to allay suspicion in the public mind."

"We are not here to allay suspicion," Bailey said. "We can't have an investigation simply because the circulation of charges has created suspicion in the public mind."

Questioned by Wheeler, Bailey said if he believed Long's charges were true he "not only would be for an investigation, but for an impeachment."

Wheeler denied the inquiry would set a precedent and warned that "you never destroy faith in government except by soft-pedaling corruption in high places." The Montana Senator said if the charges had been made against him he would want an investigation of them.

Belgium Reduces Lard Import Tax

Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, Belgian Ambassador to the United States, yesterday informed the State Department that his government had reduced the import license tax on lard from 100 francs to 50 francs per 100 kilos, making the Belgian import charge on American lard approximately three-fourths of 1 cent per pound.

The Belgian action was voluntary and no return concession was demanded. The ambassador's announcement created a pleasant surprise at the State Department, especially since Belgium in the reciprocal trade agreement which effective May 1 granted a generous quota on American lard.

The State Department pointed out that the 50 per cent reduction in the import license tax on lard will be of benefit to American hog producers since the United States in 1933 exported 15,617,835 pounds of lard to Belgium.

Ellenbogen Gone, Rent Hearing Off

Author's Absence Delays Meetings Until Thursday.

The District rent hearing, scheduled to be resumed this morning, was postponed yesterday until Thursday because of the absence of Representative Henry Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, chairman of the sub-committee and author of the bill under consideration.

Opponents of the bill to establish a rent commission under emergency legislation will testify when the hearing is resumed, the first session last Friday being devoted to evidence in support of the measure.

Postponement of the hearing will prevent the House District Committee from calling up the bill on the next District day as the committee meets on Wednesday and District day probably will be held on Friday.

Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, canceled a meeting of his committee, scheduled this afternoon, because of a slight illness. No definite date was fixed.

Watered Stock On Farms Only

EVERY corporate business big enough to be conspicuous some time or other faces the charge of "watered stock."
To a dairyman or a milkman the idea of diluting his product or his securities is particularly obnoxious.
In developing the corporate structure of this company stock in other companies has been bought at times at a figure in excess of the value of the buildings and equipment.
"Intangibles" made up the difference.
Never has the price been out of line with the earnings of the purchased company.
Never has it been necessary to increase the price of milk to the consumer in order to make a fair return on stock acquired by purchase.
There is real value back of every share of this company's stock.
It has no watered stock in the paper sense.

Control Of Rents.

If there was any question that an acute housing shortage exists in Washington it has been dissipated by the House sub-committee hearings on the Ellenbogen rent commission bill. Residential construction here, as in virtually all other communities, was reduced to negligible proportions during the worst years of the depression. In advance of any large revival, thousands of people have flocked to the Capital City to obtain Government jobs. It requires no insight to realize that these two tendencies have brought about a local emergency in housing.

There seems to be nothing in the situation, however, that would justify the attitude of Representative Ellenbogen toward witnesses who seek to testify in opposition to his bill. It appears that the sub-committee had decided to make a favorable report on the bill even without granting real estate interests a hearing. When the hearing was accorded, Mr. Ellenbogen insisted on limiting the testimony in what seems a very arbitrary manner.

If a rental control bill is enacted, its successful operation will depend largely upon cooperation of Washington real estate concerns. From a tactical viewpoint it would be far more constructive to enlist their support than to arouse their antagonism. Certainly their arguments and suggestions should at least be considered before any bill is approved for enactment. Even if Congress wishes to consider only the welfare of those who rent their living quarters, it should nevertheless analyze the views of local real estate men. For future building to relieve the current housing shortage will be greatly affected by the opportunity for attractive investment in property of this sort.

James Ring points out that new construction was in no way curtailed while the wartime rent commission was operating. That is one indication that its measures were reasonable. Assurance ought to be given that any rent control agency that may now be authorized will similarly attack the problem from a constructive rather than a punitive viewpoint.

Seduction To Absurdity.

Sweet are the uses of absurdity, particularly in cases of wishful thinking. Wishes are not horses, as the nursery jingle somewhat wistfully points out. But there are always feather-headed legions who will confirm Caesar's observation that men believe only what they wish to believe. Therefore, when a million or more persons convince themselves that they can all profit by copying five letters and mailing one dime, the only effective restorative to reason is the device of the reduction to absurdity. And this is precisely what the merry students at the University of California have done.

In place of dimes, the recipients of chain letters on the Berkeley campus are requested to send dames (sic). Men students are directed to make a date (to borrow from the inordinately unromantic jargon of the undergraduate) with the girl whose name tops a list of five in the letter. Then, deleting her name, they are to add a new one at the foot of the list and send copies along to five friends requesting them to do likewise.

The senior who is credited with thinking up the scheme has figured that if all the 10,000 men at the university co-operate in the matter, each of the 6,000 co-eds will be dated (o, tempora! o, verba!) 26,000 times. In all, there are theoretically 156,000,000 social engagements to be arranged through this single chain. A practical sorority girl has calculated that at the rate of one a day she might be able to manage her quota in 70 years. She adds, however, that although the chain is already well under way, and although her name is known to be on at least one list, no telephone calls or orchids have as yet been directed to her.

At that, she should not be downcast. Thousands upon thousands of her supposedly less ingenuous fellow countrymen are in the same disillusionment. Only they are not lacking merely escorts; in their cases they are minus at least five stamps and one dime—a two-bit loss for two-bit minds.

News Of Omission.

"No news is good news" is an axiom of such long standing that it needs no elaboration. But when no news is good news in the newspaper sense, it merits a comment. Such is the case in an item published in this paper yesterday with the headline: "Death Takes Holiday From D. C. Streets." That one day's absence of fatalities from traffic accidents should be so unusual as to warrant a 30-point bold Bodoni head is a commentary not only on the security of the streets and highways, but also on what constitutes "news."

Stanley Walker, in his otherwise authoritative tome on the subject, says quite frankly that "probably there can be no exact definition of news." Noah Webster, never daunted, skewers it as "a report of a recent event; recent intelligence." A patient editor by the name of Amos Cummings, in attempting to coach a cub reporter, handed down what is perhaps the most famous interpretation of the Fourth Estate in his "man bites dog" parable.

Quite obviously, yesterday's story on the absence of death in the afternoon of a Washington Sabbath comes under Mr. Cummings' classification. It would be hard to find a more striking example of his theory. And therein lies the indictment of the motor menace—that tragedy on local streets should go by rote rather than by rarity to such an extent that mere absence of disaster is deemed "news."

A Dictator Dies.

It is an interesting coincidence that Marshal Josef Pilsudski died on the ninth anniversary of the coup d'etat which made him the unchallenged dictator of Poland.

But a much more important conjunction of events is the fact that the life of the great Polish leader closed on the very eve of the French foreign minister's arrival in Moscow. Laval and Litvinoff have a more crystallized Polish situation to consider now that Pilsudski is dead. For his highly independent policy emphasized that uncertainty in central Europe which has done so much to bring Russia and France together.

None can predict with assurance the changes in domestic policy which will result now that Pilsudski's firm hand has slipped from the steering wheel of Poland's national destiny. But the strong probability is that internal and external pressures will force a more definite alignment, either with or against Germany. It was Pilsudski's achievement to reach an amicable accord with the Reich, without definitely opposing the Franco-Russian effort to encircle Hitlerism with a ring of steel. Of late, however, there have been signs that Poland can not indefinitely maintain this noncommittal attitude. And with Pilsudski's death the efforts to make Warsaw take a less equivocal position will be intensified.

The irascible old autocrat found Poland a geographical expression and worked wonders in welding discordant elements into the framework of national stability. To a very large extent the biography of Pilsudski is the history of post-war Poland. From the convention of the first Polish Parliament, to the recent refusal to join a system of collective security directed against Germany, no major decision of national policy has been taken in Poland without the active or tacit consent of the marshal. Yet, in contrast to other dictators, he always preferred to dominate without holding executive office. Apparently his death deprives the country only of an able minister of war. With both a President and a premier in office there would seem to be no crisis. But in fact everyone realizes that the real ruler of Poland is dead.

Political repercussions entirely aside, it will be interesting to see how Poland will make her transition from the "dictatorship by proxy" which Pilsudski exercised. The passing of the chief of state must always place a grave strain on the stability of any dictatorship, whether open or disguised. Pilsudski sought to minimize this strain by leaving the elements of the parliamentary regime ostensibly intact, his avoidance of titular office being just the reverse of Mussolini's practice of consolidating executive posts in his own hands.

Theoretically this should mean that the death of the veteran Polish patriot will not greatly disturb the arbitrary domestic tranquility which he enforced. And since Pilsudski had for some time been an invalid, the transition was really under way before his death. The greatest tribute to the dead dictator would be a quiet passage of authority to President Moscicki. For no dictatorship has proved successful until it has demonstrated that national life can continue undisturbed when the dictator dies.

Germany's Export Drive.

In line with its announced determination to buy no more goods from abroad than it can sell, the Nazi government is about to launch an intensive export drive, with the aid of subsidies. It is estimated that 1,000,000,000 marks will be required this year to effect a balance between exports and needed imports. Part of this total, 250,000,000 marks, Germany hopes to secure at the expense of foreign investors by acquiring German bonds abroad at bargain prices, and applying the profits to the financing of "additional exports." The rest of the expense, however, must be shouldered by domestic industries.

According to Dr. Schacht, industry is benefiting from high internal prices and from the government's work creation and rearmament programs. In order to continue to obtain these benefits, essential raw materials must be bought abroad, since the substitutes available within the country are extremely high priced and unsatisfactory. Industrial activity is at present over one-third greater than it was two years ago, according to the German Institute of Business Research. Consequently, the raw material requirements of industry have increased greatly.

Instead of emancipating herself from dependence upon foreign countries, Germany finds that her recovery program has increased her unfavorable merchandise balance. That is the reason for this latest attempt to subsidize exports on a huge scale with funds supplied by industry. Under Germany's present policies, economic and political, she is virtually forced to resort to dumping or else turn to currency devaluation. The latter expedient would add to the difficulties of financing imports, while the former is certain to encourage retaliation on the part of countries confronted by the competition of subsidized exports.

In short, no matter how ingenious Dr. Schacht may be in devising new ways of making Nazi domestic policies work, he cannot accomplish the miracle of converting a country dependent upon outside sources of supply into an economically independent nation.

Inflation Psychology.

The Guaranty Trust Co. of New York declares in a statement addressed to its stockholders that passage of the Administration's banking bill would mean removal of the final barriers to the kind of disastrous inflation that led to collapse of the German mark.

If, as alleged, the real purpose of the bill is to assist the Government to finance budgetary deficits, the Guaranty's attack misses fire. It ought to have been aimed at those who direct and promote the Administration's spending policies instead of at a legislative measure which, under normal conditions, would effect needed reforms in the Federal Reserve system.

Sentiment for inflation is always easy to arouse among the unthinking. Hence it is a disastrous matter when responsible public officials endeavor to create the impression that the appropriation of a couple more billions to meet the cost of bonus payments under the Patman bill is nothing to worry about. Within the past few days, Senator McAdoo and Chairman Jones, of the RFC, have both tried to minimize the effect of an issue of $2,000,000,000 of greenbacks, suggesting that this is a relatively small sum that would not in any way injure the Government's credit. This light-hearted indorsement of proposals that bestow huge and undeserved subsidies upon special classes is a direct invitation to other groups to come forward with similar requests.

The bonus, taken alone, might not seem so important in its purely financial aspects. But it happens to be one unjustified item in a long list of huge appropriations that have been covered by borrowing. Such deficit financing has brought the public debt far above the war-time maximum and the end is not yet in sight. The banking system has already been seriously weakened by the large proportion of assets invested in Government securities.

Under these conditions it would be dangerous for banks to reject new Government offerings, since such action would lead to a collapse of security values. Furthermore, if the Federal Reserve system were to refuse to co-operate in a policy of assisting the placement of Government issues, it would find itself confronted by a Treasury which occupies a dominant position in the money market.

In short, if the Government does not soon turn resolutely against the policy of deficit financing, the banks must either acquiesce, run the risk of being nationalized, or face the prospect of fiat money. There is no use trying to dodge unpleasant realities by pretending that a central banking organization, like the Federal Reserve system, could save the country from financial collapse if inflation psychology once gains the upper hand.

Governor Eccles, when testifying before the House Banking and Currency Committee, asserted emphatically that a "Congress that can appropriate money to carry out emergency needs, which create deficits, also has the power to create the means of providing that money in case the private banking system fails:" Consequently, he concludes that, whether wise or unwise, the Federal Reserve system should be in a position to finance continuing budgetary deficits. Heretical though this sounds, it is a frank recognition of an inescapable fact.

If the country is to be saved from uncontrollable inflation, whether in the form of printing press money or bank deposits created by Government borrowing, it must fight the source of the evil. It must stop the spendthrift proclivities of legislators and Government officials.

Since we've been knee-high to a mudhen the gagsters have been saying that a politician needs two hats—one to throw in the ring and one to talk through. To keep abreast of the times he now needs a third hat—one to pull rabbits out of.

From the Omaha World-Herald.

The Democratic women who convened in Omaha last week for the sessions of the National Institute of Government favorably impressed those who have long held that woman's participation in politics would be a good thing. The speeches, the discussions, the round-table talks were marked by freedom from mere hide-bound partisanship, and by concern over the humanitarian aspects of the national problems and proposed remedies.

When Miss Grace Abbott, for example, spoke of the need for greater security for the unemployed, for the aged, and for the children, she spoke as one who has been on the firing line, for years, in defense of these groups. Miss Harriet Elliott was frankly concerned over the national need for team-work. Her plea was for cooperation, or as she expressed it "integration" of the efforts of the various interests in the land toward the common goal of both government and industry—freedom of opportunity under the pledge of the American Constitution.

Much may happen before the battle lines are drawn for the next Presidential election. Judging from the example of those who asked support in Omaha for his policies, Franklin D. Roosevelt has powerful allies in the women whose principal interest, naturally and rightly, is in the home and its preservation.

District Rents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reading the report of the hearing on the proposed rent bill has moved me to call attention to the fact that the question asked by Representative Wood answers itself. The Representative asked why there was not more building going on in Washington.

Building costs as compared to return on the investment is the reason there is little building of properties for rental purposes. But the most effective way to cut out all building for rental purposes and the withdrawal from the rental market of existing buildings is to adopt rental legislation such as that proposed. Rentals in Washington can not as a matter of fairness be compared with rentals in localities where the depression has struck hardest, as so many people in such localities are unable to pay any rent at all, hence it is not a question of the rental being low or fair—it is capacity to pay. In such cities it is quite certain that there is no private building going on based on the expectation of the existing low rentals. Washington is wide open to the builders of Kansas City, St. Louis, or any other portion of the country. Competition is open to all. The Ball rent act delayed corrective building for many years; another rent act will do the same thing.

Government building of low-cost housing is a horse of a different color, but when completed it will not be low-cost housing unless it is subsidized; that is, part of the cost written off as a social betterment. But then by the time such housing would be available the emergency said to exist would be a thing of the past.

The landlord is a popular one to take a crack at. How about the other profiteers, such as the Government employe himself? What would be his wages in other towns and villages where the rents are low? OBSERVER.

Bogus Solicitors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A number of cases have been reported to us that persons are soliciting funds and clothing in the name of the Salvation Army, although they have no connection whatsoever with this organization. We will greatly appreciate it if you will carry a story warning people to make no donations to persons who call in anything other than a truck or wagon bearing the Salvation Army seal, and under no circumstances to make donations of money, since the Salvation Army does not solicit funds by door-to-door canvas.

The practice of impersonating the Salvation Army has been a source of some trouble to us for years and we will greatly appreciate your cooperation in warning the public.

Many thanks for your kind cooperation, in the past.

Not A Crooner.

To the Edtior of The Post—Sir: I was greatly amused to receive a clipping from The Post, issue of May 1, announcing that "but recently Dr. Vizetelly has spoken over the radio and a good many listeners have declared that he doesn't practice what he preaches."

In view of the fact that I have not spoken over the radio for four years, this is interesting, but in perfect harmony with the "news" of the day. So far as being "a failure upon the radio" is concerned, I ceased to broadcast when I discovered that fine words buttered no parsnips, and that, after eight years on the air, most of the time for the love of the cause.

I shall be greatly obliged to you if you will make this correction in some early issue.

Domestics And Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial, "Local Relief," in the edition of May 8, you say among other things that "Reports that some individuals, especially domestic servants, are leaving their jobs to go on relief rolls have long been current in Washington." A careful investigation (survey) should be conducted to ascertain the truth of these reports and if found to be true, why? The truth can not be determined by questioning a few individuals here and there nor from reports circulated by a few housewives whose cooks and maids have left them for relief. There are many instances where colored domestics are demanded to perform back-breaking drudgery 12 hours a day for the paltry wage of $3 per week. This condition will readily encourage domestics to relinquish their jobs and register with the emergency relief. For them, the emergency relief is genuine relief from exploitation.

No fair-minded citizen of the District of Columbia encourages "chiseling;" on the other hand, who of us in the District of Columbia would advocate that women should work under such conditions as these? R. A. FAIRLEY,

Principle Or Self-Interest?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The present curious change in the political alignment conservatives turning radical and radicals turning conservatives when they acquire a fortune, reminds me of a conversation I overheard years ago in Los Angeles while riding on a street car.

At that time the Socialist, Harriman, was running for mayor against Alexander, a conservative. The man in the white collar asked the man in overalls how he was going to vote. The man in overalls replied, "I am voting for Harriman." The white collar man then said, "Well, I'm not. I am voting for Alexander—I own a nice little house and garden and I'm through with that radical stuff." The man in overalls remarked, "I don't own anything, so I have nothing to lose, that's why I'm voting for Harriman."

To my mind that expresses the psychology of the country today in a nutshell. G. v. K.

On Child Labor.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nelson B. Bell, under the title, "Pulitzer Prize Winner Voided by Lunatic Law," published an article May 9, 1935, scoring the District child labor law because it makes it impossible for the Pulitzer prize play of 1935, "The Old Maid," to come to the National Theater since an important character in this play is a 4-year-old child and this characterization violates the District of Columbia code. He refers to this law as "asinine" and "lunatic."

To some extent I can sympathize with this position, for certainly our pleasures are curtailed. Should we have a national child labor law enacted, the stage would lose much. The passing from the screen of Shirley Temple and other such delightful child characters who have helped to raise the standards of our entertainment by their wholesomeness would be a distinct loss. Yet over against these new talented, protected and delightful children are thousands of little slaves.

In Chicago I saw three children under 14 years of age in an acrobatic act. Their feats were breath-taking and unbelievable, yet the applause was scattering. It was too evident to the audience the severe strain under which these children were laboring.

Nor is there applause for the little toilers of the South—my homeland. In the cotton fields, in factories, under hot pine sheds in midsummer sorting and packing peaches—there you will find them. Their school term begins late because of the harvest and closes early because of the spring plowing and planting.

The golf links lie so near the mill that almost every day,
The laboring children can look out and see the men at play.

Yes, we would suffer greatly in our entertainment by a national child labor law, but with the whole picture before us, I submit that it is the only humane solution to this rank injustice to childhood. I. M.

A Dryad In The Dogwood.

Do you see that whiteness on the hillside, against the fringe of the forest, like a spread sail? And yonder in the lowland along the river, there it is again. That's dogwood. We ought to be grateful for dogwood. It convinces us that the experience of living is uncommonly privileged and beautiful. Dogwood is a mist in the eyes. It is a catch in the throat. Dogwood is an exclamation. It is a long, long look. Yet dogwood is only a flowering tree on the hillside or down by the rising river.

What was it Wordsworth said? Something of glimpses that would leave us less forlorn. Standing before a dogwood one is bound to admit that a dryad might, indeed, dwell in such a tree. Ah, sirs and skeptics, where else would a dryad have her dwelling place? This is what Wordsworth meant.

Don't break the boughs of the dogwood. Forbear. The great-petaled flowers, waxen and lunar, they wither and rust so soon. And besides, who so heartless as to harm a dryad, helpless and trusting in her beautiful prison?

The Post Impressionist

An Actor Of Yesterday.

Post Office, Tuesday.

WE PROPOSE, with your kind permission, to destroy an ancient idol of the theater.

* * *

A while ago, this Column ventured to compare George Arliss to Henry Irving. Some of our readers—some of our elder readers—didn't like it, because, they said, Sir Henry was "a really great actor." Some of our readers—some of our younger readers—asked: "Who was Irving?"

Now here's our excuse to inform the latter group that Sir Henry was an English actor considered a genius as late as the Nineties—by a certain portion of his generation. Moreover, here's our chance to murmur "I told you so" for the benefit of those who still remember Irving and still think him great.

* * *

For Orson Loftin Hall has been looking over Washington—over the Post-Impressionist, among other sights—and has confirmed our opinion of Irving.

* * *

Don't ask us—you youngsters—who Orson Loftin Hall is. You can overdo that sort of thing: superiority may become impertinence. O. L. Hall was born on the same day of the same year as his friend and ours, George M. Cohan—to-wit, July 4, 1877—and, shortly after graduating from Northwestern University, became a dramatic critic, on the Chicago Inter-Ocean and later on the Chicago Post. Richard Mansfield (surely you've heard of him!) said he didn't give a whoop for New York critics, but did listen to Chicago's—especially Hall.

* * *

* * *

"Well, anyways"—as Irving's contemporary George Monroe, the Irish apple-woman, used to say—we mentioned our Irving irritation to Dr. Hall. We recalled the first time we, as an impressionable boy, saw Henry Irving—and the second.

* * *

He was doing Sardou's "Robespierre" that first time.

* * *

The set for the opening act showed a rose garden in the avocat's estate at Arras. From high up backstage a broad path descended, bordered by flowers, and along this path Irving, as the burgeoning "Sea-Green Incorruptible," made his well-prepared entrance.

He wore knee breeches, of course, and of course—though we didn't know that the latter "of course" was for anything save his present role—he wore a terrifying sneer. He flung forward and starboard his right shank and said "Hegh!" His left soon followed his right, and he said "Hegh!" Next, he stopped and sniffed at a rosebud—and said "Hegh!" Then he repeated on a tack to port.

We felt it was tremendous. We felt it was Robespierre. Even though Irving did it—and little else—all through the play, we felt that he was Robespierre.

* * *

* * *

Well, there wasn't an inclined path with roses along its borders. Moreover, Irving's costume was different; he wore the robe of a cardinal—you couldn't see his legs.

But you got the full effect of them. They were there. So was the "Hegh!"

He flung out his right leg to starboard and said "Hegh!" His left leg followed his right, and he said "Hegh!" Then he did the same thing on a tack to port. And he did that—and little else—all through the play.

* * *

We failed to feel that it was tremendous. We failed to feel that it was Woolsey . . .

At first, we felt that it was Robespierre trying to play Woolsey . . .

But soon we felt that both "Robespierre" and "Woolsey" were just Irving in different clothes.

* * *

"Still," said we to Doc Hall the other evening, "Irving's mob-scenes were well organized, and his sets, props and costumes were accurate. He was one of the greatest stage carpenters that ever lived, and——"

"No, he wasn't," Doc interrupted. "He was a good stage carpenter, but there have been better. You're right, though, in your other conclusion: he was a wonderful stage manager and not a great actor at all.

* * *

"You never saw him," Doc inquired, "in 'The Bells' or 'The Lyons Mail,' did you?"

We never did.

"I thought not. Or, rather, you think not. The point is that you really did. You really saw him in every role he ever played, because he never really played any role except 'One—two—Hegh! One—two—Hegh!'"

Another Farm Problem.

ALTHOUGH the Agricultural Administration crowd are right tickled about 2,000 farmers coming here to show how they like the New Deal, other thinkers are somewhat concerned. If the movement is extended, it is felt, it may defeat the drive for the more abundant life.

One of the primary aims of the New Deal, it is pointed out, is the redistribution of wealth and particularly the transfer of wealth from the bloated Eastern centers to the rural sections of the West and the South. How this is to be accomplished if the farmers come to Washington to spend their crop benefits is difficult to understand.

The case of Mr. C. H. Day, of Texas, one of the leaders of the movement, is in point. Mr. Day received a certain sum from the Government for not raising crops, so much for not raising wheat, so much for not raising cotton and so much for not raising hogs, the total coming, according to Mr. Day, to $420.

• • • •

This is what has so elated Mr. Day that he has come to Washington and he wants other farmers to follow him to show they are grateful to the hands that feed them. One of the delightful features of the policy of paying money for not raising crops is that it gives the farmers time off to go visiting. Manifestly they can keep from raising crops here in Washington just as well as they can down on the farm. But suppose the movement should spread to the point of where all the farmers would want to see Washington. This nullifies the real purpose of the crop benefits, i. e., the redistribution of wealth.

No wealth is redistributed and no wealth is transferred from the arrogant East if as fast as the farmers receive their crop benefits they come here and the city slickers get the money right back again.

The situation is all the more embarrassing to the thinkers because this is what the old-order crowd insisted would happen—well, not that the farmers would come to Washington but that the slickers would get their money away from them as fast as they received it.

This discouragement comes just at a time, too, when it looked as though the Agricultural Administration crowd had found a slogan to combat the attack on the processing taxes. The slogan they have worked out is the farmers are entitled to the processing taxes as long as the industrial interests have the tariff. It carries considerable merit, but it is funny it took them so long to think it up. They only hit upon it a short while ago, but they are working it to its full worth now.

The New Deal sociologists appreciated from the first that the farmers would want to go into town to spend their crop benefits, but it was assumed they would go to the towns nearby as has been their wont in the past. Fort Worth, Kansas City and so forth. Spending of the crop benefits in these nearby centers was not looked upon as thwarting the purpose of transferring the wealth from the East to the South and West, however. But coming to Washington certainly does.

• • • •

Of Mr. Day's $420 it's a cinch he won't have a penny when his visit is over. Gosh, a good splurge here will eat up $420 before you can say jack-rabbit. As a matter of fact, one evening in a night club will eat a hunk out of it. There is, too, the matter of railroad fare to get here. This is giving the money to the capitalistic interests. It would be better, of course, if the Government owned the railroads and then the fellows could be given passes.

As it is, however, the question arises as to whether the farmers when they spend their crop benefits here will want us to increase the processing tax so they can get home.

The demonstration won't prove anything we did not already know. Apparently it is Mr. Day's purpose to show that the farmers don't mind receiving these crop benefits at all. Well, none of us ever thought they did.

There is some suggestion that in the event the movement spreads, and threatens to defeat the transfer of wealth that some of the Third Economy structure might be saved by diverting the farmers to unrecovered cities, say New York. We are enjoying such a boom in Washington that it seems a downright shame for the farmers to be giving us their crop benefits as fast as they receive them.

No Accounting For Kansas

Jayhawk State Has Kept Its Shirt On Throughout New Deal Regime And May Play Important Part Similar To Ohio's Following Civil War, In Coming National Realignment.

By Hilding Sivertsen.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Topeka.

THREE decades ago William Allen White, a stripling journalist impatient with the lamentations of the Populists, wrote an editorial entitled "What's the Matter With Kansas?" which won him national and enduring fame. It was a diatribe against radicalism—a plea for the steadying hand of Republicanism.

With the slow turning of cycles the Nation is now seeing a startling parallel of the Populist propaganda, but it is necessary to note that White himself got safely away from the standpat Republican point of view and has frequently expressed admiration for some of the major points of the old-time Populist program.

Strange mutations have come—in fact, they seem almost fantastic when viewed in perspective.

Despite White's espousal of the Progressive cause (he was an enthusiastic Bull Mooser and in the past quarter century has always been considered a liberal), it is the same William Allen White who originated the idea of a Midwest Republican preconvention to start a revolt against the New Deal.

And what of Kansas itself? What of the other political leaders of the Jayhawk State? What of the Kansas farmers What effect has come out of the unprecedented drought, and duststorms? Have the recent hardships brought about a revival of bitterness?

• • • •

KANSAS, given to emotional outbreaks such as that which occurred in the early nineties, and only a few years ago when Dr. Brinkley, goat-gland specialist, was almost elected governor, is practically the only State in the Union which calmly kept its shirt on when the New Deal tornado tore down fences, wrecked Republican henhouses, splintered all the political platforms, chased every standpatter into the cellar and promised to make a new heaven and a new earth out of things in general. Which goes to show that you can't account for what Kansas will do.

What's the matter with Kansas, anyhow?

While its close neighbor, Iowa, considered one of the most rock-ribbed of the rock-ribbed Republican States, was kicking the Republicans out into the cold November morning and acting as though it had always been Jeffersonian, or something, Kansas elected a Republican Governor, and then, to show that it wasn't an accident, proceeded to reelect him in 1934. Alf Landon, this Republican, isn't a spectacular politician. He is not a particularly eloquent speaker. He is just a good, plain business man.

During the New Deal regime Kansas has refused to join the high-tax carnival which afflicts Iowa and other neighbor States. It has reduced taxes, kept its budget balanced and seems unusually free from scandals Its farmers have mostly shown disbelief in the AAA panaceas, some of which were similar to the old Populist depression cures. Despite the fact that its western half has been scouraged by terrific duststorms which have caused deaths from dust pneumonia, and despite the fact that a large part of the State has failed to raise a crop for two years, the Kansas people have kept their chins up and refuse to weep on the Nation's shoulder. What can you do with such a State, anyhow? It just doesn't seem to parse, somehow.

• • • •

THERE is a great dearth of Republican leadership in most of the States, and the Middle West is no exception, but Kansas seems to be furnishing more than its share.

There is William Allen White, chief proponent of the Midwest convention idea and probable chairman of the resolutions committee of that convention—a liberal, kindly man who has given the New Dealers better than a break in his editorial utterances, but who now sees the need of a newer deal.

There is Alf Landon, Governor, who seems to have attracted national attention because of his unique achievement of being elected in the face of the greatest landslide in history and perhaps also because he is not dramatic.

There is John D. M. Hamilton, national committeeman, who is now close to the throne of the Republican National Committee leadership and who is one of the prime movers of the convention.

There is Harold McGugin, Congressman, who attracted much attention nationally because of his spirited fight against Tugwellism and the Administration in general. He was defeated last fall, but is irrepressible.

U. S. Guyer, another Congressman, still on the job, is active in the national political picture.

ARTHUR CAPPER, Senator, has managed to stay in his seat through all the stormy weather. He is highly diplomatic and went along with the New Deal in many of its measures. He has an uncanny genius for anticipating public sentiment, and the fact that he is now turning away from the New Deal is causing many statesmen to crouch down with ear to grass roots.

One of the most potential characters of all has kept pretty much in the background. That is Henry J. Allen, former Governor and Senator. He has shown no intention whatever of getting back into politics, but he is thoroughly saturated with the Theodore Roosevelt tradition of unlimited courage. He has spent considerable time in Europe, studying economic conditions there, and has formulated a broad, statesmanlike presentation which he has given before nonpolitical and semi-political audiences. A magnetic orator, he always elicits applause.

With an array of talent like the foregoing—men who are able to attract more than State-wide attention anywhere—it is not unlikely that Kansas will play a part in the coming national realignment somewhat like that played by Ohio in the decades following the Civil War. There seems to be something in the air in Kansas. It is not New Dealism. It is still inchoate, unformulated, nebulous. It may be dissipated in the storm of events. But some kind of strange yeast is in ferment, and it sems to be in the nature of an antibody to the new and old Populism. The bacteria of 1892 seems to be at work with some kind of a mysterious reverse English.

Words And Their Misuses

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

SOME newly coined words are good, some are execrable; it is to be decided by a feeling for language.

I entirely agree with Mr. G. C. Frelinghuysen, of New York, who calls my attention to a horrible new word.

In the New York Herald-Tribune account of the Mellon tax investigation, twice occurs the word "notarized," which Mr. Frelinghuysen properly calls:

• • • one of the most horrible words ever invented, and without any meaning —"notarized" — is flaunted about as if it belonged in the English language.

A notary public, as you well know, has the power of administering oaths and, in some States, of taking acknowledgments of deeds.

So far as administering oaths is concerned, every judge, justice of the peace, and, in some States, mayors of cities and aldermen, and every attorney-at-law, may administer an oath, so that to use the word "notarize," as applied to administering of oaths, is absurd.

• • • •

George A. Cunney, of Washington, D. C., calls my attention to the following passage which appeared in the Washington Star for March 21, 1935, alluding to the Tidal Basin cherry blossoms:

"The single blossoms have appeared in previous years anywhere from March 20 to April 20, contingent upon the weather."

It is the word "anywhere" that calls for comment. My correspondent writes, "My grandfather and grandmother used it in that wise in Philadelphia where I was born, but catch any Philadelphia newspaper doing it now! . . . I wish you would, stating the sentence as the reporter did, get rid of the 'anywhere' and give us the same meaning by substituting one correct word. I can not do it, s'help me!"

• • • •

Well, I can do this. The word is "anywhen." I do not particularly recommend it for journalistic use, though it is correct, having been used by Oliver Cromwell and Thomas Carlyle.

But why make any substitution? Why not simply leave out anywhere? The sentence is better and stronger without it. The last four words, "contingent upon the weather," show that some especial date is meant.

Yet if you insist on a substitution, simply write the two words "any time."

Blood And Thunder.

NOW what is your guess as to the most famous phrase in American prose writing? The hunch I have can't be corroborated in Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations" or in Stevenson's "Home Book of Quotations." The Britannica doesn't mention it, and I should be rather surprised if any academic history of American letters gave it so much as a glance. But for sheer fame, and for power to suggest in six words not only a whole school of American writing but a leading trait in world literature, my vote goes to the simple old phrase—"And another redskin bit the dust."

The generation which read dime-novels out behind the barn, and which took its first whiff of corn-silk cigaretes at the same time, is middle-aged by now. Nick Carter of the thousand volumes and his conferees have gone to the hack-writers' heaven—a place which must, for compensation's sake, be a pretty fine one. And we, in our full tide of vitamins and alloys and short-waves, have we moved on into the rare ether of "civilization?"

Well, every mystery and Western story we have cries out its old blood-line from the dime novel. John Buchan and Rafael Sabatini are Nick Carter in disguise. Look at what the movies used to do with the gangster theme, what they do now ("G Men," for example) with reverse English toward villainy but with not one shot and sudden death the less.

• • • •

BUT if you're wearied by all these dilutions and simulations, if you're homesick for the good old essence of redskin-and-dust, I've got the book for you. The type is rare nowadays, when a Western has to reflect social history and a mystery appears to be something you'd plot out with T-square and graph paper. It was the joy of finding once more the hard-hitting, hard-shooting hero which kept me in a positive chortle of excitement last night over Carroll John Daly's "Murder from the East" (Stokes, $2.)

Underneath the Oppenheim plot—sinister foreign country; web of war-stirring activities under our noses here; unofficial legion of vigilantes who are trying to nip the fomentations in the bud—is the prime figure of Race Williams. Mr. Daly has given us other Race Williams stories before; I'd not met them, but I'm going to look them up as if they were a rich uncle's will. For Race is a broth of a boy.

"Private Investigator" he is by trade. But out of whole slews of fictional "P. I's," He stands alone. Not that he's any Philo Vance of brain power; there's not a reference to Ming pottery in the book. He's conspicuous for only one thing—his ability, never one like it seen on land or sea before, to shoot his way out of a tight situation. When Race says: "Put 'em up, boys, I'm on the kill," there's nothing else needed but a conscientious coroner.

• • • •

LET me give you a couple of little examples, which won't spoil the book any more than swiping an apple over in the Shenandoah would diminish the crop.

Race gets a letter from a client, sweetened by two $500 bills, asking him to go to the information booth at Grand Central, identify himself by carying a book in each hand, and wait for developments. Race is duly on hand there when up steps a Chicago "bad boy" who says: "I just wanted to be sure that both your hands were occupied and that you were Race Williams" and draws a Luger. Knuckles tightened and showed white in front of Aces' face—and five bullets went into Chicago Phil before he could pull the trigger. How? That would be telling.

Another time Race went to a dinner party at the Senator's. It's enough for you to know that the chief of the foreign gang and his henchmen, all smoothly and plausibly got up, were at table there, and they had vowed Race's death that night at 10 o'clock.

At 10 a crew of gangster's broke in to stage a mock holdup. "No cause for alarm, ladies and gents!" cried the leader. Then, "Hey! That guy there! It's Race Williams, the dick! Better give him the heat!" And a sub-machine gun was leveled at Race's back.

The little lady at Race's right had a pistol in his ribs to hold him. But he twisted that off and ducked under the dinner table. Good scene, eh? And what did Race do under the table, with half a dozen shooting irons and a Tommy gun waiting for him? Bless you, he came right up behind the chief of the gang with a gun in each hand. "Well, rats!" was all he said. The machine gunner didn't know what to do. There was Race to be wiped out, and there, right in the way, was his boss. And the machine gunner lost his head; he started to raise his weapon; he tightened on the trigger—and Race put one shot right between his eyes.

• • • •

"I LIKE your work, Race," said one of his allies once. "It's so clean. It gives me an appetite."

If any of you have an appetite for the old dime thriller, for the villians biting the dust and the hero coming through with smoking gats, here's the ticket. "Murder From the East" is as full of bangs as the sales-girl roster of a 5-and-10-cent store.

Farmer's Fox Alarm Proved Its Worth

Bryantville, Mass. (U.P.).—Willard Snow has become the Edison of this little town with his new fox alarm.

A crafty creature has been stealing Snow's poultry and evading capture with ease, so Snow put his inventive genius at work.

He tied a string to the foot of a dead duck and ran the line through a window to the table beside his bed, where he fastened it around a tin can full of pebbles.

The other night the can went rattling across the floor, and Snow, shotgun in hand, made a beeline for the hen coop.

Parisians Advised to Acquire Gas Masks and Bomb Cellars

By the United Press.

Paris—Concluding a series of meetings called by the prefecture of police to perfect the defense of the Paris population against air attack, two commissions charged with organizing the "passive defense" system have recommended that all Parisians acquire gas masks as soon as possible and that proper shelters be constructed in all apartment buildings.

The commissions' recommendations were not intended to alarm the population, which already is familiar with efforts to combat the effects of gas attacks and incendiary bombs, but it was pointed out that if the people wait until they need masks before they buy them, it may be too late.

"The public should be warned that it is to their greatest interest to provide themselves with masks, as their manufacture can only be developed in proportion to the orders received. We can not, therefore, count on suddenly satisfying numerous demands coming at once."

The recommendation adds that masks capable of giving adequate protection from gas already are available; that they should be purchased and kept in condition in accordance with orders which the prefecture will give.

On the subject of shelters, proprietors of apartment houses where there are already cellars which can be used as shelters will be given full instructions without delay on how the emergency should be handled and, above all, how many persons can be accommodated by the shelter.

Field Marshal Flays Officers In Indian Ranks

By the United Press.

London.—Considerable consternation has been caused by the blunt comments of Field Marshal Sir Philip Chetwode, commander in chief of India, on the mediocre mentality of British army officers in India.

His remarks, made in an address to the Staff College at Quetta, are printed in the current Journal of the United Service Institution of India and are being reprinted in some of the London newspapers. Said the field marshal:

"I am not happy about the present officer, either in the British service or in the Indian army. I do not think, as a class, they have improved in general education or military instinct and leadership since the war.

"I am horrified, as I travel up and down India, at the number of officers I find, senior and junior alike, who have allowed themselves to sink into a state of complete brain slackness . . .

"I have found men all over India who evidently scarcely read the papers, and are quite unaware of the larger aspects of what is going on in India around them . . .

"A study of the papers sent in by officers sitting for their promotion examinations, and even for the Staff College, makes one glad that the results are not published to the world.

"Many officers today can not even express themselves clearly in the simplest language, let alone with any style or distinction."

Joke on Himself Told by Lincoln

Wrote April 1 Letter About Ludicrous Romance.

By the United Press.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Abraham Lincoln chose "April Fool's Day" to recall a ludicrous love affair in which he admitted he was "the biggest fool of them all," according to Dr. L. A. Warren, director of the Lincoln Foundation here.

On April 1, 1838, Lincoln wrote a letter about his adventure to a close friend, using the date as the proper one to tell in his whimsical way how he "had been made a fool of," Dr. Warren said.

"Lincoln had promised a friend, who was to make a visit to Kentucky, that he would marry her sister is he would bring her back to Illinois," Dr. Warren said historical records show.

"The girl came, Lincoln thought, too willingly, but nevertheless he proposed to her. At that time he feared she would accept, but instead she refused him flatly.

"He concluded the written account of the incident with these words:

"'Others have been made fools of by the girls, but this can never with truth be said of me. I most emphatically, in this instance, made a fool of myself.'"

France Urged To Nationalize Paris Fair in '37

French Deputy Sees Plan as Lure to Revive Tourist Trade.

By the United Press.

Paris—A movement is under way to make the 1937 exposition a national rather than a purely Parisian affair.

If the project goes through, visitors will find all France in festive dress with famous chateaus and public monuments illuminated, as well as a carnival spirit throughout the nation.

Announcement of the plan recently was made by Paul Poncet, deputy for the Seine and president of the Parliamentary group which numbers more than 60 members. He advocated that all French cities participate.

The nationalization of the exposition is expected to give an impetus to the tourist interest. Architectural projects are under way to transform Paris ino a fairyland of light and gayety.

Should similar efforts extend to other large French cities and spots of historic and natural interest, it is expected that the entire year 1937 will be a record one for tourist trade throughout France.

"Our group is resolved to act rapidly," said Poncet. "We propose to give the 1937 fete an international aspect and in order to do this we will ask the cooperation of all France. It will create a renaissance of tourism which will aid the entire country.

"May the Paris exposition measure up to the heights of its task and its directors hasten to draw up a simple yet symbolic program which will strike the imagination of the world and put into motion the pilgrimage of visitors to Paris in 1937.

"Our group hopes to give a proper setting to the artistic riches of our country and to offer a varied program to which all France would contribute."

Last A.E.F. Horse On Pension at 28

Jeanne d'Arc Has 2 Fillies Ready to Succeed Her.

By the United Press.

Chicago.—The rattle and boom of wartime bombshells are but a near-forgotten nightmare to Jeanne d'Arc, last living army war horse that went overseas.

But in the stalls beside the gallant little horse at the 122d Field Artillery armory are her two contributions to present-day active service, two fillies, 5 and 6 years old, respectively, ready to take her place when she is gone.

Jeanne has three gold chevrons representing 18 months of service overseas and six gold stars for service in as many battles. She is 28 and "on pension."

At Verdun Jeanne d'Arc was with the French army, but rejoined the American artillery at Belleau Wood and Vaux, and was back with the 122d Field Artillery for Soissons, St. Mihiel and the Meuse-Argonne battles.

Only a handful of war horses returned from the great war. Jeanne d'Arc, the last, was brought here recently from Madison Barracks, New York, and will spend the rest of her days at the 122d Field Artillery armory in peaceful retirement.

Book Explains Cosmic Cycle In Language of the Layman

By the United Press.

Pittsburg.—Millions of years ago the sun and all of its planets sprang from a cataclysm caused by the mixture of ice with fire.

That, in a sentence, is the theory, startling to the layman, related in a narartive manner in a recently published book by Dr. Max Waldemar Kurniker. The theory is not so startling to the scientist, for it has been a part of his knowledge for 30 years. But Dr. Kurniker claims the distinction of being the first to tell it in everyday language for the unscientific reader who is curious about scientific matters.

The book, "The Cosmic Cycle" (David McKay Co., Philadelphia), makes no pretense of being a scientific tome. On the contrary, Dr. Kurniker, of Pittsburgh, who has devoted most of his life to cosmic studies—takes pains to keep his story free of heavy, scientific verbiage. It is not his theory that he is explained. It is the theory, known as Glacial Cosmogony—or how the universe was born from ice—which Hanns Hoerbiger, Viennese mechanical engineer and amateur astronomer, formulated about 30 years ago.

Hoerbiger's Cosmogony is based, simply stated, on the theory that the solar system including the sun itself, sprang from a giant star, of such tremendous size that, for comparison, our sun appears only as a dot beside a three-inch-in-diameter circle which represents the Mother Star. The solar system was thrown from the Mother Star in an explosion caused by the penetration of an ice-covered star into the white hot Mother Star, and assumed gravitational paths around the sun and around each other.

That is a very simple statement of the theory, for Dr. Kurniker shows that Hoerbiger was not concerned alone with how this world came into being, but also with what brought it to its present physical condition. Hoerbiger accounts, to his own satisfaction and in a very plausible manner, for example, for the glacial period, the creation of minerals, the creation of mountains, and all at variance with theories generally taught in public schools.

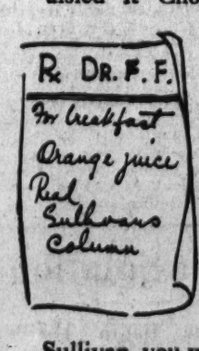
"The Cosmic Cycle" is packed too full to give more than the merest glimpse of its contents here. The book is only 276 pages, with large type and many charts. Yet it seems a complete compendium of Hoerbiger's theory, approaching as it does the mysteries of the universe from every angle. It is a fast-moving book, refusing to dawdle in a morass of words over any particular point but, upon finishing one topic, thoroughly and clearly, passing on to another which still holds the reader's interest. It is such a book as Darwin might have welcomed had he had as faithful a disciple as Dr. Kurniker.

Henry Jones, who was sad and downcast for many years, is a happy man now. "It's this way," explains Hank. "It uster be when I got home I hadda eat outa cans or buy a hamburger down at Joe's hash-house. You see, the missus loved gossip and she spent her afternoons hangin' over the back fence tradin' scandal with the neighbors 'stead of gettin' supper.

"But I fixed that. I subscribed to The Washington Post and now she gets enough gossip outa that feller Ed Sullivan's Broadway column to last her all day. She says he sure knows how to tell things, all right."

But Ed Sullivan is not just a gossip-teller, a keyhole listener-inner, a Peeping Tom with a typewriter. Ed chronicles the doings of that biggest of all hick towns, New York. With Broadway and Forty-second street as his base of operations, Sullivan stops (briefly), looks (intently), and listens (long). The result is a column of news and gossip ... those little whispers which later roar at you from the front page headlines.

Another nice thing about Ed Sullivan's Broadway column is that it is written for the reader ... and not just to high-hat some other columnist. We know a college professor who once spent months translating what he termed "Broadwayese." For instance, he learned that "The Umphs who middle-aisled it Choosday yawning, phhht! yesdy. He's carrying the torch for a certain revusical eye-full now" really means that Mr. and Mrs. Umph, who were married last Tuesday, have parted, and that Mr. Umph is now in love with a chorus girl. But when you read Sullivan, you won't have to be a college professor to understand what he means ... for Sullivan's lines have sparkle, snap and wit ... and he doesn't depend upon a tortured pun to pack a wallop.



"Broadway," as seen through Ed Sullivan's slightly cynical but ever-interesting eyes, is as breezy as a cocktail party, as smart as a Noel Coward comedy, as entertaining as a ringside table. Not to read Ed Sullivan's column right after downing your orange juice each morning is to miss a lot of fun. Sullivan doesn't tell the news behind the headlines ... he tells the news ahead of the headlines ... and tells it five mornings each week in

Governor Calls On Yearly Visit To Mt. Vernon

Peery Places Wreath and Then Pays Compliment to Staff at Shrine.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Gov. George C. Peery with his board of visitors, Norman Call, Gen. William H. Cocke, Archibald W. McCrea, Roswell Page and former Mayor William Albert Smoot, paid his annual visit to Mount Vernon yesterday, and was received by Mrs. Alice H. Richards, regent, and Col. H. H. Dodge, superintendent of the Mount Vernon estate.

Wreaths were placed on the tombs by Gov. Peery and Mrs. Richards, and the Governor expressed his pleasure at the manner in which affairs of Mount Vernon are being conducted. Mrs. Richards acknowledged the Governor's complimentary address.

The Governor, his party and other invited guests were entertained at tea by the regent and vice regents. Short addresses were delivered by Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore and Roswell Page.

The fifth annual tour of historic Alexandria homes, given under the auspices of the Rector's Aid Society of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, was attended by approximately 1,000 persons Saturday, according to a check-up made yesterday. These tours attract persons from widely separated areas, and are becoming more popular each year.

The visitors expressed appreciation of the interesting colonial architecture and beautifully furnished interiors, where many valuable and beautifully preserved antiques were displayed. Many of the homes shown have beautifully kept flower gardens.

Miss Ann Barr, of the Alexandria High School, won the State championship in the spelling contest at the University of Virginia Saturday. Her record was one of the few perfect ones in the annual contest held in the State. The spelling list contained 125 words. She also handled ten sentences given to determine her knowledge of vocabulary.

Robert Rutledge, the Alexandria entrant in the public-speaking contest, went up to the finals, in which he lost a 2-to-1 decision to Arthur Wagner, of Richmond.

Alexandria was also successful in the 100-yard dash, won by Leroy Fones; the 220 low hurdles, won by Thomas Ennis, and the javelin throw, won by Paul Shu.

The championship plaque for the spelling contest given by the Virginia Literary and Athletic League will have Miss Barr's name engraved on it and hang in the Alexandria High School Building until a new winner is selected another year.

The Alexandria Rotary Club, instead of holding its regular session today, will go to Arlington County, where it will join the Fairfax County club in a visit to the Arlington Rotary. The Alexandria club plans to hold ladies' night on May 26 at a clubhouse nearby.

The Bond Tailors, Inc., of Cleveland, Ohio, will open a plant for the manufacture of men's pants in the old Paff shoe factory, at Washington and Gibbon streets, provided the city council grants their application for rezoning the property, according to Dan S. Hollenga, business manager of the chamber of commerce. The building has been idle for more than a year and, under the zoning ordinance, must be rezoned before it can be occupied for commercial purposes.

The auxiliary board of the Alexandria Hospital will give its annual spring dance in Armory Hall Thursday night. The co-chairmen for the affair are Mrs. Irvin Hufford and Mrs. James M. Love, who will be assisted by Mrs. Howard W. Smith, Mrs. Dulaney Hammond, Mrs. O. Ashby Reardon, Mrs. [illegible] McGowan, Mrs. James A. Gooch, Mrs. Irving Diener, Mrs. [illegible] Arnold, Mrs. Harrison Emhardt, Mrs. R. E. Felix, Mrs. William Stearns, Mrs. James W. Pierce, Mrs. Arthur M. King, Mrs. Harvey Henshaw and Mrs. Francis H. Fannon. A meeting will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon, with Mrs. William T. Burch presiding, to complete plans for the dance.

The carnival given last week by the Alexandria Fire Department to raise funds to meet the deficit left from the entertainment last year of the National Firemen's Association, netted approximately $764, according to Fire Chief James M. Duncan, jr. The original deficit was approximately $2,200, which is being gradually wiped out by the firemen.

Dr. Jesse Hayes, Alexandria veterinarian, was summoned to Washington yesterday to administer the Bangs test to the cattle of the Byrd expedition, by bleeding. The test was given the cow and year-and-a-half bull calf, the former of which was taken to Little America and furnished milk for the expedition, and while there gave birth to the calf.

Riverdale Landscaping Completion This Week

Work of beautifying the grounds of the Riverdale (Md) Elementary School is expected to be completed this week, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. R. D. Mattingly, chairman of the grounds committee of the Riverdale Parent-Teacher Association.

The project, started last spring under the direction of Prof. Arthur S. Thurston, horticulturist of the University of Maryland, is being carried on with funds appropriated by the Parent-Teacher Association. Labor is supplied by Mr. H. Davis, supervisor of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

The entire grounds of the school have been landscaped and re-sodded, and shrubbery has been planted along the new sidewalks.

Takoma Park Sets Program For Iris Show

Nineteenth Annual Exhibit Slated on Friday and Saturday of This Week.

Arrangements are complete for the nineteenth annual iris show to be held Friday and Saturday by the Takoma Park Horticultural Society in cooperation with the American Iris Society at the Takoma (D. C.) School, Piney Branch road and Dahlia street.

The show, which is open to the public, will be conducted from 4 to 9 p. m. Friday, and from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. on Saturday. The silver medal of the American Iris Society will be awarded to the exhibitor winning the most points in the iris classes. The society's bronze medal will be awarded to the person having the second largest number of points. There will be an award of one new annual membership in the American Iris Society to the winner of a collection from a garden containing not over 25 varieties, not to exceed three stalks each.

Exhibits will be accepted Thursday from 5:30 to 9 p. m., and Friday from 8 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. No exhibitor may receive more than one award in any class.

Miss Margaret Caldwell Lancaster is chairman of the committee consisting of J. W. Wellington, C. C. Thomas, Mrs. Arthur Harrison, C. M. Purves, R. D. Rands, T. W. Lewis, Maj. C. M. Neff, John Wright, J. Carter, G. C. Carr, W. T. Simmons, W. L. Holt and Mrs. R. C. Jones. Mrs. John Guill is president, and H. C. Heffner is general exhibition chairman.

Firemen Elect Two on Board

Kensington Volunteer Unit Names Culver, Simpson at Meeting.

J. Kenneth Culver and President Kenneth W. Simpson were elected members of the newly created Kensington Fire Board to represent the fire department at a meeting last night of the Kensington Volunteer Fire Department. Culver serves the one-year term and Simpson the two-year term.

J. P. Raney and Maynard Hawkins were elected delegates and C. W. Hurdle and Thomas L. Saxon, alternates, to the Montgomery County Association of Volunteer Firemen. An amendment to the county group's constitution to permit quarterly instead of monthly meetings was approved by the department.

C. W. Hurdle, Maynard Hawkins, R. R. Palmer and Louis Hammerli were elected delegates and J. P. Raney, T. L. Saxon, W. R. Price and Millard Johnson aletrnates to the State firemen's convention at Oakland, Md., June 19 to 21.

The department voted to present miniature badges to former President Alfred L. Geiger and former Chiefs Eugene J. C. Raney and M. D. Curran for their faithful service. The presentations will be made at the next meeting.

The Solution

To the Radio Thriller, 'What Would You Do?'

The solution of the fifteenth and concluding "What Would You Do?" real life drama broadcast Monday at 5:30 p. m. from WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., follows:

Dr. Bogardus had never been faced with this sort of problem before.

Here was a man whom he had known for years—a man who by his very nature could have no murderous thought in his mind.

But that was not the problem which lined the face of this family physician.

"If you had only waited——," Dr. Bogardus broke off.

"Waited for what? We have waited for years and years!" Richard Winton buried his face in his hands.

"If you had only waited until tomorrow," the doctor continued, "I would have told you that your wife would not have lived the week out!"

Richard arose slowly from his chair and walked dazedly toward the perplexed physician, speaking quietly as he moved.

"So—she—would—have died—anyway?"

"Yes."

Dr. Bogardus signed the certificate.

Prince Georges Waits on Nice For New Police

Legality of Appointments if Governor Fails to Act Is Weighed.

With the bill still awaiting Gov. Nice's signature, Prince Georges County commissioners are wondering, as Monday, June 3, approaches, whether they will have authority to appoint four additional members of the county police force provided for in that bill.

On that date, and not before or after, the commissioners must appoint members of the county force. The county police bill, passed by both houses of the Legislature, allows appointment of four additional police on that date—if Gov. Nice signs the bill.

The commissioners' office at Upper Marlboro has been swamped with applications for the new positions. Many are backed by petitions from citizens. One petition carries more than 500 signatures.

Although it was rumored that discussion of the new applications would begin either at Tuesday's meeting or at a special session Wednesday, members of the board declared last night that no mention of the matter would be made until the latter part of the month.

At the Tuesday's meeting, however, the board will call in S. B. Shaw, of the University of Maryland, chief of the State Bureau of Markets, for advice on appointment of a sealer of weights and measures.

Commissioner Joseph Blanford said the board had met many vexing problems in its attempt to appoint a sealer of weights and measures and that it hopes Shaw will be able to clear up a number of these. The Bureau of Markets maintains an inspector for measures and weights but is interested only in farm products.

The county formerly had a law making it mandatory that the commissioners appoint a sealer and fix his duties and compensation. A sum of $500 was set aside for this work.

This law has been repealed and only a State law allows the commissioners, if they so desire, to make the appointment. However, no money has been set aside in the county budget for this purpose.

There also have been objections from county merchants to the fee system, which is in force elsewhere. They point out that there has been very little complaint about scales or measures not being accurate. They state that housewives maintain scales and check on them.

Society to Hear Pastors' Mothers

The Woman's Society of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church will hold its regular monthly meeting tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the church on Maple and Tulip avenues, Takoma Park, D. C.

Mrs. Winn T. Simmons will be the devotional speaker, using the theme "The Ideal Home Atmosphere." Mrs. John W. Kerns, a member who has recently returned from a trip to Guatemala, where her son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Harper W. Kerns, are missionaries, will give a talk covering the description of the country and the mission work which she saw.

Mrs. Simmons and Mrs. Kerns are the mothers of the only two young men who have gone into the ministry from the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church. Robert C. Simmons is engaged in a pastorate in Washington.

Poppy Selling For Arlington Set Tomorrow

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

A proclamation designating tomorrow as Poppy Day was issued yesterday by B. M. Smith, chairman of the Arlington County board of supervisors. Arlington Post No. 139, American Legion, will open its drive when Betty Sherwood, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Sherwood, sells the first poppy to County Manager Roy S. Braden.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars will open their sale at night at a dance at Odd Fellows Hall, sponsored by John Lyon Post, No. 1350. The committee for the sale consists of W. P. Pickin, E. A. Musselman and A. K. Gilman. The auxiliary committee consists of Mrs. Nettie Wolf, Mrs. Hattie Musselman, and Mrs. Loretta Burnett.

Mrs. Gorham F. Freer was elected president of the John Marshall School Parent-Teacher Association yesterday at the school. Other officers chosen are Mrs. T. C. Hudson, vice president; Mrs. F. B. Wilkinson, treasurer, and Mrs. John Dunaway, secretary. Mrs. John C. Gall and Mrs. D. W. Williams were elected delegates to the Arlington County Council.

Maynard Saunders has been elected chief of the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department to succeed James W. Tucker, resigned. Mr. Tucker has held office three years, during which the membership more than doubled. He resigned because of the pressure of his private business.

Henry Parker, registrar of Carne Precinct, will attend a meeting of the Carne Precinct Citizens Association tonight to permit members to register for the election in November. The session will be in St. Mary's Church.

Cheverly City Officials To Take Oaths Tonight

Those who will take the oath of office are Fred W. Gast, re-elected mayor over L. C. Rosenkrans; Alfred J. Owens, elected to the council from Ward 2 without opposition, and former Councilman Reginald H. Wentworth, elected from Ward 3 over N. G. Tayman.

A new marshal of police to succeed Chester B. Morris, who recently was named a justice of the peace, will be appointed by the mayor and council. Judge Morris will administer the oaths of office to Mayor Gast and Councilmen Owens and Wentworth.

Needle Work Will Be Shown

Unique Samples to Be Displayed at Riverdale Exhibit Thursday.

Unique examples of needle work will be featured at the Riverdale quilt and artcraft exhibit, to be held Thursday at the local postoffice under the sponsorship of the women of the Methodist Church.

Outstanding among the exhibits will be a handwoven quilt, sewn in Pennsylvania more than 200 years ago. It is the property of Mrs. Orbrey Knowles, of Riverdale. Its possession in the family has been traced through the family Bible.

Another quilt to be on display was made by a Negro slave in New Orleans in 1852. There also will be more than 100 other exhibits, including many valued as antiques.

The display will be open from 2 p. m. to 6 p. m., and from 8 p. m. until 10 p. m. Friday afternoon the exhibit will be viewed by the Colored Federated Clubs of Maryland. Funds obtained from the exhibit will be utilized in church welfare work.

Brain Abscess Blamed For Death of Athlete

Assistant Coroner Christopher J. Murphy yesterday announced after an autopsy that the death of James Liggett, former well-known McKinley High School athlete, was caused by a brain abscess.

Liggett, 19, died in Sibley Hospital several days ago. The youth was stricken April 26 while, as a member of the Mount Rainier Grays' baseball team, he was waiting to play in Fredericksburg, Va.

Funeral services will be held at his home, 2212 Channing street northeast, today at 10 a. m. Burial will be in Wardensville, W. Va.

School Addition To Be Dedicated

Services to BeHeld Tonight at Laurel (Md.) High.

Dedication of the new addition to Laurel (Md.) High School, delayed several months, will take place at 8 p. m. today.

Scheduled for last January, the dedication was postponed because of the illness of Mrs. Albert Ricks, president of the local Parent-Teacher Association.

Speakers at the exercises will include Nicholas Orem, Prince Georges County school superintendent; Mrs. G. W. S. Musgrave, president of the County Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Ricks, and County Commissioner Vinton D. Cockey.

The addition, which includes a gymnasium-auditorium and several classrooms, was made possible through a PWA loan and grant. Many outside improvements, including the laying of walks and planting of shrubbery, also were made possible by PWA funds.

Speaker Urges $600,000,000 Farm Repairs

Repairs averaging $100 for each of America's 6,000,000 farms would mean $600,000,000 in circulation and be a great step in improving the unemployment situation, former State Senator A. G. Ensor, of Harford County, Md., told a group of farmers at the Rockville, Md., courthouse yesterday.

The meeting was called by County Agent O. W. Anderson to permit Ensor, who is special farm representative for the Federal Housing Administration in Maryland, to talk on the advisability of modernization of county farms through FHA modernization loans.

The loans are not made by the Government, he said, but are guaranteed up to 20 per cent of the total by the Federal Government. They are made by private individuals and banking institutions on the basis of credit and ability to repay of the borrower.

The FHA does not urge any one who can not repay the loans to borrow the money, Ensor declared, but those who have the need for money to make repairs and improvements should take advantage of the Government's effort to lessen the freezing of money in the banks.

Fire Volunteers Plan a Memorial

Will Pay Tribute to Dead in Bladensburg June 2.

The Prince Georges County (Md.) Volunteer Firemen's Association will hold a memorial service for deceased firemen June 2 at 2 p. m. in St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal Church, Bladensburg.

Bishop James E. Freeman of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Washington, has accepted tentatively an invitation to be present at the service, which will be conducted by the Rev. Robert Lee Lewis, rector of St. Luke's. The Rev. Minter, chaplain of the Maryland State Firemen's Association, also is expected.

The association voted to send resolutions of sympathy to the families of L. V. Moxley, former president of the organization; William H. Mohler and James Pryor, all of whom died recently.

Bingo Party to Be Held.

A bingo party will be held by the young people of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church of Beltsville, Md., Friday night in the parish hall.

Bladensburg Typhoid Laid To High Waters

Flood Relief Funds Asked of Government by Prince Georges County.

Announcing an outbreak of typhoid fever in Bladensburg, Dr. A. B. Hooton, Prince Georges County health officer, said yesterday he believed the disease a result of the recent floods in that area.

In a letter to Allen A. Greenstreet, of Bladensburg, who has interested himself in the campaign for prevention of floods, Dr. Hooten declared that "we have had several cases of typhoid fever in Bladensburg which I believe to be traceable either directly or indirectly to floods."

"There is no doubt in my mind as to the floods in Bladensburg being a distinct and serious health menace, particularly in regard to typhoid fever, not to mention the possibility of the diseases which might indirectly develop from the floods," said Dr. Hooton.

Public Water Supply.

"If the Town of Bladensburg could force its citizens to connect with the public water supply this, too, would be a great help in the prevention of typhoid and other diseases.

"To my knowledge, some of the citizens there, in certain sections of the town, drink water out of the springs into which the sewage-saturated waters of the flood flow, and with such conditions existing we wonder why we have not had a great deal more of these diseases.

"Floods in certain climates would no doubt have a tendency to cause outbreaks of malaria. In my experience, however, this has not been the case in Bladensburg or other parts of Princes Georges County.

No Malaria Reported.

"We have not had a single case of malaria reported in the Bladensburg area for more than five years at least, and during that period only one case has been reported in the county which has not positively proved to be malaria. This was imported from Florida."

The Prince Georges County Federation of Citizens Associations yesterday addressed a letter to the White House and another to the Public Works Administration asking for $200,000 for flood relief.

Group at Hyattsville To Stage Card Party

A card party will be given by the Rector's Aid of Pinkney Memorial Protestant Episcopal Church, Hyattsville, Friday at 2 p. m. at the Beaver Dam Country Club.

Mrs. Frank S. Hinrichs, committee chairman, has announced these patronesses: Mrs. L. L. Gray, Mrs. Ernest Gasch, Mrs. Thomas E. Latimer, Mrs. Wellstood White, Mrs. Arthur Carr, Mrs. Arthur P. Gambrill, Mrs. Thomas Hammond Welsh, Mrs. John Johnston, Mrs. Dwight B. Galt, Mrs. Henry Thomas, Mrs. William E. Howard, president of the Rector's Aid; Mrs. William Taylor and Mrs. William T. Was So Nervous She Wanted To Scream
Husband Sees Great Difference Since She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MRS. CLARENCE R. DAVIDSON
R. #8, Mishawaka, Indiana
"When I was a young girl, the Vegetable Compound helped me. I am working hard now in a factory. One night, coming home I was so nervous I wanted to scream. I bought a bottle of your medicine. My husband remarked last night of the difference he sees in me. I am a cheerful, joking, young girl once more."
Was Nervous and Rundown
"I was nervous and rundown. When I got up in the morning I felt too tired to do my work. I had such backache and soreness in my stomach I was always full of gas. Since I took the Vegetable Compound I am like a new person. I feel well and strong to take care of my big home and two children." Mrs. Amelia Otto, 3626 Fifth Street, Brooklyn, Maryland.
"I Can Not Do My Work"
How often we hear a woman say it. How discouraged and helpless she feels. Here is a medicine which has helped thousands of women who were tired, nervous and rundown. It will quiet quivering nerves—give you just the extra energy you need. Try it! All druggists sell it.
"I am 19 years old and I have been married five months. I felt weak, sick, and rundown. Every afternoon I used to lie down. My mother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did and now I feel strong and full of energy. I do all my work and feel as well after a day's work as I did in the morning." Mrs. Edith Mae Ralston, Tyre, Pennsylvania.

Men, being men, can not tell you very much about women. For instance, to the young-man-in-love the opposite sex is all sweetness and light; the bachelor, who has dodged the ladies for years, believes them to be scheming minxes, and the married man is probably afraid to tell you what he really thinks.

Therefore, to get a true opinion of women, you must go to a woman for your information . . . and so we've gone to Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of The Washington Post's woman's pages, to find out about those lovely and sometimes sweet creatures who do so much to make our lives happy and miserable. And Miss Lindsay certainly tells us, and all other readers of The Post, about "The Gentle Sex." You'll find her impressions of her sisters . . . and brothers, too . . . in The Post each Sunday morning to entertain . . . and educate you. Each week she writes this amusing, intelligent column which so satirically punctures so many of our illusions, and which gives us an insight into the devious ways of women.

For example, she outlines the character of Tactful Tillie, who never comes right out and tells her friends they are getting fat. Oh, no! Tactful Tillie merely sniffs, "Are'nt you getting a bit stout, dearie?" Tactful Tillie, Miss Lindsay also reveals, prides herself on being able to find out disagreeable things by a method which is practically painless . . . to her.

Or Miss Lindsay describes the conversation at the Sunday dinner table; and her description is as true to life as the family laundry line. You can recognize Uncle Henry, who wants to talk politics, and Aunt Susan, who simply must tell Cousin Mary about those perfectly darling little needlepoint footstools she saw downtown for only $2.98, or, if you read carefully, you might recognize yourself!

We are sure that Miss Lindsay's sardonic humor will please you as much as it pleases us . . . we think it's one of the best features in The Sunday Post. Gently, oh, so very gently, the barb of her wit penetrates . . . but you're laughing so much you don't mind the sting.

"The Gentle Sex," which has become one of the best-liked columns in The Sunday Post, may be found each Sunday morning on the woman's pages of

Spelling Aces In Four County MatchesNamed

Contests Held in Frederick, Anne Arundel, Madison and Fairfax.

Eight county winners were added yesterday to the growing list of boys and girls who will take part in the area finals of the national spelling bee to be held in the New National Museum here Saturday at 10:30 a. m. The four counties to report their representatives are:

Anne Arundel—Charles Reilly, Jr., and Charles Johnson.

Frederick County, Md.—Paul Callahan and June DeGrange.

Madison—Fay Carpenter and Dorothy Clore.

Fairfax—Cooper Curtiss and Corda Stanley.

Charles Reilly, who won first place in the Anne Arundel match, Friday evening, attends Brooklyn Park. Mrs. Jesse S. Bourke, principal; Charles Johnson, second place winner, is in Mrs. Marguerite Hobbs' class at Linthecum Heights. Both are seventh grade pupils. Mrs. Hobbs, who was in charge of preliminary arrangements, reports that the contest, as in other counties, was a great success. Miss Nancy P. Hopkins, principal of Linthecum Heights School, where the match was held, presided. Miss Mabel Harrison called the words, and the judges were Miss Alma Blandford, principal of Dorothy School, and Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Stoll.

Madison County Contest.

Fay Carpenter and Dorothy Clore, first and second place winners, respectively, in Madison County, both are in Miss Mary E. Fray's seventh grade in the elementary department of Madison High School. R. J. Lilliard, principal of Madison High, where the match was held, presided. Mrs. J. B. Fray called the words, and the judges were Norman Carpenter, of Madison; D. H. Lohr, of Radiant, and Miss Lucy A. Davis, Criglersville. A. W. Yowell, division superintendent of schools, presented the prizes awarded by The Post.

Twenty-seven school representatives took part in the Fairfax County match Saturday evening in the Fairfax elementary school auditorium. Curtiss Cooper, who placed first, and Corda Stanley, second, both are in the eighth grade at Herndon High, J. H. Rice, principal. W. T. Woodson, superintendent of schools, presided. Miss Roberdeau Allison, of Lee-Jackson High School, called the words, and the judges were Miss Hazel Davis, of Burke, and Mrs. Carson Ryan, of Falls Church.

Miss Mary D. Fogle, of the Parkway School, in Frederick, where the Frederick County match was held Saturday, reports Paul Callahan, of Emmitsburg, Francis B. Myers, principal, as first-place winner, and June De Grange, of Myersville, as runner-up. Myersville was entered by Paul Lee Hoffmaster.

Details of Calvert Match.

Constance McCready, of Solomons, and Mildred Soper, of Huntingtown, were announced Sunday as winners of the Calvert County match; at that time, details of the match were lacking. Miss E. Virginia Dorsey, of Prince Frederick School, where the contest was held, was chairman. Miss Mattie Hardesty called the words, and the judges were Mrs. Roy Williams, Mrs. Carrow Prout and Mrs. Joseph Lore.

Pupils participating, all of whom will receive certificates of merit from The Post, were Constance McCready, Willis Dodson, Mary Dorsey and Daisey Dodson, Solomons; Mary Lancaster Parran and Catherine Ritchie, Wallville; Marguerite Pitcher and Iris Elliott, Broomes Island; Dorothy Tucker, Emma Lee Horsman, Regina O'Neille and Lillian Robinson, Prince Frederick; Mildred Soper and Raymond Gibson, Huntingtown; Margaret Paddy and Eleanor Ward, Beach; Charles Howe and Marie McCready, Fairview.

Champion spellers of other schools announced yesterday are Charles Johnson and Yvonne Smith, Linthicum Heights; Doris Disney, Ruth Dorsey, Elizabeth Fisher, Vivian Seibert, Maureen Olsen and Edward Adams, Dorsey; Evelyn Payne and Erma Thorpe, Western.

Miss Alma Blandford, principal of Dorsey school, writes: "I am very proud of the fact that Dorsey Disney won third place, even if she were not so fortunate as to win a prize. We have enjoyed this contest and I wish to thank you for your interest."

Only four more divisions are still to announce their representatives for the area finals.

Witness Denies He Had Receipt In Liquor Trial

Gas Station Operator Disclaims Paper Brooks Says He Saw.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 13.—A Union Hall, Franklin County, filling station operator's testimony that he never had any receipt for $25 signed by Willard R. Hodges, one of 23 defendants at the trial of alleged Franklin County liquor conspirators in the Federal District Court here, today brought from Government counsel a disclaimer of any "bad faith" in the case.

Clayton Bernard, the filling station operator who admitted "moonshining" on a fairly large scale, denied possession of a receipt which Paul Brooks, a previous Government witness, said Bernard had shown him, and defense counsel hammered on the point. Brooks had said he had been told by Bernard that Bernard had paid Hodges the money to pass on to another official.

Sterling Hutcheson, special prosecutor of the alleged conspirators, disclaimed previous knowledge of the differences in testimony when the defense hinted it looked "suspicious."

Fourth Week of Trial.

"I will say one thing," Hutcheson declared. "I'm not guilty of any bad faith in this case."

Bernard told of paying protection money, $25 each "run" of his still, to the late T. J. Richards, and $10 to Charles C. Greer, whose plea April 22 was nolo contendere, both deputies in Franklin County at that time.

The 114th Government witness appeared as the fourth week of the trial began, with the Government tying together loose ends of its case in the morning and turning its attention to illicit distilling and liquor-running in the afternoon.

Chief among the witnesses was Coleman Lawrence, 32, of Leatherwood, Henry County, who said whisky he bought from John or Walter Turner—each at various times—he transported to Lynchburg at the average rate of 400 gallons a week beginning in 1931, most of it for John W. Rosser, convicted liquor "baron."

'Middies' Deal On Sidewalks In Fever Scare

Business Moves Outside as Annapolis Places Semi-quarantine.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 13. — Rigid semi-quarantine discipline was in force at the United States Naval Academy today as officials sought to eliminate any possible danger to midshipmen as a result of Anne Arundel County's incipient scarlet fever scare.

With two new cases reported from the upper end of the county to bring the May total to 17, orders were issued preventing middies and other academy personnel from entering homes or public places in the city.

Tables on Sidewalk.

Tradesmen and shopkeepers promptly brought their business out-of-doors, and Annapolis took on a quaint old-world atmosphere as restaurateurs set up tables on the sidewalk to cater to Academy trade.

Although no cases of the fever have developed within the walls of the institution, three have been reported in Annapolis.

With June week exercises and summer practice cruise near, authorities took no chances, and classmen who ordered their officers' uniforms did so with the utmost publicity. Tailors brought their pins and tape out to the sidewalks to get the measurements.

Can't Ride in Autos.

Yesterday, midshipmen and their "dates" spent Sunday afoot or in porch and garden swings. In addition to the ban on entering homes, they can not ride in automobiles.

Even telegraph offices offered "curb service," their uniformed patrons writing out messages in the street and handing them to messengers.

Film Stars Arrive For Academy Picture

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 13.—Three movie stars were in Baltimore today, en route to Annapolis for the making of a Naval Academy picture.

Arriving from Hollywood on a special train, Sir Guy Standing, Richard Cromwell and Tom Brown were accompanied by a group of about 100 persons, said to be the largest "location" party to leave the center of moviedom in years.

Some of those who arrived today were substituting for the men killed or injured in the plane crash in Missouri in which Senator Bronson M. Cutting was killed.

The group had planned to go directly to Annapolis and remain there but an outbreak of scarlet fever forced them to remain in Baltimore. They will motor to and from Annapolis each day, it was said.

T.R. Brown Refuses To Run for Mayor

G. O. P. at Annapolis Is Considering Sherman.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 13.—Although Republican leaders of the city concentrated on T. Roland Brown, president of the Annapolis Water Co., as the logical candidate for mayor at the municipal election to be held in July, Mr. Brown tonight let it be known that he would not seek the office. Indications now are that party chiefs will back Charles H. Sherman, who, for several years has been secretarytreasurer of the water company.

For a time there was a prospect that Walter E. Quenstedt would be candidate to succeed himself for a fourth term, but he is slated for the post of superintendent of the Maryland House of Correction.

In the meantime, city Democratic leaders are backing Louis N. Phipps, automobile dealer. Until a few days ago a primary fight was indicated, but William F. Shromeyer withdrew from the race.

Knights Templar Plan Parade at Clarksburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 13.—A parade at 4 p. m. Wednesday with eight commandery and high school bands and hundreds of knights in line will feature the sixty-first annual conclave of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of West Virginia, to be held Wednesday and Thursday in the Masonic Temple here.

More than 2,000 knights and their ladies are expected to attend the event. The program will include speeches, band concerts, luncheons, receptions, the annual ball, visits to scenic spots in the city and other features, besides the regular business of the conclave. The annual election of officers will mark the closing session at noon Thursday.

Dr. Sly Acting Dean Of West Virginia U.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Morgantown, W. Va., May 13.—Dr. John F. Sly, professor of political science and director of the bureau of government research, is assuming additional duties as acting dean of the faculties of West Virginia University, by authorization of the board of governors.

Dr. Sly succeeded Dr. Robert A. Armstrong, acting president since January 1, when Roscoe Turner retired.

Pay for Attorneys Ordered.

Baltimore, May 13 (AP).—Payment of $15,000 was ordered made out of the receivership funds of the Title Guarantee & Trust Co. to Jessie N. Bowen and Harry E. Karr, attorneys, who devised a reorganization plan for the company. Three times this amount had been certified by a group of lawyers as a reasonable fee for this service.

Nice Cautions Magistrates.

Baltimore, May 13 (AP).—Giving 13 of his recently appointed magistrates a bit of "fatherly advice" at luncheon here, Gov. Nice called upon them to keep political and other biased influence out of their decisions. He promised no interference with their courts.

Farming Pays, Eastern Shore Survey Shows

16-Acre Tract Yielded One Farmer $1,200 Yearly, Census Reveals.

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., May 13.—The agricultural survey on the Eastern Shore has resulted in the farmers forming a consensus on profitable husbandry in this rural district.

In predepression days a farm of from 10 to 25 acres in this vicinity would yield an income of between $3,000 and $4,000. But in those times a half-acre of potatoes brought $350, an acre of Marion strawberries sold for $730 and tomatoes $560 an acre.

That heyday of farming is a memory, but good farming still pays dividends here. It is the consensus that the largest agricultural enterprise in this county is conducted by Morris Adams and King B. Miller. This season they are directly operating, through ownership or leasehold, nine farms with a total of 1,030 acres, using 45 mules and horses and seven tractors.

The smallest profitably operated farm, it is agreed, is that of Charles C. Dall, whose 16 acres brought him as much as $1,200 yearly. A distinctive feature of this tract is that Dall grows no tomatoes; he concentrates on potatoes, corn, peas, onions and clover.

State's Pastors Meet At Jacksons Mill, W. Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Jacksons Mill, W. Va., May 13.—Scores of ministers from all parts of the State assembled today in the State park for the ninth annual State ministers' conference which opened tonight and will continue through Friday.

The address of welcome was made by William H. Kendrick, director of the Four-H Camp. Dr. E. J. Woofter, of Salem, chairman of the State Ministers' Conference Commission, responded.

Mrs. Gerry Is Hostess At Cocktails

Entertains Women of Two Newspaper Organizations.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, wife of Senator Gerry, of Rhode Island, always has been a favorite with the members of Capital society and members of the women's newspaper organizations in Washington. Mrs. Gerry entertained at a cocktail party for the officers and members of the National Women's Press Club and the Newspaper Women's Club yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Gerry is an honorary member of both organizations and during the years Senator Gerry was not serving in Congress came to Washington each spring to attend the annual stunt party of the Press Club. The Newspaper Women's Club was organized during her absence and as soon as she returned to make her home she was elected to that organization. Mrs. Gerry entertains each year for the newspaper women, and yesterday's party was a delightful one.

The home of Senator and Mrs. Gerry, on R street, is a charming and different house, with many rare furnishings in the drawing room and hall. The windows of the drawing room are hung with handsome draperies and curtained with navy blue marquisette, which gives the room a soft, dim light which is enhanced by the antique candelabra in which the hostess burns tapers. Huge tapestries in rich colorings are hung on the walls, and beneath the windows are panels of mirrors. When the curtains are drawn they give the effect of a room lined with mirrors.

Mrs. Gerry received her guests informally and then mingled with them. She wore a tea gown of printed chiffon in shades of red, green and black on a white background. There were cocktails, delicious sandwiches and hors d'oeuvres, and lots of conversation.

Decatur House Party Is Given By Mrs. Leiter

Mrs. John R. Williams and Her Thrift Shop Committee Are Guests.

Among the guests were Mrs. Philip O. Coffin, president of the Children's Country Home Board; Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, president of the ladies' board of the Children's Hospital; Mrs. Frederick DeC. Faust, president of the Child Welfare; Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro, president of the Columbia Hospital Woman's Board; Mrs. Randall H. Hagner, Mrs. Arthur O'Brien, Mrs. Thomas Claytor, Mrs. Kenna Elkins, Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Mrs. Alan Kirk, Mrs. Lawrence Groner, Mrs. William Payne Meredith, Mrs. William Wright, Miss Gertrude Webb, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mrs. William Payne Meredith, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Daniel C. Long and Mrs. Blaise de Sibour.

The two lower floors of historic Decatur House, which is on Lafayette Square, will be on exhibition both May 22 and 23. Mrs. Roosevelt, whose husband is a direct descendant of Benjamin H. Latrobe, architect of Decatur House, will be hostess at tea in the garden during the two days the home will be open to the public for the first time in its history.

C. J. Montavon, Of Ohio, Marries Washington Girl

The wedding of Miss Louise Anna Kirchgessner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Kirchgessner, to Mr. Charles J. Montavon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Montavon, of Portsmouth, Ohio, took place yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock in the Holy Trinity Church in Georgetown.

White spring flowers, intermingled with blossoms in pastel tints, formed the decoration in the sanctuary, which was banked with palms and ferns. The nuptial mass was celebrated by the Rev. Henry J. Nelles, and the young cousins of the bride, Louis and Herman Franke, were the acolytes.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of heavy ivory-tinted satin, with a shirred trimming below the high cowl neckline, and long tight sleeves puffed above the elbows and ending in points over the hands. The veil, which was bordered with point lace, fell from a Juliet cap of the lace to the end of the long train. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Weigand Maid of Honor.

Miss Alberta Weigand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Weigand, of Baltimore, attended her cousin as maid of honor, wearing a trailing gown of periwinkle blue mousseline de soie, made with a sheer cape of the material covered with ruffles.

The other attendants, Mrs. Harry Sterling and Miss Mary O'Conner, wore gowns of pink mousseline de soie, with jackets of tiny ruffles. All of the attendants carried arm bouquets of spring flowers.

Mr. George Reges was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Rudolph Kirchgessner, jr., and Mr. Joseph Kirchgessner, brothers of the bride.

Reception Held at Home.

A reception and wedding breakfast followed at the home of the bride's parents in Georgetown. The bridal couple was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Kirchgessner, who wore a pastel blue crepe frock with a white straw hat, and a corsage bouquet of pink roses, and Mrs. William Montavon, of Washington, aunt of the bridegroom, who wore a printed chiffon gown, with a white hat and corsage of sweet peas.

Mr. Montavon and his bride left later for a motor trip through the East en route to Portsmouth, where they will make their home. The bride wore a traveling suit of blue crepe with a hat and accessories to match.

Device Offered To Relieve All Fatigued Feet

Shoppers Find Handbags for Summer on Counters in D. C. Stores.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

HOW OFTEN it happens that the simplest treatment is the best! This theory is especially borne out by remarkable results achieved by the small, simple, and ever so ingenious "toe-ties." These give you cause for wonder that such little gadgets can relieve tired and aching feet, corns, callouses, and burning soles, bunions, leg ache, weak ankles and even certain types of rheumatic pains.

Of course, there's a very excellent reason why it will. Foot specialists generally agree that half the ills the feet are heir to are due to pressure on nerves. The "toe-ties" fit around the toe, raise the joint, and relieve the pressure.

If you by any chance are suffering unusual foot fatigue, or are bothered by any of these foot ailments, why don't you give "toe-ties" a try? They are inexpensive—and you might find them the very blessings you've needed.

Handbags for Summer.

Fashion experts tell us that light colored handbags are going to be more popular than ever this summer. But—as we've learned from sad experience—to be practical they must be easily cleaned.

"Sleek"—a new white summer handbag is all that we could ask for. No manner how hard or how often we scrub it, it continues to look brand new, spick and span.

This bag was evolved by David Lewis, famous designer of smart accessories. It is made of a new material called "Sleek," a flexible white composition with a smooth, satiny texture. It is bound with jumbo piping of peasant linen, in white, navy, or red, or in black, or brown to complement the classic spectator sports shoe.

The design of this ultra chic bag is made possible by the ingenious way in which the slide fastener has been used to secure it—across the top and down the side so that the purse may be opened out fully to give easy access to the interior. But when it's closed it's as good as locked! The contents are really safe from accidental loss.

Vest Pocket Bridge Book.

Mr. and Mrs. Bridge Fan who would like a small bridge book which fits a vest pocket to a T should inquire about the new one featured in a downtown store. It's a completely revised, meaty digest of the Culbertson system. The price, 10 cents.

It's an immense help for hasty consultation. You can take a peep into it for valuable advice while the bidding comes your way. The contents are so arranged that you can find whatever you're looking for in almost no time at all.

Artistic Centerpieces.

A low centerpiece that takes care of short-stemmed flowers is the ever-so-attractive palette shapped aluminum table decoration.

Little cups around the edge are just the width and depth for forget-me-nots, violets and single blossoms. When the flowers are arranged around the edges they suggest multicolored daubs of paint.

Suggested Bridge Prize.

A certain square shaped mirror box with a drawer which pulls forward is attractive enough in itself. It becomes even more of a temptation when you discover its contents—a string of lovely pearls!

This two-fold bargain is offered to you for only $1. It would make an ideal little bridge prize, or guest remembrance.

The box itself will serve many purposes. It may be used as a catch-me-all, a cigarette container or a jewelry case.

Recreation Expert Urges Intelligent Planning

By Emma Pesley Lincoln.

"MUNICIPAL recreation areas are your best crime preventives. They are also your best health safeguard and your best character builders. When a child has become imbued with the rules of the playground he has something workable to fall back on in the game of living."

It was Randolph Huus speaking, authority on problems of municipal government, who has recently completed a first-hand study of 25 systems of municipal recreation in 21 selected Eastern and Middlewestern cities.

One of the outstanding facts learned in this survey, according to Mr. Huus, is that civic leaders and officials no longer consider the supervised city play area a civic frill. All are alive and awake to its vital importance from every standpoint, he said.

Lack of Planning Noted.

While playgrounds, which have been closed during the last two or three years, are opening again with PWA and CWA funds, the need increases so greatly from year to year that startling inadequacies are revealed on every hand, he continued.

Not lack of funds, but lack of intelligent planning is the chief drawback to civic recreation, Mr. Huus asserted. He thinks that money spent badly in civic recreation efforts is as bad as no effort at all.

The great needs, Mr. Huus found in his surveys, were trained workers, consistent all-year programs, better placement of play areas, a few well-equipped intelligently directed actitivities rather than confused, too greatly diversified and ineffective programs.

One way to be assured of a superior class of workers in this field would be to pay better salaries, Mr. Huus said. The city which attempts to cut the cost of its playground upkeep in hiring low-paid supervisors, defeats its own purpose, he declared.

"In an old, established city, the problem of placement of play areas is serious and difficult," he said. "Children's response depends so largely upon the accessibility of playgrounds. They continue to play in crowded streets, because mothers prefer it to the risk of sending them on lengthy jaunts.

Praises Efforts Here.

Complimenting the national Capital on the efforts made in developing recreational facilities Mr. Huss said that excellent tennis courts were a good example of what could be done in providing play for the public.

Having written a book just off the press titled, "Financing Municipal Recreation," Mr. Huus is full of figures, statistics, expenditures, budgets and ways and means.

"Small charges are the best means of helping in financing recreation parks," he said. "To take care of those who can not afford even small fees at the present time, certain hours or days might be set aside when there would be no charge."

Among the cities which have planned most efficiently for recreation, Mr. Huus mentioned Washington, Los Angeles, and Minneapolis, Minn., (where park system and play areas are combined).

In community response he called attention to Jones Beach, Long Island, and the activities in Westchester County, N. Y.

Mr. Huus has been in charge of courses in municipal government at Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh; Western Reserve University, Cleveland; consultant to the city manager and director of the Police Training School, Wichita, Kans., and has done graduate work in his subject at Columbia University and Syracuse, as well as having a diploma from the Institute of Public Administration in New York City.

He is in Washington to complete research on his next book on recreation problems.

Heart Disease Toll 250,000 A Year in U.S.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

HEART disease in the United States claims approximately a quarter of a million victims each year, and half of these succumb because of the wear and tear on the heart due to high blood pressure.

The most common result of heart weakness is enlargement. The regularly contracting muscle endeavors to carry its load, but it may finally fatigue, stretch and dilate. In a high percentage of cases, nevertheless, by rest and through the use of digitalis, this thinned heart muscle may be brought back to normal, that is, unless some actual disease has destroyed too many muscle fibres. Whenever high blood pressure exists over years of time an increased load is thrown upon the organ and, in many cases, the heart walls will slowly stretch.

Overexercise Exonerated.

It seems to be reasonably well established that overexercise is not responsible for much of the heart damage that we see about us. While the heart may beat faster because an increased output of blood is demanded and there may be a temporary rise in blood pressure, yet excessive activity is usually of short duration.

But we must not be foolishly indifferent to a persistent increased pressure within the circulatory system. It means that the blood vessels and the heart are subjected to a force that is abnormal for these structures.

Early symptoms may be noted in shortness of breath on exercise or exertion, a slight swelling of the ankles toward evening, and now and then difficult breathing that may continue for an hour or two.

Remedying the Situation.

To remedy the situation we must seek the cause, and the following points must be kept in mind; (1), infection should be ruled out and elminiated; (2), worry, apprehension and overwork are to be avoided; (3), the weight must be reduced to normal or slightly below; (4), salt should be largely eliminated from the diet with the possible substitution of potassium chloride or ammonium chloride; (5), diet should consist of vegetables and fruits, with at least one good helping of meat—beef or mutton preferred—each day; (6), all condiments such as mustard and pepper should be eliminated; (7), water drinking should be restricted at meal time, but may be indulged in between meals, that is, one to two hours after the meal has been eaten; (8), rest must be insisted upon—an hour if possible—after the noon and evening meals; (9), the best form of exercise consists in walking in the open air; (10), a daily tepid or warm bath should be taken.

Little Experience in Sewing Is Required for These Blouses

Pattern No. 933.

THE BLOUSE gives life to the suit. And when blouses are as quickly and inexpensively made as these they can give lots of variety, too. Why not make several? One in a tie silk, for instance; one in a bright-colored taffeta, and the design with long sleeves to wear as a jacket-blouse with your skirt alone.

Even those who have had no sewing experience can make these little blouses. A completely illustrated instruction chart comes with them. The pattern is designed in sizes 14 to 42. The yardage requirements for each design are given on the pattern envelope.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

IF MAY 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 11:15 a. m. to 1:15 p. m. and from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m.

Be careful on this day that your imagination does not cause you to have some misconception as to the attitudes of some of your friends. You may be inclined to think you are being discussed, when such may not be the case. Do not allow yourself to be super-sensitive, for it is only productive of unhappiness, frequently without the slightest justification. Business conditions will require energetic measures to be used, if results are to prove satisfactory.

If a woman and May 14 is your birthday, for contentment, as well as peace of mind, you should seek your recreation as much as possible out of doors, for Mother Nature has a strong appeal for you. Flowers probably have a soothing effect, so you should surround yourself with them, as much as possible. You possibly have excellent taste, and a great deal of skill with your hands. If you are conscious of possessing a decided talent, under no circumstances neglect it, for through it you may gain both reputation and money.

The child born on May 14, during its adolescent years, may be inclined to be insistent on having its own way in trivial things. Firmness should be used and discipline enforced.

If a man and May 14 is your birthday, if your contacts with your family and business associates, you will cultivate the habit of displaying a genial disposition, you will find life comparatively free of petty complications. The pulpit, lecture platform, politics, writing, as well as salesmanship, offer a man of your personality a good chance to display your ability. Home life should bring you a great deal of contentment.

What Chance for Happiness if Girl Marries Man Who Has Thrice Slapped Her?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: What chance would a girl have of attaining happiness if she married a man who three times during their courtship lost his temper to the extent that he struck her in the face?

* * * *

Strange as it may sound, she is still in love with him and seems unable to give him up. The man in question has many admirable qualities but a good disposition does not seem to be one of them. Very truly yours C. I. T.

Psychological Problem.

DEAR C. I. T.: Happiness is relative. Webster's dictionary defines it as "a state of pleasurable content with one's condition of life." The fact that the girl in question "is still in love with" the slap-dealing man "and seems unable to give him up" brings us to yet another word in the dictionary, namely, masochism.

* * * *

Masochism is defined as an "abnormal sexual passion in which one finds pleasure in abuse and cruelty from his or her associate." Supposing, therefore, this particular girl is one of those abnormal persons who thrive emotionally on abuse and cruelty administered by her beloved, she might find one kind of happiness in marrying this man.

* * * *

However, if she is a perfectly normal person, I should say her chances for married happiness with such a man were practically nil. Love which holds happy marriage together is a stronger, gentler, more beautiful and spiritually enduring thing than the merely biologic urge which often drives two persons into each other's arms and subsequently to the altar.

* * * *

And a recurrent slap in the face from one's angry fiance in courtship days can not be construed by any remote stretch of the imagination as implying his possession of such qualities as the self-control which spells strength of character; the self-respect that expresses itself in never-failing respect for others; the gentleness which particularly protects those weaker than or dependent upon himself; or the spiritual concept of life, particularly of married life, which motivates a husband to love, honor and cherish his wife to the end of her days.

* * * *

I am hard put to it to know just what could be the "many admirable qualities" of a man so obviously deficient in moral strength, self-respect, gentleness and a fine sense of honor and noblesse oblige. If you, C. I. T., are the girl who got slapped, I am a little afraid your vision is still out of focus. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock, after which Mrs. Pomeroy C. Merrill will give a talk.

Speedy Start Is Necessary For Popovers

Batter Should Be Put in Hot Tins Immediately After Beating.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IT TAKES MORE than one trick to make a popover that will really pop. The popover mixture is the very thinnest of quick bread mixtures, which means that special effort must be used to incorporte air into the batter and in so doing the liquid is broken into tiny droplets. This may be accomplished by beating the mixture for a few minutes with a rotary egg beater. The mixture, because it is so very thin, will have a tendency to lose very rapidly the air beaten into it. For this reason, the batter should be transferred immediately to hot greased muffin tins so that the baking will start as soon as possible. If the pans are cold, the baking will be delayed for several minutes and the mixture will lose some of the air which has been so carefully worked into the batter. Iron pans are usually recommended for popover mixtures because they may be heated first, but other metal containers or even glass and earthenware pans can be used successfully.

The oven should be hot at first and when the batter has risen to full height, the temperature should be decreased to permit the popover mixture to bake thoroughly without burning. The pans should be greased with just enough fat, not butter, to keep the batter from adhering to the bottom or sides. Never use so much fat that after the pans have been heated it will form a little pool in the bottom of the pan. This will spoil the texture of your popover. Here is the recipe:

Popovers.

1¼ cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 teaspoon sugar
1 cup milk

Mix flour, salt and sugar. Gradually add the milk and the well-beaten eggs. Beat thoroughly. Have ready some small ramekins or muffin pans, well greased and piping hot. Fill them about half full of the batter and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 20 minutes. Lower to 350 degrees F. and bake 15 to 20 minutes more.

Corn Pone Query.

Q. How do you make corn pone?—A. This is an Alabama recipe for corn pone.

1 pint of white corn meal
1 large tablespoon melted lard
¾ cup boling water
Milk
1 teaspoon salt

Put the meal and salt together in a bowl, and scald with boiling water; add melted lard and enough milk to form a soft but workable dough. Mold with the hands into oblong cakes, about 5 inches long and 3 inches wide, and not more than ¾ inch thick. Bake in biscuit pans in a moderately hot oven until a golden brown.

For culinary assistance, call Dorothea Duncan, National 4200, or write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelop, in care of The Washington Post.

Parents Held at Fault If Boy Becomes Sissy

Dr. Levy, Psychiatrist, Blames Inferiority Complex for Tomboy Behavior of Girls in Speech at Meeting Here.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

SISSIES ARE MADE, not born. The boy who is effeminate usually has one or both of his parents to blame for it. When a mother ties her son to her apron strings and lavishes upon him an inordinate amount of affection it's a pretty good sign she isn't in love with her husband.

The father who makes a sissy out of his son usually does so for one of two reasons: Either he wanted a daughter instead of a son, or he subconsciously doubts his own ability and doesn't want any competition from the boy.

These conclusions have been reached by Dr. John Levy, psychiatrist, after practicing in a New York children's clinic. Yesterday afternoon he spoke at the forensic psychiatry section meeting, a part of the ninety-first annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association in session at the Mayflower.

At the section meeting Dr. Levy presented the case history of a 9-year-old boy who had been emasculated by a self-made successful father. After the child had been brought to the clinic he expressed his hatred for his father by unconsciously identifying him with Hitler, Dr. Levy explained.

Child Freed of Conflict.

As the psychiatrist's treatment progressed the little boy worked out a plot in which he was a soldier appointed by the President of the United States to kill Hitler. After he had gone through the improvised playlet the child was free of his conflict.

A sense of inferiority is usually responsible for the effeminate boy's opposite, the tom-boy girl, according to Dr. Levy. Sometimes her feeling of inferiority is the result of her parents' desire for a son instead of a daughter, he said. Frequently the feeling is engendered by older brothers.

But no matter what causes the original sense of inferiority the tom-boy almost always grows into a vampish young woman, Dr. Levy has noticed.

"When she is a child she tries to get over her sense of inferiority by beating the boys at their games and sports," he said. "Then when she is older she tries to show her power over men by making them fall in love with her; just another way of assuaging her wounded spirit."

The youngster who fails to receive from his parents as much affection as his nature requires is almost sure to develop conflicts, Dr. Levy is convinced.

He cited two such cases yesterday at the section meeting on forensic psychiatry. One dealt with a 14-year-old neurotic boy who suffered from anxiety because he thought his mother did not love him. The mother, according to the psychiatrist, was extremely attentive to her son, but probably failed to show affection. The boy decided she must be in love with several men.

After he began taking treatment at the clinic he wrote a play about a king who was extravagantly fond of his daughter. The boy acted out the play on a miniature stage built with blocks in the psychiatrist's office. Through expressing his emotional conflict in this make-believe way he rid himself of the conflict, Dr. Levy said.

Play Acting Found Beneficial.

The other case history dealt with a girl of 16, a hysterical personality who made dramatic attempts to gain adult attention. She faked fainting spells and other illnesses, told wild tales of attempted attacks upon her.

Back of this desire for adult attention, Dr. Levy explained, was the girl's great love for her father. She cared little for her stepmother, was probably jealous of her. On the other hand the father was a little afraid of his love for his daughter, and so did not exhibit any affection. This made the girl resort to any means which would focus his attention upon her.

After she came to the clinic she worked off her conflict by writing a phantasy about a trip to the moon and commenting upon it.

Play-acting, miniature theatricals, fairy tales and other make-believe mediums are a great help to the psychiatrist working with emotionally disturbed children, Dr. Levy has found. They make it easier for the youngsters to express forbidden loves, antagonisms, fears and unpermitted desires for revenge, he believes.

Dr. Levy thinks Santa Claus, the Easter bunny and other imaginative characters have their place in the life of a child, providing they are used realistically. And by realistically he means they should be kept in the realm of the imagination instead of being translated into live beings.

Backs Toy Weapons.

Dr. Levy also believes it's a good thing for children to play with toy guns. Far from romanticising war, the miniature gun battles debunk it, in his opinion. And what's just as important, it gives the youngsters an outlet for some of their natural cruel impulses. Children have plenty of those impulses, he declared. So do adults.

What about sex?

"Children should be taught about it as soon as they are born," Dr. Levy said. "Seriously, the thing should be explained as the child's mind is ready to receive it. But all children should be informed about it."

In addition to presenting several case histories at the meeting, Dr. Levy showed slides which illustrated the phantasies and playlets worked out by the children in combating their conflicts.

Contest Entries Due Thursday, Editor Reminds

This is the last call for entries for The Post's recipe contest for frozen desserts. All recipes should be received by Thursday. Three prizes, $3, $2 and $1, will be awarded.

Be sure to include the directions for freezing desserts and specify whether a crank freezer or mechanical refrigerator is used.

Send all recipes to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Washington Post. Only one recipe from each contestant will be considered for a prize.

Nice Urges U. S. Restore Relief Fund

Retail Grocers Close Convention, Resolving to Fight Levy.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 13.—Estimating the 1 per cent gross receipts tax would yield the amount required of it, Gov. Harry W. Nice today urged Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins to help the State meet its relief crisis by restoring the $300,000 reduction in the May allotment.

The Governor met with the board of State Aid and Charities in an emergency session today. Samuel E. Shanahan, director of charities; Harry Greenstein, director of Federal relief in Maryland, and others were present.

Nice asserted that after Greenstein received funds derived from the gross receipts tax, he would make strong representation to Hopkins to have the Government make up any remaining deficit.

The telegram to Hopkins, duplicates of which were sent to Senators Millard E. Tydings and George L. Radcliffe, said:

"Indications are that Maryland gross receipts tax law will produce the estimated $5,000,000. With $20,000 reported and 10,000 to 12,000 not as yet reported, including some of the larger taxpayers, receipts amount to $280,000 for the month of April. Because of curtailments made in Maryland's Federal allotment we are facing serious crisis and earnestly petition you to make restitution of $300,000 so greatly needed in uor State."

HARRY W. NICE.

There was some discussion as to whether the money should be turned over to the State relief administrator in face of the threat of the Retail Trade Association to test the constitutionality of the receipts tax law in the courts.

The Governor said Maryland had the responsibility of taking care of real relief cases and preventing people from going hungry, and that the money would be made available to the relief administrator. If later it had to be returned to those who had paid it, some means would be found to raise it, he said.

Grocers Select Fisher as President

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., May 13 (AP).—The Independent Retail Grocers Association closed the business session of their annual convention here tonight by electing Edward A. Fisher, of Cumberland, as president, and adopting a esries of resolutions, one of them directed against the gross receipts tax.

The association went on record as favoring a coninuance of the move to contest validity of the 1 per cent receipts levy in the courts and resolved to urge members of the General Assembly to request Gov. Nice to call a special session of the Legislature to repeal the measure.

Other resolutions urged Maryland Senators and Representatives to oppose the Black 30-hour week bill, the Wagner labor relaitons bill and amendments to the AAA.

William Stellhorn, of Baltimore, was elected treasurer; Howard Stolzenback, of Baltimore, recording secretary, and Harry W. Walker, of Baltimore, secretary.

Vice presidents, who with the other officers, comprise the State board of directors, were named as follows:

Herman Lissy, Baltimore; John R. Fisher, Hagerstown; J. M Culler, Frederick; Francis Keefer, Westminster; Harvey H. Garlitz, Cumberland; George Egan, Annapolis; E. P. Ellis, Laurel; George H. Beauhler, Silver Springs; William Rose, Centerville; Leland Insley, Cambridge, and Grosscup Jones, Salisbury.

Frederick was named unofficially this afternoon as the next convention city, pending formal approval by the delegates.

Martinsville Plant Crippled.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., May 13—The town of Martinsville today was operating with Appalachian Power Co. current following the destruction of a generator in Martinsville's own hydro-electric plant by a lightning bolt. The private power company's feeders were quickly tapped and after a few hours of limited service energy was again flowing through the emergency set-up.

Diocesan Body Of Episcopal Church to Meet

Program Is Outlined for Fredericksburg Session This Week.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 13.—Two hundred Episcopal clergy and laity in the State are expected here when the Diocesan Council convenes for a two-day session Wednesday, following the sesqui-centennial of the Virginia Diocese Tuesday.

The opening service marking the 140th anniversary of the Virginia branch of the Episcopal Church in America will be held at St. Paul's Church King George County, Tuesday, when a tablet honoring the Rev. Joseph R. Andrus, first rector of the old church, after its revival and first missionary sent by the Episcopal Church of Virginia to a foreign land, will be unveiled. Bishop Coadjutor Frederick D. Goodwin and the Rev. G. McLaren Brydon will speak.

The celebration will be concluded at St. George's Church here at 8 p. m., when the Rev. Beverley D. Tucker, rector of St. Paul's Church, Richmond, will speak.

The first council session is scheduled for 10 a. m. Wednesday, when holy communion will be celebrated by Bishop H. St. George Tucker and Bishop Goodwin. This will be followed by an organization meeting and the annual address of Bishop Tucker.

The Rev. J. Yates Downman, formerly of Fredericksburg, will lead an evening prayer service and deliver a sermon Wednesday night.

Thursday will be devoted to business sessions.

Hood College Holds Sports Day Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 13.—The annual spring sports day will be celebrated on the Hood College campus here Saturday.

The program will include the annual horse show, an exhibition of paintings of mid-Victorian sports and other events. At the annual Athletic Association's banquet later in the day, results of the day's events will be announced and team championships for the year will be made known. Announcement will also be made of the selection for White Blazer Girl, the student chosen from the junior class for leadership, scholarship and participation in athletics.

Fred Clarke was prince and the maids of honor were Julia Connell, Marjorie Cooper, Almeda Cheshire, Peggy Wolverton, Edythe Wuntz and Mary Evelyn Sliger. Edward Furlong, George Michaels, Webster Stayman, Leroy Davis, Robert Coffman and Jack Wolverton acted as escorts.

Gambrill Seeks Right To Build Toll Bridge

By the Associated Press.

Authority for the George Washington Memorial Bridge Public Corporation to construct a toll bridge over the Potomac River near Dahlgren, Va., is asked in a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Gambrill (Democrat), of Maryland.

Authority is requested for either a highway or combined highway and railroad bridge to connect Maryland and Virginia.

Tax on Plant Suspended.

Cumberland, Md., May 13 (AP).—This city has joined Allegany County in granting tax exemption for ten years on the plant of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. Trustees said such action would mean much in favor of a sale of the plant to a concern which would continue operating on a profitable scale.

Posse of 150 Abandon Search In Mountains for Airplane

By the Associated Press.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 13.—Search for an airplane reported to have crashed Sunday morning in the mountains of northwest Rockingham, 40 miles from here, was abandoned tonight after 150 men, including CCC members, foresters and residents scoured a 10-mile area in which the ship was supposed to have fallen.

The party spent the day combing Grove Hollow and Little Mountain in the region between Fulks Run and Bergton. Ranger Abner Casey, in charge of the searchers, is confident the plane is not in that vicinity.

If a plane fell the searchers believe it crashed on the West Virginia side of Shenandoah Mountain, 5 miles to the west. Russell Baker and others residing between Fulks Run and Bergton reported seeing the plane go into a spin and fall Sunday morning, but a nearby ridge may have obscured their range of vision and led to a miscalculation as to the distance. Baker declared the plane fell within 3 miles of his home, but this area was searched thoroughly yesterday and today.

A plane scheduled to arrive at New Market Sunday noon has not been accounted for. The area searched is on a direct line between the two points.

Plane Wreckage Burned Before Probers See It

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 13.—An airplane crash yesterday which injured five persons, none severely, was under investigation from two angles today.

Maj. Charles A. Masson, secretary of the State aviation commission, and M. P. Hanscom, investigator of the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce, sought to learn the cause of the crash and the reason for a group of workmen burning the wreckage before officials could view it.

Those in the plane were the pilot, Douglas J. Ruthven; Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Donohue, Miss Emma Barrett and Dr. Ernest Spencer, all of Baltimore.

Bridge May Eliminate Cumberland Crossing

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 13.—Plans for an overhead bridge from Park to Green streets, eliminating crossings of the Baltimore & Ohio and Western Maryland railroads and spanning Wills Creek, were considered by Nathan L. Smith, recently named chief engineer of the Maryland State Roads Commission, and Walter L. Hopkins, bridge engineer of the commission, during a visit here. With City Engineer Henry W. Schaidt, the engineers went over the ground.

The proposed bridge, expected to cost $1,000,000, including rights of way, was recommended in a recent list of crossing elimination projects submitted to the Federal Government under the allotment made for that work in the Federal work relief bill.

Utility Bondholders Appeal to U. S. Court

Baltimore, May 13 (AP).—With the State granted authority to reorganize the United Railways & Electric Co. by an order of the Public Service Commission today, bondholders for the company went before Judge William C. Coleman in Federal Court to begin final phases of the negotiations.

The company operates Baltimore's street car system. It has been in receivership since early in 1933, and was sold to bondholders at public auction last March 22. It is possible that the court may be asked to set aside the sale so that the company may be reorganized under section 77b (of the national bankruptcy act), it was said.

Capital to Salisbury Boat Service Planned

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, May 13.—Plans for the establishment of daily passenger boat service between Washington and Salisbury during the summer months have been laid before business men and hotel proprietors of Salisbury and Ocean City.

The plans call for putting into service two boats to be operated in overnight trips with immediate bus connection in Salisbury for the seashore.

$21,000,000 Tobacco Crop Is Forecast

Expected to Reach 1929 Value in Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 13.—Henry M. Taylor, Federal-State agricultural statistician, today estimated that the 1934 Virginia tobacco crop would approximate the 1929 value.

The figure for the crop this year was predicted at $21,000,000. The value of the 1932 crop was $4,744,000, but the total increased to $12,416,000 in 1933.

Driving Allegation Names Virginia Judge

Richmond, Va., May 13 (AP). — Judge Julien Gunn, of the Richmond and Henrico County Circuit Courts, was under bail of $100 today for his appearance in police court tomorrow to answer a careless and reckless driving charge.

A warrant issued after an accident here yesterday said that Julian Gunn "did unlawfully operate a certain automobile in a careless and reckless manner and injure one Julia Carter." A similar warrant was issued for Irving Carter, 24, driver of the car, in which Julian Carter was riding. Both the Carters are Negroes.

Harrisonburg Opens Farm Bureau Building

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 13.—Completing one of the largest structures in Harrisonburg, the Rockingham County Farm Bureau today opened its 2-story brick addition, costing $26,000.

The new building doubles the size of the structure, which contains 46,000 feet of floor space and can house 100 carloads of supplies.

The Rockingham Farm Bureau, with 1,400 members, is the largest cooperative unit of its kind in Virginia. It does business of over $500,000 annually.

Farmer Slain For His Money; Clews Lacking

Culpeper Man Murdered Two Days After He Sells Stock.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., May 13.—The finding of the body of David Hamilton Creel, well-known farmer of this county, with a bullet hole in the back of his head and the pockets of his clothes turned wrongside out, has caused intense excitement in upper Culpeper.

County officials are following several clews, although, so far, no arrests have been made.

Creel, a man of considerable property, lived alone on his farm near Amissville. He was shot as he sat at his supper table and the body was found slumped in his chair several hours later.

Two days before, he had sold several head of stock, receiving payment in cash and had gone to the nearest town to place the money in a bank, but, reaching there after banking hours, had returned home with it on his person.

Virginia Senate Dean Unhurt as Auto Upsets

Danville, Va., May 13.—State Senator W. A. Garrett, over 70 years of age, and dean of the Senate, was apparently none the worse today for bruises sustained yesterday near Martinsville when a car he was riding in turned over twice after a tire blowout. He was at his home at Ridgeway after being taken to a Martinsville hospital.

Mrs. B. F. Nolan, of Basset, was driving the car. She, her husband and son were cut and bruised and also received first aid in the hospital.

Peery, Visitors Board Visit Mount Vernon

Mount Vernon, Va., May 13 (AP).—Gov. Peery and the Virginia board of visitors to Mount Vernon made their annual pilgrimage to the George Washington home today and were received at tea by the board of regents of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association.

Following an annual custom, the Governor and the regents placed wreaths on the Washington tomb at a brief, informal ceremony. Peery was welcomed here by Mrs. Alice H. Richards, of New Castle, Me., the association's regent.

School Loan Approved By Fauquier Board

Warrenton, Va., May 13.—The board of supervisors of Fauquier County yesterday ordered a temporary loan of $17,000 for county school expenses. On the recommendation of J. P. F. Miller, they recommended that a road leading from the State route south of Opal, to County route No. 674, be taken into the secondary road system.

The board is made up of Thomas B. Glascock, chairman; L. L. Triplett, Isham Keith, R. L. Willis and L. W. Trenis.

Hagerstown Gaming Rife, Judge Says

Pronouncement in Order On Anti-Bookmaking Bill, Juror Told.

Sure Governor Would Not Take Advice on Measure Amiss.

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., May 13.—Judge Frank G. Wagaman today informed the convening grand jury that he believed it could, with propriety, advise Gov. Harry W. Nice by resolution of its attitude on the anti-bookmaking bill passed by the last Legislature and now awaiting the executive's signature.

The judge described conditions resulting from open and legal gambling here as unparalleled elsewhere in the country. He said the county had become polluted with gaming devices of every description and "officers charged with enforcement of the law have become indifferent."

"I am sure the Governor will not take such action on your part amiss," the court said with respect to a resolution by the jury on the situation.

The anti-bookmaking bill, he pointed out, is local in character. This is the second time Judge Wagaman has referred to gambling. At the opening of the February term of court he severely denounced gambling in all its forms and issued a warning to individuals who might try to block corrective legislation.

D. C. Youth Hurt In Maryland Crash

2 Others Injured in Auto Collision Near Elkridge.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkridge, Md., May 13.—David Diamond, 22, of 1325 Eighteenth street northwest, Washington, was one of three men injured in an auto accident near here early today.

Diamond, whom State Policeman F. J. Johnson said was operating an auto that collided with a large truck on the Baltimore boulevard, suffered fractures of both arms and a leg. He was removed to St. Agnes' Hospital, Baltimore.

Those riding with Diamond were Herman Weiner, 23, of Philadelphia, and Nathon Swartz, West Haven, Conn., who suffered fractured legs. They were taken to Franklin Square Hospital, Baltimore.

Officer Johnson placed a technical charge of reckless driving against Paul Campbell, 30, of Winchester, Va., whom he said was operating the truck. Campbell posted collateral.

Nice Holds 1935 Start On Bay Bridge Possible

Annapolis, Md., May 13 (AP).—If the Federal Government grants the loan for the Chesapeake Bay bridge without delay, Gov. Nice believes construction on the span would start before the year ends.

The Governor plans Friday to sign a legislative act creating an authority to borrow up to $10,000,000 from the Government for the project.

Too Many Degrees For Senator Glass

By the Associated Press.

Commencement time will be as busy for Senator Glass, of Virginia, as for any of this year's graduates.

The senior Virginia Senator and former Secretary of the Treasury will receive at least three honorary degress during graduation season. The degree of doctor of laws will be conferred on him at William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., June 10; at Wesleyan University, Middleton, Conn., June 16, and Tufts College, Boston, June 17.

Glass also is expected to receive degrees at two other institutions. He was unable to accept degrees at several institutions because of conflicting engagements.

Two Go on Trial This Morning In Well Killing

State to Ask Death Penalty for Negroes in Court at Fredericksburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 13.—The lives of Joe Jackson, 25, and John Shell, 37, will be asked by the State when the two Negroes go on trial in Spotsylvania County Circuit Court tomorrow morning for the "well murder" of Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Coleman at their home near Massaponax.

The State has summoned 10 witnesses. It also has confessions written by the Negroes in which each blames the other for the actual murder, but admits complicity.

Harry Sager, who has been named by Judge Frederick W. Coleman to represent the Negroes, may ask the confessions be ruled out. Commonwealth's Attorney E. R. Carner and his assistant, S. B. Coleman, say they have sufficient evidence, besides the confessions, to warrant conviction.

One of the State's main arguments will be based on the gold watch found on Shell when he was arrested in Haverstraw, N. Y. The timepiece later was identified as that of Mr. Coleman.

Although county officials asserted high feeling in the county would not be expressed in violence, special precaution is being taken to see that the Negroes get a fair trial. County officers will be supplemented by State police, who, after bringing the Negroes to Spotsylvania from Henrico County Jail, will remain in the courtroom while court is in session. It is expected the case will go to the jury late tomorrow.

Fredericksburg Board Summoned in Court

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 13.—The twelve members of the city council today were handed copies of an order issued by Judge Frederick W. Coleman summoning them to appear before him June 6 to show cause why a mandamus should not be issued compelling the council to provide an office for Commonwealth Attorney W. B. F. Cole.

The attorney has used his private law office in conducting his official business.

Drys at Waynesboro Fight New Distillery

Waynesboro, Va., May 13 (AP).—Women's Christian Temperance Union leaders today circulated petitions requesting the Waynesboro city council to reverse its decision licensing a liquor distillery here.

Action followed a statement by Dr. J. M. Henry, professor at Bridgewater College and a dry lecturer, at an antiliquor rally here. "You can keep this distillery from coming to your community if you work," said Dr. Henry.

AdmiralByrd Looks Ahead To New Trips

Explorer Off to Join Expedition Ships at Cape Cod Canal.

By the Associated Press.

Winchester, Va., May 13.—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, at the home of his family here today, said he was "not through with exploration."

He described his second trip to the South Pole as "four times as successful, from a scientific point of view, as the first one."

Questioned as to whether he would return again to the South Pole, the explorer, who has just completed the second expedition, said:

"I am not through with exploration. I am not ready to quit yet and hope to make other trips. At the present time, however, I have nothing definite in mind as to a possible future return to the Antarctic. On the second expedition, due to the fact that we knew so much more about the conditions we would have to face, we were able to accomplish just four times as much as on the first trip. Our plans were outlined in advance. We knew what we were doing and knew the places to go in search of scientific data."

To Join Expedition Ships.

The Admiral and Mrs. Byrd left late today, the admiral planning to join his expedition ships at Cape Cod Canal and proceed to Boston, Massachusetts has declared a holiday in honor of their return. The admiral will spend the summer in Maine with his family.

The admiral said he was working on a history of the "entire expedition," which he said he hoped to have finished by Christmas.

Shoveled Snow Away.

This, he said, was at the advance station where he spent the winter alone.

"The snow would have completely covered the shack there if I had not shoveled it away every day," he said. "I remembered in a previous Antarctic expedition a man was said to have suffocated under the snow, so I had to keep the snow clear all the time. The cold was very severe. One of the things troubling me now is that my lungs were frozen."

"I am feeling pretty well," he said, commenting upon his recovery from the illness that overtook him at the advance station. "I still can not do very much and I seem to tire quickly, but I expect to be in fighting trim very soon."

Rabbi Israel Renamed Head of Bar Mitzvah

Newport News, Va., May 13 (AP).—Rabbi Edward L. Israel, of Baltimore, was reelected president for the fifth time of the Seaboard Zionist Region, Bar Mitzvah, at the thirteenth annual convention here last night.

Isaac Pitts, also of Baltimore, was chosen to direct the campaign to raise the regional quota of $25,305 in the $500,000 Palestine Land Redemption Campaign. Four hundred delegates attended the session.

Jewel Robbery Fails.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., May 13.—An attempt to rob the jewelry store of G. W. Hurst, Main street, Warrenton, was made last night. The store was closed at the regular time on Saturday night. When Clifton Hurst, son of the owner, came to work this morning he found the plate-glass in the front door smashed in the corner nearest the lock. An attempt to remove both locks from the door had been made.

Good morning! It's time most men were wearing straw hats. However, there are some men whose bearing gives them the right to distinctiveness in their dress. These men we offer a lightweight hat, perforated. It has a swagger about it that will be particularly appreciated by Europeans who at present are living in Washington.

Meyers
MENS SHOP
1331 F STREET

A Pretentious Program of Feature and Short-Reel Subjects Planned by M-G-M

Notable Roster Enlists a Fine Line of Talent

By Nelson B. Bell.

Out of the recent sales convention of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer forces in Detroit has come announcement of one of the industry's most pretentious production schedules for the season of 1935-36. M-G-M during this period proposes to release 49 feature pictures and 177 short film subjects.

That is almost a feature a week and something in the neighborhood of an average 3½ short reels per week. It takes a well organized and high-power producing company to keep up a pace like that. M-G-M has proved its ability to do it in past seasons and there is no immediate reason to suspect that it can not carry on at the same pace.

It is the indefatigable Norman W. Pyle just back from the Detroit conclave, who apprises me that the release chart will be headed by six special productions—"China Seas," a triple-star vehicle for Wallace Beery, Clark Gable and Jean Harlow; Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities," to be done on the same ambitious scale as "David Copperfield," with Ronald Coleman in the leading role; "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh," a spectacular subject, based on the best-selling novel by Franz Werfel; "Broadway Melody of 1936," a mammoth musical, with a long list of stars; "The Great Ziegfeld," with William Powell in the title role, and "Wife vs. Secretary," intended as a joint vehicle for several of the company's most notable players.

Garbo Is Prominent.

In the group of 22 starring productions which form a substantial percentage of the new year's photoplay output are Greta Garbo's audible remake of Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina," in which she formerly appeared in the silent era; "Glitter," starring Joan Crawford; "After the Thin Man," co-starring William Powell and Myrna Loy, and a new feature comedy for the Marx Brothers.

Garbo will appear in one other starring vehicle besides "Anna Karenina." Clark Gable in two, Jean Harlow in two, Joan Crawford in three, Lionel Barrymore in three, Wallace Beery in two, Norma Shearer in at least one, Jeanette MacDonald in one, in addition to another co-starring picture with Nelson Eddy; Grace Moore in one, William Powell in one and Robert Montgomery in two.

Other stars, including Charles Laughton, Freddie Bartholomew, the precocious youngster who made such an astounding name for himself in the juvenile title role of "David Copperfield;" Jackie Cooper, Helen Hayes, Spencer Tracy and Clifton Webb, will appear in other releases of which the titles will be made known at a later date.

"Campaign" and "Marquee" Films.

On the new M-G-M production schedule will be a group of four "campaign pictures" and 14 "marquee pictures." These descriptions, one surmises, supplant the time-worn labels of "super pictures" and "program pictures." All these, it is said, will be peopled by outstanding casts, many of them dealing with topical and timely subjects.

"Oliver Twist," with an all-star cast, is another Dickens novel to be filmed by M.-G.-M. "Ah, Wilderness," which Clarence Brown will direct, is a photoplay version of Eugene O'Neill's play of that name. "The Bishop Misbehaves," on view at the National, beginning tonight, is a new season film based on the current John Golden stage production. "The Black Chamber," will be derived from Maj. Herbert Yardley's story of the secret service, with William Powell in the central role. Jules Verne's "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" will be produced, also "Mala," an adventure story with a South Sea background; "The Witch of Timbuctoo," "Here Comes the Band," with Ted Lewis; George Eliot's "Silas Marner," Sigmund Romberg's "Maytime" and "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Among the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer story properties from which additional new season pictures may be selected are a long list of standard and new works of fiction, historical romance, adventure, fantasy and fact, ranging from the plays of Molnar, through the writings of Kipling, Tarkington, Dickens, Damon Runyon, Anne Cameron, Philip Barry and Vina Delmar to originals by John Monk Saunders and others who have specialized in writing directly for the cinema.

Shorts by the Hundred.

Over and above all this, M.-G.-M. will make 36 two-reel and 37 one-reel subjects, together with 104 issues of Metrotone News.

To make all this possible, it is necessary for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to maintain one of the largest staffs of scenarists and dialogue writers to be found on the West Coast—93 writers are under contract, including such master practitioners of the theater as George S. Kaufman, Mark Connelly, Morrie Ryskind, Phillip Barry, Robert Benchley, W. P. Lipscomb and S. N. Behrman.

To translate the works of all these writing men into terms of action and to direct the destinies of a long and imposing list of stars, M.-G.-M. has a contract roster of 28 directors of the first rank.

The motion picture industry, it seems, has grown up into sort of a big business!

Speaking of Freddie Bartholomew, as was casually done back there in a sketchy resume of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer outlook for the new year, Helen Hoerle, author, publicist and theatrical avant courier of brilliant and diversified talents, has just completed a biography of the child star of "David Copperfield," which will be put out by the Saalfield Publishing Co. Helen's last book—and the fa-

Is a Versatile Young Actress

When not appearing importantly before the cameras and microphones, as she did recently with Richard Barthelmess in "Four Hours to Kill," for example, Gertrude Michael spends most of her leisure hours in her large, rambling, informal Toluca Lake residence and the gardens that surround it out in California's vaunted sunshine. She is pictured above at her piano, upon which she is an accomplished artiste, although the screen never as yet has had occasion to reveal that fact to the theater-going public.

miliarity is more or less justified by years of congenial friendship—was "The Girl and Her Future," for which she has recently written several new chapters for a textbook edition.

Roadsiders Are Set.

Issuance last Friday by the board of county commissioners of their license to operate a summer theater and approval of their building plans by the building inspector of Montgomery County, Md., has been construed as the signal for "full speed ahead" by the Roadside Theater, which will inaugurate its second season on June 17, with a production of Dion Boucicault's famous melodrama of "After Dark."

The new home of the Roadsiders is a huge red barn on the Rockville pike, adjacent to the Georgetown Prep School, 4 miles beyond the Bethesda traffic light. It is in plain view of the pike. A large field between the roadway and the barn is part of the "estate" and will be utilized for parking space.

Extension of a branch line to carry electric current for complete stage and house lighting to the barn already has been begun by the Potomac Electric Power Co. Today, carpenters will begin the actual work of construction, which embraces flooring the ground level of the barn, surfacing the loft with a top layer of flooring and building stairways both inside and outside the structure.

A More Propitious Spot.

The physical characteristics of the barn are strikingly different from those of the old shoe heel factory, occupied by the group last summer. Instead of being long and low, the barn is extremely broad and high. The loft will constitute the theater proper. The width of the building affords opportunity for a much more ample stage than last season's cramped proscenium made possible; the extreme height of the building will make it possible to "fly" scenery and thus facilitate the successful presentation of more impressive productions than were the order during the first summer of the Roadsiders' extraordinarily successful operation. The seating capacity will be 20 less than last year's 240 and no standees will be permitted.

The usual width of the barn results in an "auditorium" that will be only 11 rows deep—thus assuring perfect vision and audibility from every seat in the house. If you remember the similar proportions of the Music Box Theater in New York, you will know what we mean.

On the ground floor will be a large lobby and lounge, box office and refreshment booth. The remainder of the space, about one-third, altogether, will be given over to dressing rooms, green room and workshop.

And there you have it, just as the energetic and enthusiastic Miss Kitty Prichard gave it to me not half an hour ago!

It is Mr. Lewis E. Roberts, 1816 Monroe street northwest, who addresses this desk, under date of May 10, to say, in part: "I refer to your denunciation of the so-called 'lunatic' child labor law in the District of Columbia in yesterday's Post. I beg to differ with you on this question. If the law in question was repealed, every mother and father who had an offspring would want to see their 'genius' on the stage."

Mr. Roberts slightly confuses our contention. There never has been any inclination here to throw the stage open to a horde of juvenile tyros who could plead no possible justification for being on any boards under any circumstances whatsoever. But when a legitimate and worthy play demands the brief appearance of a properly safeguarded, tutored, attended and cared-for child actor—whose closest attendants, more often than not, are his or her parents—I do most vigorously insist that the District child labor law should be so modified as to make that juvenile appearance possible.

Under the present status of things, Washington, ostensibly, is the only metropolitan community in the United States in which youngsters with a penchant for miming are not being reduced to a state of physical, moral, spiritual and mental collapse, disintegration and destruction. This is a crass absurdity on the fact of it. And in the meantime, because of the operation of the law, the National Capital is being deprived of some of the best plays the modern theater has to offer.

While Mr. Roberts contributes feasible suggestions for the improved conduct of certain aspects of the native playhouse, it is the belief of this column that his insistence that a note of viciousness be injected into dramatic and motion picture criticism is not one of them.

In celebrating the accession of Mr. Harry Hunter, Washington branch exchange manager for Paramount Pictures Corporation, to the exalted position of Kentucky colonel, shoulder-to-shoulder with the other four or five thousand honorary gold-braiders occupying posts on the staff of Gov. Ruby Laffoon of Kentucky, a few days ago, we inadvertently—as a matter of fact, we didn't even know he had been similarly honored—omitted mention of the fect that Col. Leonard B. Schloss, managing director of Glen Echo Park and one of the most astute showmen in America, received his commission and epaulettes from the Governor a fortnight ago.

Now, every time Len presents himself on the scene of his most important official duties all of his associates salute respectfully and address him as "Colonel."

The same thing, you will recall, happened to Col. Orangelo Ratto, manager of Loew's Palace Theater, after he was put on the spot in the rooms of the Varsity Club in Harry P. Somerville's Willard Hotel several months ago on a miserably rainy morning.

Col. Schloss has gone the rest of the local boys what is usually referred to as "one better" by developing a completely deceptive and convincing "Yes, suh," with which he replies with a genuine julep accent to all allusions to his newly acquired distinction.

One day later than Mr. Roberts, hereinabove quoted, John Hook and Arthur Little, 1629 Nineteenth street, under date of May 11, impart greetings to this fallible outpost of the drama in terms that for reasons of a few words not customarily employed in the news columns of this circumspect family journal cannot be quoted, except in most fragmentary fashion.

One of the brief excerpts from their joint communication which can be reproduced with discretion runs this wise: "If you call Stephen Cochran 'Panjandrum Cochran' one more time, reason is going to totter on its throne. . . . Besides, we wonder if Mr. Cochran knows that with the persistency of Noel Coward you call him pompous every day."

Perhaps the Messrs. Hook and Little would be interested in this quotation from the new edition of Webster's International Dictionary, unabridged, in definition of "Panjandrum": (1) A word in the expression, 'the grand Panjandrum himself,' a burlesque title, in some nonsense lines made by Samuel Foote to test Macklin, who asserted that he could repeat anything after hearing or reading it once.

"(2) Hence: (a) A burlesque title for a powerful personage or a pretentious official. (b) Ceremonial fuss."

Will my pleasant correspondents, who say some nice things about the daily run of these vagrant remarks, kindly read the late Arnold Bennett's "Imperial Palace." Then will they hark back to the days when all Broadway referred to one of its favorite figures as Eddie "Waistcoat" Dunn and the late Rennold Wolf never referred to his pal, Impresario Zimmerman, of Philadelphia and New York, as anything but "Hercules."

Steve is still "Panjandrum" to me. And how do you mean, "Pompous?"

Dots and Dashes.

Our companionable and erudite young confrere, Mr. Edward de Selding Melcher, of the Star, is going to get his baptism of fire on Wednesday . . . Harried by complaints from irate readers that the box-office manners of the National Theater are not all they should be, Panjandrum Cochran (there it goes again!) has assigned Mr. Melcher to sell tickets for Wednesday's matinee performance of "The Bishop Misbehaves" from 11 a. m., until the window sale is over . . . He is expected to learn much of the idiosyncrasies of a public that always thinks itself in the right and only occasionally is . . . I was proferred the Saturday matinee . . . And declined, with no thanks whatever . . . I have been up against the theater game too long to be inveigled into any such monkey business as this . . . I am aware that an occasional faux pas is made by the boys back of the ticket wicket . . . The public makes quite as many . . . I know that, too . . . But they, the public, don't . . . Ask the man who has the infinitely simpler job of selling stamps at the postoffice . . . I've been up against that, also . . . And it is amazing how much pother can arise over a two-cent stamp . . . With a $1.10 theater ticket as the basis of it, the potentialities for murder, mayhem and slaughter become practically illimitable . . . You'll find out, Eddie.

The best acting he has ever done for the screen is contributed to "Les Miserables" by Frederic March in the role of the halfwit peasant, mistaken for Jean Valjean and on trial for he knows not what . . . March here shows sparks of genius . . . "A fun book for children to read to grown-ups" is the title of a new promotional publication on behalf of the Walt Disney creations . . . A copy has come to these hands and it is a honey . . . Grown-ups might even read it to children! . . . Among other valuable accession to the department's library are the new biographies of contract players appearing in United Artists pictures . . . In case you want the lowdown on some U. A. star, write, wire or phone . . .

Three and a half months ago, the Collette Sisters held a double wedding in New York . . . Mildred, 22, married Phillip Samuels, one of the Samuels Brothers appearing in the same bill on the stage at Loew's Fox this week, and Ruth married a Broadway tailor . . . The girls were born in Bayonne, N. J., home town of Molly O'Day, Jack Durant's wife, and Ben Bernie . . . Jack is co-star with his partner, Frank Mitchell, in Earl Carroll's "Vanities" . . . Helen Charleston admits long-distance calls from Ken Murray, but won't pin herself down to the matter of matrimony . . . At least not for publication . . . So the chances are she will marry him . . . Dave Rubinoff has signed for a part in the Twentieth Century film production of "Sing, Governor, Sing" . . . Will make his sequence on the West Coast . . . Paul Whiteman and Fred Allen will shoot theirs in the East . . . With production date scarcely two weeks away the Pierce Hall Players find themselves without a juvenile lead for "The Ghost Train" . . . If there is a juvenile who can act lurking anywhere in the vicinity, will he please contact the Pierce Hall group . . . and make it snappy? . . . Tonight would be a fine time to show up at Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets . . . The hour would be 7:30 . . . By the way, how would I do? . . . I'm only 87!

Ardent Contemporary Note.

A copy of the Hyattsville Independent comes to hand carrying an enthusiastic encomium of the management of the Arcade Theater in that thriving community, which, it seems, is enjoying its fourth anniversary as major factor in the cinematographic delectation of the nearby city. The article goes overboard for the enterprise and community spirit of the principal fellow in the goings on.

If you suspect any double entendre in that last crack, then you should know that we mean Sidney B., who put Hyattsville on the celluloid map.

So now you know.

Gayety

"DANGEROUS CURVES." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 26 scenes; with Joe DeRita, Harry Cornell, Fred Bishop, Floyd Hallicy, Tiny Fuller, Herbert Faye, Peggy Hill, Hilda Allison, Marie Gundle, Barbara Janice, Sunya Slane, and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Gus Fleig; dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

More dangerous than the curves in this offering of the Independent Burlesque Association is the team of Herbert Faye and Barbara Janice. Undulating and alluring as are the girls of this production, they have far to go to enter serious competition with the devastating display offered by this comic duo.

Whether they have with them Straightman Floyd Hallicy or Tenor-Straightman Harry Cornell (and he is one of the best), the Faye-Janice combination is a riot.

The 350-pound Tiny Fuller and the plump, but somewhat less hefty Joe DeRita furnish the other comedy bits.

In point of performance, no less than in the enthusiasm of his reception, the No. 2 attraction of the bill would be Fred Bishop, who stays over for a second week. He has several tenor solos that are not only among his best offerings but also near the top of anything heard from the Gayety stage this season.

Of the display artistes on the current bill, Marie Gundle might be singled out for especial mention, by reason of the fact that this is her Washington debut. To be sure, Miss Gundle, Peggy Hill and Sunya (Smiles) Slane are all greeted uproariously, and perform with utter abandon.

Hilda Johnson, the week's contribution to terpsichorean acrobatics, carries on the good work of previous productions, with a series of excellently executed numbers requiring skill, muscle control and precision. The Dancing Bryanettes have their customary well-ordered routines.

The Gossipel Truth

Hollywood, May 13.

GRETA GARBO completes "Anna Karenina" this week and intends to sail for Sweden in two weeks, without waiting for the preview of her flicker . . . Garbo has been very free of late, strolling about Metro in the open with Chester Hale. Practically every one at the studio has had a peep at her by now . . . Arthur Johnston, the tune writer, and Loretta Sayers have canceled their engagement. Johnston is now escorting Stefi Duna about when it is his turn . . . Myrna Loy was so frightened about going to New York that she got letters of introduction to several men about town from Eileen Percy so that she wouldn't be lonely . . . They have been so long in getting the flicker, "O'Shaughnessy's Boy" into production that Jackie Cooper outgrew the part and Mickey Rooney is now playing it . . . The Mickey Neilan-Rosine Emmerich romance is getting warmer.

• • • •

Louis B. Mayer gave a big party at his studio Friday night for Mayor Hague, of Jersey City, and Mayor Kelly, of Chicago. The highlights of the party were: Will Rogers saying: "I wonder what picture Mr. Mayer is going to charge the expense of his party to." . . . Jack Benny saying: "They told me when I arrived in Hollywood that I would have great trouble trying to see an executive. That I would be kept waiting and waiting. I didn't have any trouble. I went to the Club Trocadero and met the executives without any waiting." Everyone knows how fond Mayer is of dancing and the howl of the evening was when Eleanor Powell got up to do her routine, and during it said: "Here's a new step Mr. Mayer taught me."

• • • •

IRENE CASTLE may be lured back to dancing, for Metro has made her a tempting offer to appear with Clifton Webb in the flicker, "Elegant" . . . Webb has come to town heavily advertised as "Broadway's best dressed man," and I always believed he was a dancer . . . Frank Capra's oldest boy is named Frank and the new baby has been named John—just so the Capras will have their own "Frankie and Johnny" . . . George S. Kaufman's deal at Metro was for eight weeks at $5,000 a week and the studio was to pay his railroad fare and his income tax on that earned sum . . . Fred MacMurray's off the screen romance is Lillian La Mott, a local society lass . . . Upton Sinclair and his scenarios are still being peddled to the picture studios . . . Warners intend to follow up "G Men" with a flicker called "Federal Agent," dealing with a New York gangster who is finally captured because of his income tax return . . . Roger Pryor and Ann Sothern are romancing again and will play the romantic leads in "The Girl Friend."

• • • •

Sigvard Bernadotte, who is the son of the Crown Prince of Sweden, will be the assistant director on the new "Tarzan" flicker, if you wish to keep informed on what royalty is doing . . . Fox spent over a year giving June Lange dramatic lessons; they changed her teeth, and other incidentals trying to groom her for stardom. After "Music In the Air" she was given her release. She has just been signed to play the leading female role in the next Laurel and Hardy feature . . . Jerome Kern's option expires next month and he will be released by Metro—because he can't write a popular hit tune!!! His songs will live longer than their pictures.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, May 13.

THE Cleveland Indians are pulling together for the common good like, er—like, er—I was going to say like Huey Long and President Roosevelt, but that wouldn't be exactly true . . . because Manager Walter Johnson and Outfielder Earl Averill, of the Indians, haven't spoken to each other for three weeks . . . or even at each other . . . On the Cleveland club all is as serene as boiling oil . . . Averill is the leader of the anti-Johnson faction and he's such a big shot Johnson doesn't dare trade him . . . Cleveland fans are expecting the pennant, no less, and the local sports scriveners keep reminding 'em that Johnson's team ought to win it . . . out here where the second guess is an art, the finger is on Johnson . . . his team will win the 1935 pennant or else.

POVICH.

With supposedly the greatest pitching staff in the league, Johnson now finds himself hard-pressed for pitchers . . . Willis Hudlin is out of action with a bruised side; Monte Pearson is ill with the flu, and Ralph Winegarner, the most promising of his younger pitchers, is taken down with tuleremia, the rabbit's disease . . . Winegarner contracted the malady before the season started when he was hunting, skinning and eating rabbits on his Arkansas farm . . . little knots that appeared in the muscles of his pitching arm were the first symptoms . . . Dumb base running has been a millstone about the necks of the Indians this season, Johnson admits, with Averill and Vosmik as the chief offenders . . . The Tribe's rookie second-base combination of Bozie Berger and Roy Hughes leads the league in double plays.

Four or five Nats are holding their breaths until the player deadline is reached next Wednesday night . . . the Nats are within the 23-player limit but Harris is intent on adding another pitcher, which means that one of the present roster will be cut adrift . . . Harris bussed Rogers Hornsby in St. Louis, Mickey Cochrane in Detroit and Johnson here today but could make no trade for a pitcher . . . frantic long-distance telephone appeals to Clark Griffith in Washington, however, have had their effect, and Griff will present Harris with another pitcher within a week.

THE likeliest possibilities are that Griffith will buy either Buck Newsome or Knott from the Browns . . . Hornsby is in a frenzy to add an outfielder and Harris is willing to part with Fred Schulte . . . Jake Powell is in center field to stay . . . and Harris was saying today that Freddie Sington is a handy man to have around . . . he thinks Sington is a threat at the plate and likes the way in which the big football star makes no attempt to offer at bad balls . . . he is the only power hitter on the club . . . against left-handed pitching Sington is getting the call over Fred Schulte while Stone warms the bench.

Some of the older members of the Nats will never understand why Joe Cronin last year broke up the ball team that won the pennant for him in 1933 . . . against all baseball precedent, he traded Goose Goslin to Detroit and replaced Ossie Bluege with Cecil Travis, despite the fact that neither veteran manifested any signs he was slipping . . . Goslin is nursing a hate for Cronin comparable to the Bucky Harris-Eddie Collins feud . . . the Goose says Cronin is entitled to full credit for the discovery that he couldn't hit left-handed pitching, despite the fact that he hits left-handers better than he hits right-handers . . . it sounded like a dirty crack.

Bucky Harris has assigned Jake Powell to the keeping of Nick Altrock, his new roommate . . . Harris broke up the Powell-Lary combination when both went into a hitting slump at the start of the season . . . Lary's weak hitting is still a cause of concern for Harris, but the fellow's fielding is a treat to watch . . . at that, Kress will break into the infield if the Nats need more hitting power . . . had anything happened to Jack Redmond, the third catcher Harris put in the game against Detroit the other day, Kress would have been the man to go behind the bat . . . he volunteered . . . Redmond has displaced Sammy Holbrook as the Nats' No. 2 catcher.

DURING the two years he played under Ty Cobb at Detroit, Earl Whitehill never had any words with the fiery Cobb . . . for the simple reason that they never spoke to each other . . . Whitehill respected Cobb for his ball-playing ability and let it go at that . . . back in the gay twenties when Cobb was battling Harry Heilmann for the league batting leadership on the final day of the season, Heilmann was handicapped by Cobb's orders to hit on the hit-and-run sign, which meant that Heilmann must offer at bad balls . . . Heilmann made four hits that day to win the batting crown from his boss . . . Steve O'Neil has displaced Patsy Gharrity as the third base coach of the Indians . . . O'Neil may be working his way up to manager of the club if Johnson doesn't give the city a pennant this season.

Joe Kuhel, the Nats' incurable card trickster, today dealt out a bridge hand that included the aces, kings and queens of three suits and the king, jack and nine of spades, bid seven spades against it, and made it . . . Kuhel and Joe Vosmik are Cleveland's most illustrious graduates of the sandlots since George Uhle won big league fame . . . in an interview at Chicago, Joe Cronin passed up Jimmy Foxx and Lou Gehrig to call Bill Dickey the most dangerous batter in the American League . . . Bucky Harris laughed and said he'd take Foxx . . . so will every other player in the league, except the pitchers.

Giants to Win National Flag By 10 Games, Is Prediction

By Jimmy Powers,

NEW YORK, May 13.—New York Giants will win the pennant by 10 full games . . . That's our prediction and we're not stuck with it . . . Barney Ross will beat Tony Canzoneri, who will get $50,000 to soothe the cuffing . . . Fidgety Phil Collins won't settle the Cardinal pitching problem . . . Remember how some experts roasted the choice of Cleveland for the next All-Star game? . . . Billy Evans reports 49,000 tickets have been sold and the gross is sure to beat $100,000 . . . Lefyt O'Doul has his San Francisco Seals well up in first division despite a slow start . . . Chapman and Rosenberg, on option to the Dodgers, are banging the ball for .349 and .346 in the California sun . . . Business Manager Bob Quinn of the Brooklyns paid out nearly $105,000 in minor league driblets for many earnest but ineffective young men of the Bob Logan and Frank Lamanske type . . . That much money would have bought Dizzy Dean.

Exterminator was the only gelding to win the Preakness . . . Omaha is a colt . . . Joe Di Maggio, termed another Babe Ruth, is hitting .342 in the Coast loop . . . Smead Jolley, .418 . . . So home sick and timid were Rip Radcliff and Vernon Washington, White

Reds Defeat Braves, 3-1, Ending Losing Streak

Boston, May 13 (AP).—Silas Johnson pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-to-1 victory over the Boston Braves today in the opening game of their series. The Reds' win broke a four-game losing streak. It was the fourth straight defeat for the Braves.

Bottomley advanced to third on Urbanski's poor relay to the plate and scored on Lombardi's single.

Detroit Ace Gives Only Four Hits; Deals Foe Fourth Defeat.

Walker Slams Homer; Double Play Helps Tiger Hurler.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, May 13.—Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, five times conqueror of the Yankees last year, resumed his mastery over the New Yorkers today as he shut them out with four singles to give the Detroit Tigers a 3-to-0 victory in the teams' first clash of the season.

Rowe emerged victorious in his first mound duel with Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, southpaw ace of the Yankees. Gomez was touched for 2 runs and six of the Tigers' hits before he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the seventh. Pat Malone finished the game.

Rowe, who has had a difficult time getting started this spring after winning 24 games for the American League champions last year, was in fine form as he handed the Yankees their third shut-out and chalked up his second triumph as against three defeats.

One Base on Balls.

He gave only one base on balls, which went to Earl Combs in the first inning, and did not allow a hit until one man was out in the fourth. Then Tony Lazzeri singled. Red Rolfe beat out a bunt with one out in the sixth and advanced as far as any Yankee got when he went to third on Lou Gehrig's single. Lazzeri followed by hitting into a double play, however, and the only serious threat to Rowe's shut-out was wiped away.

Gomez suffered his fourth defeat of the year and his third in succession. The Tigers got to the lanky southpaw for their first run in the opening inning on White's base on balls, Gerald Walker's looping single to right center and Charley Gehringer's long fly.

Walker Hits Homer.

Gomez then settled down and blanked the Tigers until the sixth when Walker parked the ball over the left field fence for a home run. The last run came off Malone in the eighth when he was tagged for a double by Gehringer and a single by Hank Greenberg.

Cubs Top Dodgers In Slab Duel, 3 to 2

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 13.—The Chicago Cubs coupled a fine defense with timely hitting today to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 3 to 2, behind the seven-hit pitching of Bill Lee.

Leading, 2 to 1, in the sixth, the Dodgers filled the bases with none out. They failed to score, however, as two men were thrown out at the plate and Freddy Lindstrom made a brilliant jumping catch of Boyle's line drive for the third out.

Pirates Rout Phils, 10-1, As Blanton Wins 5th

Philadelphia, May 13 (AP).—Cy Blanton, young right-handed star of the Pittsburgh Pirates, allowed the Phillies only four hits today and won his fifth game of the season, 10 to 1.

Suhr's homer with Traynor on base sent the Pirates into a 2-to-1 lead in the sixth. In the next inning Paul Waner hit a home run and the Pirates rolled up four more to clinch the victory.

Nationals Face Long Run of Twin Bills

Cleveland, Pitching Staff Crippled, Hastens to Cancel Game.

By Shirley Povich,

A Staff Correspondent.

CLEVELAND, May 13.—If this is dull reading, don't blame me.

Two rainy days in Cleveland would take the edge off a cutlass. What it has done to your dull-witted correspondent you have probably already discerned.

Fearful that they would be compelled to meet the Nats with a crippled pitching staff that lacks rest, the Cleveland officials hurriedly postponed today's scheduled game shortly after noon despite the fact that the sun was already making brave efforts ot pierce the clouds.

Thus, the double-headers are piling up for the Nats, who have already incurred six since the season started, five of 'em on the road. But their plight is as nothing compared to that of the Indians, who now number ten postponements on their calendar.

Today's rain, however, guaranteed that the Nats will return home with no worse than a .500 percentage in the league standings, whatever significance that may have. With 11 victories and 9 defeats to their credit, the Nats face only two more games in the West before turning homeward.

Their road trip has not been a sensational success, neither has it been a disappointment. They have nine victories and six defeats to show since leaving Washington for the swing through every city in the league, and at this writing are only three games behind the lead.

Powell Makes Good.

The Nats tour through the league, however, has established one gratifying fact for Manager Bucky Harris. It concerns Jake Powell,

Simmons' Charm Keeps Sox Winning

By the United Press.

Chicago, May 13.—The Chicago White Sox have won 11 out of their 13 games played at Comiskey Park. Al Simmons, Sox center fielder, thinks he has the good luck charm which kept the Pale Hose winning. It is a tiny horseshoe which he carried in his vest pocket. The only two games the Sox lost were when Simmons changed his suit and forgot to take the horseshoe out of his pocket.

After losing two games to the Red Sox, Simmons visited his tailor to get his lucky piece.

"Find that horseshoe," said Simmons, "if you don't want something to happen to you.

Ruth, Hitting Only 171, Ready to Quit, Report

By George Kirksey.

By the United Press.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Babe Ruth is on the verge of quitting baseball, according to word drifting back to Chicago from Boston.

After Lon Warneke, Cubs' ace, struck him out twice in Sunday's game against the Braves, Ruth came back to the Boston dugout and said in a voice loud enough to be heard in the stands:

"I've played my last inning of baseball. I'm through."

Ruth didn't make a hit in the three games against the Cubs and Tex Carleton, Larry French and Lon Warneke all were pitching to him. The Babe has made only six hits this season and has a season batting average of only .171.

Rival pitchers think Ruth's batting eye is gone forever. They're fooling him with low pitches he can't seem to see. Ruth also is having trouble in the outfield. He can't go back for a long fly ball, or come in for the short ones. At least three of the Cubs' hits in the Braves' series would have been caught by an ordinary outfielder, many think.

The Braves' officials are said to be pleading with Ruth to make one

Mackenzie Shoots 157 For Pittsburgh Berth

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 13.—Roland Mackenzie, Congressional Club pro, posted a card of 77—80—157 today after a 36-hole grind over the rain-swept Oakmont Country Club course to qualify for the National Open championship scheduled here next month.

Wood Makes Grade

By the Associated Press.

Short Hills, N. J., May 13.—Craig Wood, the blond bomber of Hollywood, N. J., who was disqualified after the second round of the 1934 championship, fired a pair of subpar 71s today to win the honors in the Metropolitan District's 36-hole qualifying round for the National Open golf championship, to be played at Oakmont, Pa., starting June 6.

Wood's aggregate of 142, which might have been several strokes lower had not a few putts stopped stiff at the edges of the cups, paced nine other professionals and three amateurs who gained qualifying berths out of a field of 122 over the Baltusrol Club's double layout, where the 1936 National Open will be played. The highest qualifying score was 152.

Tall Willie MacFarlane, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., winner of the open in 1925, was runner-up with rounds of 71 and 74 for a total of 145, while Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., and Tom Kerrigan, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., were three shots behind with scores of 72—76 and 74—74, respectively.

Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J., and Phil Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y., gained the qualifying fold with totals of 149. Nelson carded 76—73 and Turnesa 74—75. A 10-foot putt for an eagle three on the thirty-sixth green enabled Johnny Farrell, the home professional and winner of the national open title in 1928, to make the grade with 78—72 for 150.

Four players were tied with 151s. They were a pair of amateurs, Rudy Knepper, of New York, 73—78, and Sidney Noyes, jr., of Ardsley, N. Y., 75—76 and Jack Forrester, Hacken-

Cardinals Beat Hubbell, 3-2, In Tenth

Durocher's Homer Margin; J. Moore Hits Two; Walker Victor.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Joe Moore hit two home runs to aid Carl Hubbell in the Giants first clash of the season with the Cardinals today, but Leo Durocher, who doesn't usually do such things, smote one for the invaders in the tenth and that was the ball game, 3 to 2.

It was Lefty Bill Walker's third victory for the Cards in four games this season. The only man who gave him any trouble at all was Moore, the slender left fielder, who opened the Giants' attack with a belt into the right field stands in the first inning, then popped another in there in his second try, both times with none on, for his sixth and seventh homers of the season.

The two times Walker got him on pops, Moore hit a couple of line drives into the same stands foul by a couple of feet. Joe walked in the tenth, completing an exasperating day for the pitcher, who nearly argued himself right out of the ball game over the final pitch with the count three and two.

Allows Six Blows.

With Moore out of the way, Walker had an easy time of it, allowing but six hits, only three men reaching first in the last five innings, two on walks, one hit by a pitched ball. The defeat, before a crowd of 7,103, was the first in extra innings for the Giants this season, having won two and tied three in six overtime matches.

Hubbell had retired 11 men in order when Durocher faced him with two out in the tenth and slapped the second ball pitched against the face of the upper stands in left field. It was Hubbell's second defeat against four victories.

Little's Heel Hurt; Bad Sign for Foes

By the Associated Press.

London, May 13.—Hobbling on a stone-bruised heel, Lawson Little, American and British amateur golf champion, put on his carpet slippers again today—and British rooters, remembering a similar prelude to last year's amateur championship, saw their hopes of bagging the title bunkered again.

They recalled how the hard-hitting California invader limped around on a bad heel—the same one bothering him now, incidentally—just before he swept the field at Prestwick last summer.

Little's heel prevented him from playing yesterday in the Prince of Wales tournament at Sandwich, but he's leaving tonight, accompanied by Dan Topping, owner of the Brooklyn professional football Dodgers, for St. Annes-on-the-Sea, near Liverpool to tune up for the defense of his British crown there beginning May 20.

SUBURBAN COUNTRY CLUB, Baltimore, May 13. — Three Washington golfers—Al Houghton, of Kenwood; Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam, and Leo Walper, of Bethesda—came down the stretch here today with subpar shooting to win qualifying places in the National Open sectional trials.

While Ralph Beach, former District pro, now of the host club, showed the boys how to burn up the course with his brilliant 36-hole total of 137, Houghton, Spencer and Walper rang up scores of 142 each to earn the right to compete in the National Open proper at Oakmont, June 6, 7, 8.

Here's the way the four Middle Atlantic qualifiers scored for the two rounds: Beach, 68-69—137; Houghton, 72-70—142; Walper, 72-70—142; Spencer, 71-71—142.

In Only Two Traps.

Beach clipped three shots off par for the 36 holes being off the fairway only twice and going in but two traps. He still was two strokes shy of tying the all-time competitive record set by Houghton in the 1933 National P. G. A. qualifying trials.

In qualifying, Houghton—and no man ever worked harder to get in—shook off a jinx that trailed him in the open trials at Manor two seasons ago and caught up with him again at Lakeside last season. But for an epidemic of 3-putt greens on the first nine of the morning and on the same nine of his afternoon round, Houghton would have beaten par for the day.

Twice today he had to fight back after ragged starts. He went out in 39 in the morning and blazed over the back nine in 33 for his 72, ripping off birdies on the thirteenth and seventeenth. In the nightcap round Houghton was 3 over par for the first four holes, went out in 37, and picked four birdies for a 33 on the incoming side. He knocked in a 15-footer on the eleventh, a 25-footer on the thirteenth, an 8-footer on the fourteenth, and earned his qualifying berth on the wings of a beautiful iron second and a 6-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the home hole. A trapped second on the twelfth and a bad shot to the short sixteenth caused Houghton to go over par on both holes.

Shoots Nine in 32.

The tall, black-haired Spencer also did himself proud with a great comeback on the last nine, which he covered in 32—the lowest of the day. The Beaver Dam pro had 35, 36—71 in his morning round, and things weren't a bit rosy for him after his first nine of the afternoon. At this point Spencer had a 39, four over. He had taken three fives and a six—enough to stagger any star.

Starting back 4, 4, 4, 4, even par, Spencer collected a birdie 4 on the

Ferrell's Homer Beats Browns, 2-1

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 13.—The St. Louis Browns slipped into a tie with Philadelphia for cellar place honors in the American League by dropping a 2-to-1 decision today to the Boston Red Sox.

The Red Sox evened the series behind the five-hit hurling of Wesley Ferrell, who held a clear edge in a pitching duel with Fay Thomas and won his own game with a long home run in the seventh inning.

Tinkling Brook, 11 to 5 Shot, Triumphs in Jamaica Feature

Headley Filly Wins by 1½ Lengths

Coucci Rides a 'Double'; Miss Bam Victorious in Opener.

By the Associated Press.

JAMAICA RACE TRACK, May 13.—In one of the most open betting races of the season, Hal Price Headley's Tinkling Brook drove to victory in the Coquette, a 5-furlong dash for 2-year-old fillies that held the honored spot on today's card. Curtis King's Glory Greenock, one of the outsiders, surprised by being an easy second, a length and a half back and five lengths better than the Middleburg Stable's Golden Lyre.

The winner colsed at 11-to-5. Golden Lyre was a 2-to-1 choice, while Mrs. Payne Whitney's recent winner in the slop, Apple Betty, disappointed in finishing fourth at 12-to-5. The time was 0:59 4-5.

Golden Lyre, a very fast miss that entered this contest, was third.

Miss Bam Victor.

Miss Bam, a first time starter from the stable of Mrs. William Garth, made good at the first asking in the 5-furlong test for maiden juveniles that inaugurated today's program. The bay daughter of Blazes, with George Rose in the saddle, broke well in a bad start and, taking the track in a few strides, outran the big field all the way.

The Ascot Stable's 4-year-old Sir Ten came up a good thing in the second race. Under a strong finish by Silvio Coucci, the colt got up to beat the fagged out John Werring by a half-length. Seawick came from far back to be third, a length farther back.

Coucci Rides "Double."

Silvio Coucci won his second straight race at the expense of Apprentice E. Yager in the third. The margin, as in the previous race, was slight, this one being so close between Rhodesia and the 20-to-1 shot Niggertoe that only the judges could decide on the former. Our Trouble was third, eight lengths away.

Another favorite went down to defeat in the fifth race when Diseur, at 7 to 5 with Coucci up, finished far in the ruck. Playfole, held at 9 to 2, was nicely rated off the pace and responded readily when called upon, winning by a half-length from the weakly handled Carsono. Apprentice Frank McManus made it two in a row astride the 11-to-20 choice Balios, in the last contest. Big Show was second and Astra third.

SIR TEN, under a powerful ride, closed gamely in the final quarter-mile, caught JOHN WERRING at sixteenth pole, and won going away. JOHN WERRING opened up a wide gap turning into stretch, but stopped badly in last 50 yards. SEAWICK, away slowly, came with a rush at end. ELDEE ran well for five furlongs. TEMPESTUOUS was never a factor.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. (Substitute, first division). Purse, $900; claiming price, $1,300. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 3:34½. Winner, Mrs. E. A. Burke's ch. h. (7), by Apprehension—Rose Hill. Trained by E. A. Burke. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47.

RHODESIA was hustled along from the start, closed gamely in the final furlong, and was up to win in final nod. NIGGERTOE was rushed into lead, set fast pace, tired in last sixteenth, but came again at end. OUR TROUBLE, well up all the way, was next best. GUIDING LIGHT broke slow and lacked speed. ROBINSON CRUSOE had no mishap.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. The Coquette. Purse, $900. For 2-year-old fillies. Start fair. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 4:00. Winner, Hal Price Headley's b. f. (2), by Pharamond II—Gurgling Water. Trained by D. Headley. Value to winner, $650; second, $175; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:59 4-5.

†Wheatley Stable entry.

TINKLING BROOK, away fast, was sent to the front early, raced GOLDEN LYRE into defeat, and gamely stalled off the determined bid of GLORY GREENOCK. The latter came with a rush in stretch and was a fast-going second. GOLDEN LYRE tired chasing the pace. APPLE BETTY was unable to keep up and ran a poor race. MAG MELL closed a big gap.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. (Substitute, second division). Purse, $900; claiming price, $1,300. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:19. Off at 4:22½. Winner, B. B. Stable's b. or br. m. (6), by My Play—Princess Colleen. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:48.

PLAYFOLE slipped through on inside entering stretch, drew away, but had to be driven out to win. CARSONO closed very fast under a very hard ride. BROADCASTER displayed keen speed for seven furlongs, then tired. PENNATE ran a good race. DISEUR quit badly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming prices, $2,500 to $2,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place, easily. Went to post at 4:42. Off at 4:46. Winner, Henry Lingebach's b. h. (5), by Chicle—Rowes Bud. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $60; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47 2-5.

Mrs. Balding Wins Cup at Foxcroft

Special Dispatch to The Post.

MIDDLEBURG, Va., May 13.—Mrs. J. Barney Balding, of New York, a graduate of the class of 1929, today captured the Davis Challenge Cup, awarded to the best riding alumnae of Foxcroft School at the school's annual horse show held here today. Miss Teresa Shook, of Middleburg, won second place, and Miss Helen Bedford, of Green Farms, Conn., third.

Excellent horsemanship and splendid performances marked the exhibition. A large crowd of sport followers attended, many of them coming from the large Eastern cities.

The Greble Cup, presented by Mrs. T. B. Davis for the greatest improvement shown in riding during the year, was won by Miss Carol Metcalf, of Providence, R. I. Others in the ribbons were Miss Mina Jones, of Louisville, Ky., and Miss Patricia Lennen, of New York.

Miss Hanes Wins Two.

The cup presented by Miss Eleanor MacKubin for the best horsemanship during the year was captured by Miss June Hanes, of Rye, N. Y. Miss Hanes also won the cup in the class for older girls. Miss Nancy Whitney, also of New York, was the winner of the cup given by Miss Mary Blagden for good hands shown in 1934-1935.

It took a flip of a coin to settle the exciting touch-and-out class after Miss Mary Howard Bruce, of Baltimore, and Miss Gloria Armstrong, of New York, had taken their mounts over the jumps five times. Miss Bruce won by the coin and Miss Armstrong was given second place.

Hunter hacks, under 16 hands—First, Suite, Adelaide Fairfield-Taylor, Washington; second, Miss Repulse, Ariel Bryce, Santa Barbara, Calif.; third, Gold Rush, Sally McAdoo, of Baltimore; fourth, Abbots Light, Nancy Iselin, Middleburg.

Hunter hacks, 16 hands and over—First, Glen Quality, Julia Scribner, New Jersey; second, Patricia Lennen entry, New York; third, Rokeby, Nancy Whitney, New York.

Beginners jumping, riding only to count—First, Betsy Chalifoux, of Boston, on Gray Mist; second, Agnes Mason, of New Jersey, on Rooster; third, Nancy Abbott, of New York, on Quality.

Mrs. Meckley, Mrs. Walper Tie With 92's in Post Qualifying

Betty Keeler Is Low Net Winner

A PAIR of Washington's finest women golfers, Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, and Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, tied for the medal at 92 in the qualifying round of the third annual Washington Post handicap match play tournament played over the water-logged Congressional course yesterday.

Miss Betty Keeler, public links star, took advantage of an 18 handicap to annex the low net honors with 102—18—84. Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, of the host club, captured runner-up honors in both classes by shooting a 93 with 7 handicap for a net 86.

High scores were in vogue with the 60 contestants, threatening weather reducing the field from the original 80 entries. Miss Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, winner of the tourney two years ago, turned in the lowest 9-hole score of the day, coming back in 42 after a disastrous 53 on the first nine left her a doubtful qualifier.

Sinks 4-Foot Putt.

Mrs. Meckley, one of the late finishers, rammed in a 4-foot putt on the home hole to nose out Mrs. Dowdall for the temporary medal honors. Mrs. Walper, playing two holes behind Mrs. Meckley, had par 90 in for a 90, but three-putted the last two greens, after missing an approach on the seventeenth and could get no better than a tie for the medal. Mrs. Meckley was off the first three holes, but she settled down to a bad start, being 6 over par on the first three holes, but she settled down on the back nine to finish in 43. Mrs. Meckley and Mrs. Walper will play off for the medal Friday morning, provided neither is in the finals.

The long, well-bunkered Congressional course found the scores reaching the highest point in recent history of women's tournaments, only seven in the field breaking 100. Mrs. Jack Scott, Mrs. Louise Claytor, Mrs. L. G. Pray and Miss Virginia Irwin completed the list. The remainder of the field, with the exception of Mrs. Don Scott, who shot 103—10—93, and withdrew, did not turn in cards.

Match Play Today.

Match play starts today. Mrs. S. S. Stern will meet Mrs. R. C. Mitchell in the first match that inaugurates four days of match play. Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, defending champion and automatic qualifier, meets Mrs. Will Masten. The co-medalists both face severe tests, Mrs. Walper meeting Mrs. J. F. Gross, and Mrs. Meckley opposing Mrs. L. G. Pray. Seven-eighths of the difference of the handicaps will govern the matches and should the matches be even at the eighteenth, nine additional holes will be necessary.

Comparing their cards on the clubhouse lawn of the Congressional Club are the three women who led the field at the end of the first day's play in the annual Post tournament. In the usual order are Mrs. Leo Walper, Miss Betty Keeler, who had low net with an 84, and Mrs. Betty Meckley. Mrs. Walper and Mrs. Meckley tied for low gross with cards of 92.

Byng, Former Central Star, Is Named End Coach at Navy

Grid Ace of 1925 Will Be Transferred From West Coast.

JUST ten years after his slashing play at Central High in 1925, made him an unanimous All-High choice, J. Weston (West) Byng, who later starred on the gridiron for Navy, will join the football coaching staff of the Navay Academy, it was learned yesterday.

Lieut. Comdr. J. H. Brown, jr., graduate manager at the Academy, verified reports that the hard-bitten cotton-head had been selected by Head Coach Tom Hamilton as end coach. The graduate manager said approval of Byng's transfer to Annapolis from San Pedro, Calif., where he is now stationed, is cirtually assured. He will assume his coaching duties in the late summer.

Byng is a member of the West Coast Navy coaching staff, and served under Hamilton when the latter was head coach on the coast. He will replace Coach Oscar Hagbyrd, who has entered the submarine service.

Though never weighing more than 160 pounds either in his high school or college career, Byng offset his lack of a 6-foot framework with a characteristic aggressiveness, hard-tackling, plenty of speed and able pass-nabbing. In 1924 he made the All-High team, but it was the next year that he enjoyed his best season at Central.

That was the year Central, under Coach Mike Kelley, won the inter-high title, unbeaten ,untied and unscored upon. Dr. Tiny Loftus played the other wing on a team which included such stars as Morty Wilner, Augie Roberts, Frank Blackistone, Charlie Van Meta, and Jim Hence. The team generally was considered the finest in Central history.

Byng was also an All-High first baseman. After being graduated from Central he attended Gettysburg Prep and Devitt Prep. He became an All-Prep end at the latter before going to the academy, where he played on the freshman eleven and three years on the varsity.

V. M. I. Frosh Nose Out Young Cavaliers, 3-2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lexington, Va., May 13.—The V. M. I. freshmen scored their second victory over the Virginia freshmen here this afternoon, breaking a tie in the ninth inning with none out to win, 3 to 2.

Bill Roberson, Cadet pitcher, singled to open the inning, advanced on Buddy Deaver's third hit of the game, and scored on a wild throw from center field. Roberson bested Todd in a pitchers' duel in which both hurlers kept the hits scattered, with Roberson fanning 13 and Todd striking out 10.

New Solitaire Game Is Invented—Tennis

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., May 13.—Solitaire tennis has been invented by George Kendall, Harvard graduate.

Auditorium Periled by Fans, Turner Books Clean Matmen

THURSDAY night will be house-cleaning night at the Auditorium, as clean working and high-ranking principals supplant the rough-house wrestling performers featured here of recent weeks.

Rough Rudy Dusek and Gurgling George Zaharias, who worked in the regular show last week, set a new high for hectic action—a high so high that the enraged citizenry almost tore up the Auditorium.

"Here, here," said Promoter Joe Turner, upon witnessing the havoc created by the brawl. "A few more of these and I'll be having an Auditorium to pay for. What to do, what to do?"

The explanation came when Joe remembered that Ed Meske, a gentleman of high principles on the mat, had created something of a sensation in his bout with Eli Fischer on the Dusek-Zaharias card.

"Ah, ha!" ejaculated Prof. Turner, always one to run down an idea. "If the fans liked that bout, I'll give 'em a whole card of clean rasslin'."

And thus we have this week's card, which will be headed by the scientific and popular Ed Meske, who will meet none other than Co-champion Ed (Don) George. George will be making his last apperance locally before wrestling Jim Londos for undisputed claim to the heavyweight championship in an outdoor bout to be held either in Boston, New York or Chicago.

In a promising semifinal, Paul Boesch, a very likable younster, will tangle with Little Beaver, who sometimes is rough and sometimes elects to wrestle cleanly. Al Bisignano, the colorful Italian, will return against John Katan in one 30-minute bout. In another, Irish Jack Donovan will duel Walter Underhill.

Chevy Chase's Golf Opens Today

WITH post entries expected to boost the field to the 200 mark, the hottest fight in the history of the Chevy Chase Invitation tourney is forecast as the most prominent golfers of the District and vicinity tee off today in quest of the crown vacated by Gene Vinson, of Mississippi.

Others to Compete.

Billy Dettweiler, Bob Albertus, Bill Waxter, Tommy Webb, C. Ashmead Fuller and Page Hufty are others of the better golfers entered. Wilmer Allison, first ranking tennis player in the country, also will compete.

M. Parker Nolan, former Congressional star, reported the lowest practice round with a 76. Harry Pitt, runner-up at Woodmont last week; J. W. Harvey and Miller Stevinson could do no better than a 79.

Additional entries and changes in starting times:

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 13.—"Speed" Warner, right-hander of the Franklin High team, Franklin, W. Va., allowed Pennsylvania Avenue High of this city only one hit in a seven-inning contest on the Locust Grove diamond here. He fanned 12 men. Franklin won, 8 to 3.

Polo Practice Begun.

Warrenton, Va., May 13.—Following the annual Horse Show at Stuyvesant School, the Riding Club has begun spring polo practice under direction of Howard C. Fair, of the Stuyvesant faculty.

Maryland U.'s Track Coach Gloomy

Eppley Sees Team Third in Conference Meet This Week-End.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

GEARY EPPLEY, University of Maryland's professor of farming, who also grows track teams on a little patch of Byrd Stadium allotted him, yesterday sized up his team's chances in the Southern Conference championships this week-end, and it wasn't a very large size he arrived at.

Mr. Eppley, in fact, looked upward as high as third place and was suddenly afflicted with short-sightedness. He may have seen second place, about that he is doubtful, but first place — the championship — was entirely beyond his vision. As he explained it, the good professor of farming is suffering from that dread disease commonly referred to as no-materialism, a malady that all coaches complain of at one time or another.

As Eppley explained the situation, Maryland will get its share of all first places, excepting the first place designating the championship. Messrs. Widmyer, Guckeyson, Slye, Headley, et al. will probably return home with plenty of bacon, but not the whole hog, or, if you prefer, the title.

Sees Widmyer Victor.

Widmyer, and you can take Eppley's word for it, will come busting home so far ahead of those boys in the century it won't even be funny. In the 220-yard dash the Earl may be pressed a bit, but not enough to keep him from pressing that old tape before the rest of them.

Guckeyson, and these are more of Mr. Eppley's thoughts, will be right in there chucking the javelin with the rest of the field, and very likely winning it, and Bill will make his presence felt in the discus, too. The lad is not going into the shot-putting, inasmuch as his coach believes the strenuous competition will be too tough to permit his entry in three events.

Mr. Eppley will have you understand that Guckeyson's victory over "Monk" Little last week-end was no fluke. The Maryland boy has been making between 190 and 200 feet all season, while the William and Mary representative isn't as consistent.

Plenty of Competition.

Maryland will try for points in the 440 and 880-yard runs, with Evans and Archer in the former, and Headley in the latter, and the three will be joined by Sonen in the mile relay. But Eppley figures they'll have all the competition they want—maybe too much—and he'll be satisfied with anything they get.

Summing up the meet, the good professor believes it will be North Carolina, Duke and Maryland, in the final analysis, with 45 points taking the title. He believes Maryland's capacity will be about 30. You can look to Williamson, of North Carolina, in the half mile and mile; Abernathy and Hawthorne, of the same school, and Everett, of Virginia, in the high hurdles; Evans, North Carolina, in the shot-put, and Zori in the discus, for some spectacular work.

FHA Nine Held Hitless, Bows in Frederick, 20-0

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 13.—Frederick Hustlers, semiprofessionals, easily defeated the Federal Housing Administration Team of Washington at McCurdy Field, 20 to 0. Frank Fraley, former Frederick Blue Ridge League hurler, held the visitors hitless and struck out seven.

Dr. Mackert to Speak At Soft-Ball Meeting

Dr. Charles L. Mackert, head of the physical education department of the University of Maryland, will be the principal speaker at a meeting to organize a Prince Georges County soft ball league Thursday night at 8 o'clock in the parish hall of Pinkney Memorial Episcopal Church, Hyattsville.

The league will be conducted under auspices of the Men's Club of Pinkney Memorial Church, Edward A. Fuller, president. Dr. Mackert is keen to give the loop all possible support.

Frosh Game Delayed.

A baseball game yesterday afternoon between Maryland freshmen and Georgetown freshmen on the Maryland diamond was called off because of the wet field. No date has been set for the contest. The Hoya yearlings downed the Old Line cubs earlier in the season on the Hilltop.

Piscatorially Speaking

By M. W. Meier.

THE fish had a hard time of it over the week-end. They were caught on all fronts—in fresh, salt and brackish water.

Scores of local anglers spent the week-end at Oregon Inlet, N. C.

One party, comprising four, offered irreproachable proof in the shape of 800 pounds of good-sized blues.

Another party, consisting of Ben Demit, R. S. Brooks and Robert Carter, all of the Potomac Electric Power Co., brought back 300 pounds of blues. They reported bad northeast winds kept them from tying into channel bass. The wind forced them to fish inside.

Other anglers report the school apparently will hit anything, so starved do they seem. One angler phoned in about a catch of 30 beauties, all over 5 pounds. "I could have caught many more but I was using a long trolling line and lost many strikes trying to reel them in."

Anglers who sought for quantity rather than quality report they trolled with short lines.

Sea Trout Running.

CAPT. W. A. H. G. MEARS, of Wachapreague, Va., says that plenty of sea trout are being caught offshore and that they are ranging up to 8 pounds. Many catches were made Sunday.

Nothing has been reported, so far, from Ocean City and it probably will be a week ere the fish start biting.

The Chesapeake provided much satisfactory sport over Sunday. Capt. Woodburn, of Solomons Island, found a great deal of fish for the crowd he had out. From the waters adjacent to Cobbs Island, many croakers were landed, as well as no end of small rock.

The Honga River and the mouth of the Patuxent also were productive of results—chiefly on hardhead or croakers. Masons Beach and North Beach were not so good, but a few reports indicated that some of the numerous anglers made good.

Weather Spells Finish.

THE rain and sudden change in temperature undoubtedly will slow up fishing for a few days until swollen, cloudy streams regain normalcy.

The approach of the moon to the full also will have an effect on one's luck. If you hope for decent catches, fish by night and sleep by day. As promised before, we will shortly give a report on an amazing survey which is now being made of the effect of moon and tide on saltwater fish.

What Are Your Theories?

H. F. SLOAT, of 7517 Fourteenth street, had a great deal to say yesterday that was of interest on the feeding habits of fish.

Just returned from Florida, where he enjoyed some excellent angling, he reported he had successfully tried out one of those fishing charts which are based on tide and moon. He is a firm believer in them and we have promised to procure one of them for republication here.

Mr. Sloat is one of those ardent anglers who like to turn out their own rods and lines. He makes all of his own sea lines, using No. 30 seine twine, three strands of which give him a line of some 27-pound tensile strength.

New Handbook Out.

WE can't refrain from offering congratulations to the Izaak Walton League for its excellent handbook just issued on local and nearby angling. The booklet contains 50 pages and should be in the possession of every fisherman.

The local chapter holds an open meeting the second Wednesday of every month at 8 p. m., Raleigh Hotel. Every other Monday it also holds a luncheon, 12:15 p. m., also at the Raleigh. Visitors are welcome.

V.P.I. Pounds 2 Hurlers To Trim Virginia, 11-7

Blacksburg, Va., May 13 (AP).—Virginia Tech batsmen today raked the offerings of Abbitt and Davidson, University of Virginia hurlers, for 10 hits and a total of 18 bases to defeat the Cavaliers, 11 to 7.

Three triples and two doubles featured the Tech barrage, which ran the Gobbler run total to 37 in the last three games. Joe Russell led the Tech batsmen with a triple and a pair of doubles.

Nayatt, R. I., May 13 (AP).—Joe and Willie Turnesa, oldest and youngest of the famous Elmsford (N. Y.) golfing brothers, today were among the five New England qualifiers for the National Open golf championship.

Alex Ellis, of Swampscott, Mass., topped the field of 45 with 76, 71—147. Ellis' second round was the only one made in par.

Willie Turnesa, a 19-year-old Holy Cross freshman and the only successful amateur in the test, finished a stroke behind Ellis, with 73, 75—148. Tom Mahan, of Beverly, Mass., and Dick May, of Providence, R. I., qualified with 150, and the three holders of the 152 cards, Joe Turnesa, George Easton, of Warwick, R. I., and Jack Ryan, of the Y

Premier Rails Lend Stocks Steady Tone

Con. Gas Off on Report of Competing Municipal Power Plant.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 13.—A mild rally in late dealings climaxed a rather aimless session in the stock market today. The tone was a little better than steady at the finish.

A few specialties, particularly in the chemical division, gained an active following at advances of one to several points, and the rail group received some favorable attention from the bull forces. Some high-priced carrier shares gained 1 to 3 points or so, but most improvement was fractional. Motors were active at small advances. During part of the day speculative sentiment had to contend with weakness in wheat and a generally soggy performance in other leading staples.

Consolidated Gas was under considerable pressure as the market digested news that Mayor La Guardia, of New York, was contemplating a $42,000,000 municipal power plant to compete with the company's facilities in an effort to force large rate reductions. The stock finished 1⅛ points off at 23⅜, after being as low as 23. Other utilities felt the force of sympathetic selling.

The generally rather uncertain market tone was accompanied by a distinct slowing up of the trading pace as compared with recent sessions. Turnover in the stock exchange was 1,124,120 shares.

Copious Rains Weaken Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 13.—Heavy and timely rains, highly beneficial for wheat crops, tumbled wheat down an extreme of 2 cents a bushel today to nearly season record low levels.

The new setbacks of prices took the wheat market to 11 cents under a high point reached April 22, and were despite the fact that the United States wheat visible supply today was the smallest since August 1927. Favorable crop comments regarding wheat, specially in central Kansas and in the spring wheat regions northwest, acted as much more than an offset for inflation talk.

Wheat closed weak, 1⅜ to 1¾ under Saturday's finish, July 92¼ to 92½, Corn ¾ cents off to ⅜ cents up, July 80⅛ to 80¼, oats ½ to ⅞ cents down and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to a rise of 2 cents.

Notwithstanding reports of delays to corn planting, both corn and oats prices averaged lower with wheat. All deliveries of rye plunged to new lows for the season. Strength of hog values upheld the provision market.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

IN launching the new efficiency rating system, Civil Service Commission calls to the attention of rating officers, reviewing officers and boards of review the necessity for considered judgments, intelligent action and mutual co-operation.

BAKER.

Uniformity is stressed in that "each rating and reviewing officer should always be conscious of the fact that the rating procedure is a co-operative enterprise in which all the rating and reviewing officers in the bureau participate; that the rating standards must be uniform throughout the bureau, and that consequently they can not be based on an acceptance of varying standards, each set up by a different division chief for his own division."

Report of the final ratings will be made by the board of review, determined by recording the appropriate adjective—excellent, very good, good, fair and unsatisfactory.

Upon completion of the report of final ratings, the current ratings will be open to inspection by any employe of the department, "under such conditions as to time and place as the head of the department may prescribe."

When an employe is subject to demotion to a lower position, or dismissal on account of a final rating of unsatisfactory, that fact will be shown in the notice.

Rules for eligibility for salary increases include:

"An employe attaining a final rating of 'excellent' or 'very good' is eligible for a salary increase within the grade to which his position is allocated if he is not already receiving the maximum pay rate of his grade.

"An employe attaining a final rating of 'good' is eligible for a salary increase up to, but not beyond, the middle salary rate of the grade to which his position is allocated, but if he is already receiving a salary higher than the middle rate of his grade, he is not subject to a salary reduction on that account."

Rules for salary reduction, demotions or dismissals will be given tomorrow.

All Alabamians in Government service are invited to attend the Cotton ball and reception tomorrow night at the Willard Hotel, given by the Alabama State Society. Hugh Grant, State Department, society president, urges all guests to wear cotton clothes.

COMING as a surprise to employes and officials alike, several thousand circulars were distributed at NRA yesterday, claiming a settlement has been reached in an "18-month fight" for regular hours. Since the organization of the NRA staff of more than 4,000 people, the office hours in Washington have been from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., with an hour for lunch.

Of course, particularly in the early days of NRA, overtime was more or less prevalent throughout the administration. Except for a small group of disgruntled agitators the NRA employes voluntarily and cheerfully worked overtime, feeling that they were performing a patriotic service. We find this spirit still prevails among the vast majority of NRA employes.

Bradish J. Carroll, jr., administrative assistant and chief clerk, said last night he could not understand what they (the authors of the circular) mean by an "18-month fight."

"There has never been," he declaired, "any question in my mind or any other official about a 7-hour day. This is the customary Government work-day in Washington."

Library of Congress independent baseball team is seeking an opponent for a game Sunday. Contact Hirst Milhollen (F), Fine Arts Division, for arrangements.

Indians Move Again.

If you want to see anybody in Construction Section, Office of Indian Affairs, just hail the first moving van you see passing and page your person. The section began moving yesterday from the Hurley Wright Building to the Court of Claims Building at Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, the fourth shift in 18 months.

In November, 1933, the section moved from Interior Building to Tempo F. The second move was in April last year from Tempo F to the new Post Office Building. Three months later the section was ousted from Post Office and went to the Hurley Wright Building.

Members of the Federation of of Architects, Chemists and Technicians will hear an address on "A National Program for Housing," by Miss Catherine Bauer, of Pennsylvania, at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the music hall of Central High School.

Justice Postettes.

Mrs. Stanley Frazier, of New York, was the guest of honor at a dinner party given by a group of employes of Identification Division at the Army and Navy Country Club. Mrs. Fraizier was formerly employed in that division and the New York City Field Office of the Bureau of Investigation.

Miss Mary C. McWhirt is in Providence Hospital recuperating from an appendectomy. Charles Carr is confined to his home by illnes. Mrs. Grace A. Johnson enjoyed the week-end with her parents in Frederick, Md. Howard Fletcher is recuperating from an extended illness and expects to return to work early this week.

Robert Sutton (F), Government Printing Office; John Hebrew, FERA, and Miss Miriam Stackhouse, Transient Bureau; assisted in presenting "The Meddlesome Maid," at the Brookland M. E. Church recently. The Brookland thespians have been urged to repeat the farce for other church groups.

Diary Guest Tickets.

I F F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor, today, between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Earl Carroll's Vanities; screen, Charles Butterworth, in "Baby Face Harrington"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Frederic March and Charles Laughton in "Les Miserables"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (second week of Lionel Barrymore, Bela Lugosi and Elizabeth Allan, in "Mark of the Vampire").

To The People.

When industry booms and salaries soar;
When contentment reigns from shore to shore;
The Government worker the people deplore.

When gloom is painted on every wall;
The Government worker is the envy of all.

Now, with conditions improving and prospects fair;
We implore the people to show us due care.
Write to your Senator and Congressman, too,
To extend our leave. God bless you.

M. L. W. (F),
General Accounting Office.

The Women's Union of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing will hold a theater party at the National Theater tonight for the benefit of the sick fund of the union.

THE annual meeting of the District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employes Unions will be held Thursday night at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest. The meeting was previously announced for tomorrow night. The following delegates from Local No. 2 will be inducted into office:

President Joseph Stansfield, Interstate Commerce Commission; William E. Sanger, Commerce; Henry G. Nolda, Veterans Administration; Archie C. Edwards, Agriculture; Elmer Thompson, Agriculture, and Mrs. Rebekah Pedigo, Interior. With the exception of Mrs. Pedigo, all are reelected. Mrs. Pedigo formerly represented the War Department Union, No. 261, at federation meetings.

Three alternates also were named: Albert M. Reising, Interior; Miss Lottie L. Anderson, Forest Service, and Miss Mary O'Donnell, Agriculture.

Eight delegates to the national N. F. F. E. convention at Yellowstone Park this summer have been nominated by the board of representatives of Local No. 2:

Charles A. Ketcham, Marine Corps, Navy; Ulrey J. Biller, national vice president; John L. Bateman, General Accounting Office; Robert W. Cushman, Library of Congress; Dr. Howard A. Elson, Agriculture, and Miss Anderson, Mr. Nolda and Mr. Stansfield.

The board of representatives has adopted a resolution pointing out the need for additional recreational and ahtletic facilities for the District, particularly in view of the heavy influx of Federal workers during the past two years. Already N. F. F. E. members at Agriculture, led by A. C. Edwards, have aided in the formation of a department athletic and recreation association. In other Government offices increased interest in such activity is reported, but this means the present facilities will be taxed further, according to Local No. 2.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

IN the Mozambique Channel Isles all the weary, thirsty traveler need do for water, in case he is not near a natural supply, is go looking for a good turtle. The "walking wells," like camels, carry and extra supply for their long jaunts into the jungle. They stock up well before setting out in quest of food on trips that often last for days on end.

The turtle has sufficient room in a cavity beneath the enormous shell for several quarts of water. By tracking the animal a thirsty traveler can find a ready supply of water by opening the cavity. Reports state that the taste of the liquid is nothing to brag about, but that's a matter of small importance when a drink is really necessary.

Beetles seem to make food out of almost everything. Some dote on tobacco, others even eat poison, but not the least annoying to man, and Australian tailors in particular, is the button beetle. These tiny creatures relish nothing more for a tasty meal than a nice assortment of vegetable ivory buttons. Tailors assert that the pests not only appear to select buttons that have been sewed onto garments, but do not hesitate to pass on to a brand new button after one has been damaged beyond use.

Strange to the modern motorist who in traffic is often told "to step on it or get that crate off the road" so were old-timers told to stay under four miles an hour or stay home. Early automobiles were no more popular in England than in some other sections and one law enacted went so far as to require that the newfangled, power-driven vehicles could appear on the public highways only when preceded by a walking man carrying a red flag.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—A cheerful session wherein prices were firm on good buying marked the starting of the new account on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities, transatlantic issues, oil and industrial shares, especially aviation stocks, advanced. Gold mining shares recovered from an early weakness, while rubber issues were easier. The market closed firm.

Paris—Prices held steady on the bourse today with moderate trading and apparently little influenced by yesterday's municipal elections. Three per cent rentes remained unchanged while the 4½s registered a slight decline. The pound sterling showed an improvement, and the market closed steady.

Berlin—Trading opened actively on the boerse today, but realizations wiped out part of early gains. The closing was sustained.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, May 13 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—Domestic wool quotations in Boston were much firmer than a week ago. Sales to mills have been unusually heavy in the past two weeks, and this increased movement has changed the situation from a buyers to a sellers market. Average prices strengthened further in late sales last week as offerings at prices on the low side of ranges quoted a week ago became restricted, and prices on the high side of ranges were paid more freely.

B. & O.'s Capitol Limited Marks 12th Birthday

Baltimore, May 13.—The twelfth anniversary of the Capitol Limited of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, which operates between New York, Washington and Chicago, will be observed today.

Today marks its 8,755th trip, and counting the trains mileage in both directions, it has traveled more than 17,000,000 miles with a 12-year on-time record of 93.01 per cent.

Tech's Track Outlook Bad, Says Coach

Saturday Meet Anybody's, Asserts Hardell; Sees Tough Battle.

EVERYBODY thought "Tech's the tops" would be the theme song of Saturday's Central "C" Club track and field meet—the biggest, incidentally, in its 17-year-old history—until Coach Hap Hardell, who has made Tech the tops, began injecting a few sad notes into the music yesterday.

Within a few minutes — coach had the whole works revised into a funeral march as he reeled off one doleful observation after another about the strength of Newport News High, John Marshall High, of Richmond, Staunton Military and Episcopal, all of whom Tech beat last year by from 40 to 50 points. It seems Coach Hardell had been scanning the results of some of the recent Virginia meets.

"No," said the little man who last year produced the strongest team in interhigh history, so strong that it ran away with the "C" club meet. "No, it is anybody's meet this year. Newport News, John Marshall and Episcopal all will give us a lot of trouble. All of them have men we can't touch.

Star High Jumper.

"Newport News has a high jumper who can jump 6 feet, and a javelin thrower who can throw 175 feet. Hoxton, of Episcopal, is all the class in the 440 and a lot of the class in the 220. Remember, too, that a meet with 20 schools it isn't like a dual meet.

"Oh," he added with a big burst of optimism, "we might eke out a victory. We might eke out, but it will be a tough fight."

Comparison of some of the meet results of the past month show that about four 10-second men will be racing in the 100-yard dash. Hopkins, of John Marshall, the chief source of worry to Coach Hardell, and Shaver, of Newport News; Baetzer, of Gilman, and Watson, of Staunton, all figure to be easily in the class of Tech's George Bogan, with Hopkins having the most impressive record.

Bogan did 10 seconds against the Navy Plebes Saturday, but Coach Hardell explains that the wind was with him. The 10-second performance of Lee Fones, of Alexandria High, is explained the same way. But Hopkins' numerous 10-second achievements have been with or against the wind.

Little Mile Power.

Tech will have little strength in the mile, in which event it lost all three places Saturday and also has no javelin throwers. Coach Hardell points out. Newport News, on the other hand, has a lad named Helmer who has been throwing between 170 and 175 feet, and Paul Shu, of Alexandria, has hit 166 feet.

Despite the speed of LeRoy Green and Byron Hayden, Tech's two ace quarter-milers, Coach Hardell does not figure that either is fast enough to haul down the flying Hoxton. Bunsa, of Staunton, has been doing the half mile in 2:05, which is 5 or 6 seconds faster than the best Green can do for Tech.

Tech's strength in the hurdles and the relays is the chief hope of the coach to offset its weakness in the other events. In the high jump, he points out, Miller, of Eastern, and others are stronger than his best. While Todd, of John Marshall, with his vaults of 11 feet 6 inches, and Jackson, of Augusta Military, with 11 feet 7 inches, figure to shut Tech out of points in those classes.

Mt. Vernon Is Trimmed By Calvary M. E. Nine

Displaying a timely batting attack, Calvary M. E. Church defeated the Mount Vernon M. E. team, 5 to 2, yesterday as the Washington Church League launched its tenth season on No. 9 diamond. The loop formerly operated as the Georgetown Church League.

The Rev. Clifford H. Pope, pastor of the Ninth Street Christian Church, tossed out the first ball. Harris' hitting was a big factor in Calvary's triumph. Loveless turned in a fine pitching performance, especially in the pinches.

LEE—In sad but loving remembrance of our dear husband and father, WILLIAM C. LEE, who departed this life one year ago today, May 14, 1934.
One year has passed, dear father, since you were called away.
How well do we remember that sad and early day,
You suffered hours of pain.
We waited for cure, but all in vain, for God alone knew what was best.
He called you home to give you rest.
No one knows how we miss you. The voice we love is still.
A place in our home no one but you can ever fill.
YOUR LOVING WIFE AN CHILDREN.

EVERY FAMILY NEEDS A
2ND CAR

The EXTRA CAR that does most of the "running around" . . .
A "second car" is most essential and a matter of great convenience—actually a necessity in a big family. When the New Car goes down town the "second car" stays at home for a run to the golf course, or to do the shopping, or bring the children from school—the EXTRA CAR makes the quick trips.

YOUR "SECOND CAR" should be a "TMC BETTER CONDITIONED CAR."

Our Own SEC Report.

("The SEC made public today another list of corporation officials' salaries and their stock holdings as required under the new law."—News item.)

Federated Butter Tub Corporation, Newark, N. J.: The president, J. Wilmer Butts, got $35,500, two cartons of cigarettes and a new mahogany office desk with specially upholstered chair. The corporation also increased his stenographer's salary $4 a week, put in a new telephone and allowed him $27.98 for typewriter ribbons. Vice President Jarvis Ergg was paid $15,500 in salary and allowed $3.80 for a dinner sent in from a corner restaurant while working overtime.

* * * *

United States Floor Plug Co., New York, N. Y.: Salary paid to the president, Otis Teeves, $14,550, all by check with the exception of four I. O. U's for a total of $6.75. The corporation also voted Mr. Teeves a new straw hat. Gregory Gluck, chairman of the board, was paid $10,032.10. The $32.10 was for a new tire on the back of the car he used for company business.

* * * *

General Sponge Corporation, Chicago, Ill.: Salary paid to Hudson Quinch, president, was $25,000, out of which Mr. Quinch managed to pay all his income taxes, buy two new suits, paper the living room of his country home, and get a hair cut. The corporation has no vice president, but will get one if the SEC insists.

* * * *

Great Eastern Fishhooks Co., Inc., Boston, Mass.—Harold W. Pushbutton, president; Dodson P. Hammerhead, treasurer, and Hilary Kluck, chairman of the board, each received $17,500 in salary. Mr. Pushbutton was also given a larger office and $11 for a new office rug and a pencil sharpener. Mr. Hammerhead drew $14.55 during the year for paper cups, pen wipers and laundry. Mr. Kluck drew $4.10 for shoe shines.

* * * *

Amalgamated Silkworm Reconditioning Corporation, St. Louis, Mo.—President Arthur W. Tillermott was paid $26,000 for the last fiscal year. $1,000 of this was owed him from last year. He also received from the corporation a quart of scotch, a pair of red mittens, three Christmas neckties and two tickets to the circus.

Oh Chester! I'm Josephine, your sister.
What, Josephine! Yes yes... I know you now. And this girl.... your daughter, my niece? Hum! Hum!

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Big frog battle of the century is raging. Says Columbia: "Fie! Fie! The Columbia Broadcasting System wishes at this time to denounce a certain so-called frog-jumping contest to be held in New York City on May 19 as a fraud, a hide-bound hyprocricy, an offense against the frog-leg industry and a mess . . . Shame on that bunch of stations that make a sham and a pretense of American life by claiming they are going to broadcast a frog-jumping contest. And shame on Graham McNamee, too." (Note: CBS broadcast is on Saturday at Angels Camp, California, site of original jumping.)

Says NBC: "A description of the First Great Frog Derby, featuring the largest conglomeration of genuine, blue-blooded bull frogs . . . will be broadcast exclusively over NBC-WEAF network at 1:30 p. m. Sunday, May 19, from the modern frog track in the Mall of New York's Central Park. The tergiversatingly tempered efforts of several unidentified radio stations to confuse this mammoth event, this Kentucky Derby of Frogland, this World Series of the swamps, with a minor league . . . being staged by a few picayune unpedigreed polliwogs on a sand-lot track somewhere in a California desert, has aroused the Mark Twain Centennal Committee and the New York Park Department to drastic action."

There's a lot more, louder and not much funnier. But fie! fie! and shame on both networks for such unseemly behavior.

Culbertson On Bridge

Two Fair Exchanges.

The tendency for taking immediate tricks is never strongly prevalent among the expert players. They plan their campaign with the opening lead and to the tyro the web and woof of their scheme appears to be a crazy quilt of many colors totally lacking in symmetry.

A good declarer knows where and when he wants the adverse leads. He plots the play to bring this to pass. The loss of a trick may be needed to gain two or he may deliberately trump his own top cards to get the lead in the proper hand or reduce his trumps to the level of those held in an opposing hand. As in chess, he may give away a piece to gain a better fighting position.

Drawing the Enemy's Fire.

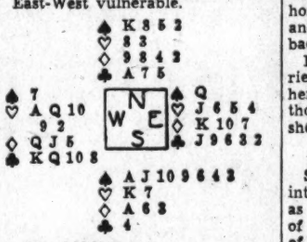
West, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♡	Pass	2♡	2♠
3♡	3♠	Pass	4♠
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

West's double of four spades was somewhat speculative for East's raise did not promise any particular honor-trick values. East's pass of the double was correct; he had bid as weakly as possible and yet held a King that promised a defensive trick.

West opened the King of Clubs. How would you, as declarer, plan the play?

There are four obvious losers: Two in each red suit. If West can be stripped of trumps, the North-South hands stripped of clubs, and West put in the lead through diamonds, he may be forced to lead a heart up to declarer's King.

But what are the chances for this line of play? The opponents will certainly resist the obvious try for a throw-in. If East holds any diamond honor, he will surely be let in the lead, and of course once East is in he will spoil the party with a heart lead.

Declarer found a very beautiful plan with great probability of success. The first move was to duck the opening lead even though South held a singleton. East played the nine-spot to encourage a continuation. West continued with the Queen of clubs, and declarer executed the second move, which was to duck the second club, as well!

The point of declarer's play was that he chose to try to establish a long diamond rather than a heart trick. The concession of two club tricks was no loss since it was a simple exchange for the otherwise inevitable two diamond losers. Of course, South discarded a diamond on the second club, and his remaining small diamond was destined to go off on the club Ace. He now threatened to ruff two diamonds in his own hand after unblocking the suit, utilizing dummy's three trump entries for diamond leads and to get back to the thirteenth diamond should it clear.

Declarer's plan was superior because the chance of an even split in diamonds was certainly better than the chance of executing a throw-in to force a heart lead from West. His plan had the added chance that by leaving West in the lead twice it gave him an opportunity to make the mistake of opening the hearts voluntarily.

The Game of Life

By Priscilla Wayne.

Against her mother's advice, Ellen Mallory gives up a promising careers as a tennis player to marry Mike Dale. She is burdened by family debts, and although Mike does not want her to, she works in a real estate office to pay them off. Mike starts taking Marjory Hutton driving and Ellen is worried.

THE night was not especially cold—even for late fall. Ellen decided to wait in the car. Fortunately it was unlocked there at the curb and she got in.

The ignition key was in its place. Why not a little ride? It would make the time pass more quickly while she waited. Mike could scarcely be expected back for some time yet. It was just the dinner hour.

Ellen slid over into the driver's seat. She opened the window slightly. It was a relief to feel the cool air fanning her cheeks.

As she drove her worries seemed to be lifting from her. A dozen miles from town, at Pete's chicken shack, she came to a quick decision and parked the car. The crisp night air had given her an appetite. She regretted the dinner she had left untouched at home. As well have a sandwich and a cup of coffee, then turn back home.

Probably Michael would be worried about his car, if not about her. She regretted that she hadn't thought to tell the night man that she was taking the car.

Must Make Decision.

She slipped the key of the car into her pocket, felt almost happy as she entered the dim warmness of Pete's Chicken Shack. A cup of coffee would be a bracer. She'd certainly felt low in her mind. But she had come, in that night ride, to a definite decision. She would ask Michael what he wanted to do. They must put their marriage back on the old comradely basis—or she, for one, could not go on.

Afterward Ellen wondered what evil fate, what foreboding of unhappiness had guided her footsteps to that place.

For there was no need to ask Michael.

As she passed the first little booth in Pete's Chicken Shack she saw her husband. He was sitting opposite Marjorie Hutton. They were leaning forward, their heads close together as they talked earnestly.

With a start, Michael saw his wife—saw her thin face grow suddenly white. He rose hastily leaving Marjorie with an abruptness that startled and angered her. "Ellen," Mike said, reaching out imploring hands.

Ellen wanted to turn and flee. To her the very end of the world had come—finding her husband with Marjorie Hutton. Yes, it was the end of the world.

Pride would not permit Ellen to show Michael how hurt, how broken she was.

"Please don't try to explain, Michael," she said slowly. "Really, there isn't any explanation you need to give." Her stricken young eyes traversed Marjorie Hutton there at the table in her becoming knitted dress, her rich coat spread on the back of the seat behind her.

"No, Michael," Ellen repeated, "there isn't any explanation that you can give."

Afterward Ellen wondered how she had been able to drive the little car back to town. But she had managed, somehow, even though she drove through a mist of tears.

Wouldn't Go Back.

She left the car in front of the garage. Not for worlds would she have gone back to the little house. Somehow the little house already seemed part of a tender existence that had passed—forever. There was only one place left to go—her old home.

Mamma was sitting up, reading a novel when Ellen came in. She glanced up when Ellen entered, sensed the situation through shrewd eyes. Determined not to say too much. A little, perhaps—but just the cautious, right things that would advance her own viewpoint. "Well, Ellen, you're home."

"I'm home." Just that. Ellen tossed her hat and coat listlessly on a chair. "Mind if I go back to my old room tonight? Perhaps just for tonight." Already she was searching for a way to forgive Michael—any little loophole. She loved Michael Dale with all her heart. Life could never be happy again without him.

Mother Was Tactless.

"When you know the whole story," mamma said tactlessly, "perhaps you'll stay longer than tonight. I suppose you've caught Michael—out with that woman."

Ellen nodded. It wasn't a subject she cared to discuss. But as well have it over with.

"Well, at last you've wakened to what the whole town knew ahead of you. It's been the talk of the town—the way that girl has chased Michael."

Ellen caught desperately to that word "chased." "I—I guess, mamma, that she's been pretending she wanted to buy a car."

"Fiddlesticks. Well, Mike needn't have fallen for that old gag. The selling of one car wouldn't take ride after ride, would it? Take it from me, Michael Dale was perfectly willing to show the car. Don't think that he wasn't. I hope now, Ellen, that you've come to your senses. I hope you're going into court and divorce Mike.

"Don't argue about it tonight," when Ellen, white lipped, would have protested, "Just let it drift for a few days. Next week will be time enough to file. Go to bed now and try to rest. You'll come to the right decision eventually. Tonight will be the hardest. Try to sleep."

But sleep did not come to Ellen. Alone in her own little girlhood room she tossed about, trying to sleep, yet knowing that she must decide this bitterest step of all her life.

Perhaps if Aunt Ellen had not come in and behind closed doors and closely shaded windows tried to reason with Ellen the young wife might have guessed that the telephone receiver, cleverly left off the hook by mamma, kept desperate Michael from communicating with her.

Back in the little home, Michael, white faced, miserable, put the receiver back on its hook desperately. The special operator had reported. "There seems to be some trouble on that line, sir. It is out of order."

Mother Hated Him.

The house was dark when he drove around it several times, trying to get up his nerve to go in and awaken them and demand to talk with Ellen.

But that would do no good, he reflected bitterly. Mamma had always hated him. She would do everything in her power to prevent an understanding with Ellen, Michael knew that.

His convictions were confirmed early the next morning when mamma met him at the door. "She's sleeping," mamma said, without even waiting for him to ask the question and she held the door open just enough to talk but not enough for her son-in-law to wedge in. "She doesn't want to see you."

"I'd rather she told me that herself," Michael said, white lipped.

Must Seek Divorce.

Mamma's gaze upon her son-in-law was acid. "Well, she'll tell you soon enough. Make no mistake about that. She's going to divorce you, Michael Dale. She's come to her senses at last."

Mamma closed the door firmly. "That's that," she told herself with deep satisfaction and then she dialed the Benson telephone.

"Ellen is sick," she told Mrs. Benson. "She won't be able to come down today."

"Well, that's too bad." Mrs. Benson was very fond of Ellen, and truly sympathetic. "Tell her just to take it easy for a day or two. Things are kinda quiet here at the office, anyway. It's lucky she got sick just when we were having a breathing spell."

"No more tired, let-down feeling for me"

"I reasoned that my red blood corpuscle strength was low and I simply took a course of S.S.S. Tonic and built it back."

IT is all so simple and reasonable. If your physical let-down is caused by lowered red blood corpuscles—which is all too frequent—then S.S.S. Tonic is waiting to help you . . . and will, unless you have a serious organic trouble that demands a physician or surgeon.

Remember, S.S.S. is not just a so-called "tonic." It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying red corpuscles in the blood.

This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved . . . food is better utilized . . . and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should naturally.

You may have the will-power to be "up and doing" but unless your blood is in top notch form you are not fully yourself and you may remark, "I wonder why I tire so easily."

Let S.S.S. help build back your blood tone . . . if your case is not exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetising food . . . sound sleep . . . steady nerves . . . a good complexion . . . and renewed strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes. The $1 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today.

MORNING, NOON AND NIGHT THIS SMART SHIRT LOOKS RIGHT

The Hecht Co. Presents

Manhattan

SHIRTS . . . with

Manhattanized

COLLAR ATTACHED

There is more truth than poetry in the above. For the clever new Manhattan shirt with the Manhattanized collar is something really significant in the development of fine shirts. Manhattanized means that the collar is soft but looks stiff, that it keeps a smart appearance all day long, that no starch is used, and that it will not wilt or wrinkle. Plain white broadcloth, white on white broadcloth, and blue, tan and gray end-to-end madras.
